AFFAIRS IN KANSAS.

Governor Robinson's Reasons for Resigning—His Statements before the Topeka Free-State Convention—Schuyler's Attack upon Him—The Free-State Organization—Miscellaneous Territorial News.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

TOPEKA, Thursday, March 12, 1857.

The Free State Convention, which assembled in this city on Tuesday, held an evening session on that day, at which Governor ROBINSON, in obedience to a call of the Convention, gave his reasons for the resignation of the Governorship. As he came forward he was greeted with loud applause. He said he was thankful for the opportunity of giving his reasons for the course he took in January last. He had no confidants, and felt that when he was among the Free-State men he was with his own family, and was always willing to answer any question having reference to his conduct as a member of the Free-State Party. His explanation was perfectly satisfactory to the delegates, who manifested their satisfaction. The Governor was loudly and frequently cheered during his speech. Soon after taking his seat, one SCHUYLER, of Council City, a personal enemy of the Governor, took occasion to disturb the harmony of the Convention by divesting "the venom of his spleen" in the most abusive and personal remarks, denouncing ROBINSON in bitter terms, accusing him of many crimes for "deserting the Free State Party," for his absence at the meeting of the Legislature in January, &c.

The Convention manifested its disapprobation of SCHUYLER's course by calling him to order, but to the earnest solicitation of the person assailed, the ejectments were withdrawn and SCHUYLER allowed to proceed. At the conclusion, he was greeted with unmistakable signs of the disapproval and contempt of the Convention. The Governor arose and stated that he did not intend a reply to the remarks that had been made by the gentleman, accusing him of various offences for absence at the time the Legislature was convened. "He would only ask where the gentleman himself was on the 4th of March, when the duties of his office required his attendance at Topeka?" "He did not care; he only wished to say that it would not do for the pot to call the kettle black." SCHUYLER was taken by surprise, he did not expect to be asked such important questions. It brought down the house, and they did the loudest kind of cheering.

C. M. MILES MOORE, of Leavenworth, while SCHUYLER was making his attack, objected to the personalities indulged in, and stated that in January he felt that Governor ROBINSON had done wrong for contemplating a resignation of his office at a critical time in our history, and so stated at the time, but with the explanation of the Governor he was perfectly satisfied, and he should call the gentleman from Council City to order. But at the request of ROBINSON, Mr. MOORE withdrew his objections, and SCHUYLER continued to "pitch in," and incurred the contempt of the Convention by so doing.

FREE STATE ORGANIZATION.

Considerable discussion was had on the expediency of perfecting the present State organization. Gov. ROBINSON was in favor of having the Legislative Assembly meet in June next, and proceed to enact a code of laws, to incorporate towns, and all things necessary to secure the perfection of the State Government. He considered it absolutely necessary to retain the Topeka Constitution and never give it up. He stated that the Free-State Constitutional Convention would not only adopt a Constitution for Kansas, but it would create a State Government, and put it into active operation, without delay, and was desirous of having our free State Government to put in force in opposition to it. The remarks of the Governor were marked with a high-toned manliness of character, and received with great favor. The best of feeling, and the greatest unanimity of sentiment in regard to our duties, seemed to prevail in the convention.

Gov. ROBINSON's influence is greater in Kansas than that of any other person. He has gained the confidence of the people by an independent course, and he will retain it, in spite of those whose envy makes them dishonest and foolish.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A terrible calamity happened in Lawrence on Wednesday evening. About 7 o'clock, Mr. E. D. LYMAN, formerly of Southampton, Massachusetts, left the city in company with a neighbor, for his cabin, about two miles distant, at the door of which they parted, and Mr. LYMAN went into his house, and after making a fire, retired to sleep, but before 9 o'clock he was awakened by flames, to find his house on fire. He broke through a window, and ran a half mile to a house of a neighbor, where he was properly cared for. He was burned most horribly, and died this morning.

The navigation of the Missouri river commenced this season much earlier than was expected by our people. Soon after the removal of the ice from that thoroughfare, steamers began to arrive at Quindaro and Leavenworth, loaded with emigrants from the East, who have come here to settle, and to identify themselves with the interests and trials of Kansas. Several boats have already arrived from St. Louis each one bringing from one to three hundred passengers, who have scattered over the Territory, and made settlements in the different localities. The most of those who have already made their appearance here are from the northwestern States. Several families have come among us by the overland route through the State of Missouri or Nebraska Territory, which is more expensive and inconvenient than to come up the river.

The prospect of comparative peace during the Spring and Summer, and a large emigration from the East, is increasing the valuation of real estate at an unprecedented rate in the history of new States. City lots and farm claims find ready sale at good prices; money seems to be plenty, and of less value than the soil upon which we tread. SIGMA.

Governor Robinson's Speech at the Free State Convention in Kansas.

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN: It affords me no little pleasure to have this opportunity of satisfying my friends and the people as to the motives which have actuated my political course. I am confident that I shall always be able to give my reasons for the course I pursue.

After my return from the East, where I had gone after my liberation for the purpose of inquiring into our business and position abroad, I was greatly exercised with regard to the course we should take here in Kansas on the defeat of our friends, the Republicans. Some in the States thought that all would be lost, having no remaining hope in the succeeding administration of Mr. BUCHANAN. Others said that the Fremont party would come to Kansas, and send such an emigration here as would insure our ultimate success against all the efforts of our enemies. I was satisfied myself that a large emigration would come in the Fall, and early in the coming Spring, from the Free States.

I looked about here on my return, carefully examined into the condition of things relating to our welfare, with Governor GEARY and many others, among whom were some of our principal and earnest men, and learned their views, as well as I could, upon the policy to be pursued. Governor GEARY made many great promises; he talked well, he talked long and fast, and he still talks much.

I asked him if he thought there was any way in which the Topeka Constitution could get into the Union? He seemed to think it might by a resubmission to the people, or at furthest, in addition to this, a new election of the State officers. He thought BUCHANAN would be glad to get out of the difficulty in that way, rather than risk the peace of his Administration by allowing the question to go on unsettled.

Now, if one could succeed in such a way, I was willing to permit by it, if we could not gain an admission without it. At any rate, I should not refuse to accept such a proposition on behalf of the Government. I desired to bring all my powers to the aid of our cause and our Constitution, and their success in some way. It is well known that all manner of charges had been heaped upon me by our enemies, such as those of being an Abolitionist, a disunionist, and many others, which caused me to be looked upon with a great deal of hatred by the Democratic Party. In fact I may say that I was probably more unpopular with that party than any other man in the country. On this account I thought there would be less of a barrier in the way of this, if I were not at the head of the State Government. This was the great reason for offering to resign the office I then held.

But there was an additional cause for that step. I believed that my efforts would be looked upon as more disinterested when laboring in the capacity of a private citizen. It could not then be said that I was laboring to make an empty office a profitable one by the sanction which I sought of the Government. When I first saw the proceedings of the meeting held here during the January session of the Legislature, it seemed to me that no one knew anything of these reasons or my motives. Further, I was not aware that there was any Kansas man at Washington to represent to Congress or the Administration the rights and wants of our people; nor it was generally understood that neither LANE nor ROBINSON would go there without danger of arrest by the Marshal, under process for treason.

As long as four weeks previous to my writing my letter of resignation, I had a conversation with Lieutenant-Governor ROBERTS, who promised to be here without fail on the meeting of the Legislature, and that he would act as Governor in my absence, for I told him that I should go East upon business of importance to the cause, which I have already explained. And, although I did not inform him that I would certainly resign, yet I gave him to understand that I thought of doing so. He well knew that I would be absent at all events. Many others were aware of the facts. Before leaving I sent him a note, asking him to lay my resignation before the Legislature.

At Washington I found the Senate impracticable. I merely wished the Territorial Legislature to repeal a few of the more odious of the enactments, and compel us to submit to the others—though made, as they had been, by foreign invaders, without our consent. I found that all was a matter of party pride—that they were determined to regard our affairs as though everything had been regular. Our friends in the House promised to do all in their power to procure the entire repeal of all the laws. They said the House would pass a bill declaring them all null and void, and ordering a new election for a Territorial Legislature under a law of its own. They thought the Senate would strike out the repeal and finally pass the election law. The House would then pass it as it came from the Senate. In this, I suppose, we have been disappointed. I will admit, if you choose, that have accomplished nothing. But I earnestly tried to accomplish something, and I have failed—not because of any unwillingness on my part. I believed that my course was the best one that could be taken.

I have not, and will show you so before leaving, abandoned our organization. On the contrary, I believe it is our only hope. When we framed this constitution something of the kind was necessary, to keep together our party, and as a basis for the securing of our rights. But we have never yet perfected that organization as we should have done. A government had been established among us by a people foreign to our soil, and it was essential for us to establish some means of self protection from the tyranny which was hanging over us. These things are so yet. There is no hope from the territorial Legislature. They have taken, and still retain everything in their own hands, and have, consequently, increased in power. You will find that they have not taken all this trouble for nothing. And as the same reasons which induced us to take our position in the beginning remain, as the same circumstances still exist, why should we not maintain our position?

Now, the Pro-Slavery Party is about getting up a Constitution also. They will not hesitate to perfect an organization also. Their purpose is, undoubtedly, to set a State Government in motion as soon as possible, with STRINGFELLOW or ATCHISON as Governor, and continue it either in or out of the Union. If one is allowed to die, all will then be lost. The House of Representatives have since passed a bill, admitting it. We are half way out of the wood now. But if we neglect to reelect a State Legislature next August, our Constitution will eventually die, for all the offices under it will become vacant, and there would be no means of again filling them. Then, what is there to prevent the admission of the other. In such a case, that would have no competition. And although we do not participate in the formation of theirs, we yet can have no means of showing this, and of proving it to be a mere party movement, except by voting under and for our own. This will show our strength.

The Legislature should meet again in June, and enact an election law for the August election. It should also organize the State into counties and townships, establish Courts, and provide for the election of all the officers necessary to perfect the government and have it ready to go into operation at any moment. And it should be seen that we have it in operation a little in advance of our enemies. For a few months we could thus have the whole State, or at least all lying South of the Kansas River, thoroughly organized, unless perhaps it would be a little corner hole down here called Lecompton.

There would be no one to prevent this, for the people would all be with us, and the people have a right to rule themselves. And it would be the business of no one else if we did so. The Territorial and even the Federal officers would themselves be compelled to recognize us. Suppose the commander of the military department had business with the people of a certain town, which had been chartered and organized under our laws—he would call upon the Mayor—caring for none but the officers recognized by the people. There is there any necessity to create any trouble in getting our Government into operation—all can be accomplished without action, for there would be no objection on the part of the people. Difficulties between Free State men would be taken into our own Courts and settled, and Congress or the President could no more prevent it than they could a mere arbitration.

With such a government in active operation, supported by an immense majority of the people, who would object to our admission into the Union? I tell you the first one organized, if kept up, will be the one admitted; nothing on earth can prevent it. The President will not dare again to oppose it with the army, for he has backed out of the dispersion of the Legislature last July, and thrown the whole blame upon Col. SUMNER. Besides, if he interfered with ours, we must also interfere, for it would have no more rights than we, until admitted into the Union, and that would create another howl.

There is no law of Congress which allows the Territorial Government any power to form a State. In Michigan the territorial government got up a Constitution for a State and was refused admission. The people formed one also, but in the same way in which we have, and were admitted. So with California. I was there with Gov. GEARY. Before the acquisition of that State the people were under the old Mexican Government. A new one was formed by the people, and when once perfected, nothing more was ever heard of the old one. Congress never can and never will compel a State to change its Constitution. No attempt will be made to stop us except by a legal process—and all such we should carry up to the Supreme Court, and before a decision could be got there we would be in the Union. What then would be the need?

All that is necessary for us to do is to keep aloof from the doings of the bogus Legislature and keep up our own. Gov. GEARY, in his veto message, said that if we do not vote we must submit to those who do. We must vote and do so apart from and repudiate the affairs of the Territorial Legislature. In this way we can test our strength, and yet make no acknowledgment to their tyranny.

You now have my reasons for my course, which has been so much misunderstood, as well as my views of future policy. I do not blame you for condemning it without a knowledge of the facts, as I have given them. I should have felt just so myself. I may have erred in judgment—I probably have; I am fallible, as all men are—I am very fallible. But it has always been my highest endeavor to serve the cause of Kansas, to labor for her freedom.

Gentlemen, I thank you for the kindness in which you have heard me.

DESPERATE AND FATAL FIGHT AT WINSTON, MD.—I now hasten to give you an account of quite a tragical affair that happened on the night of the 27th of this month. It seems that the son of PHILIP PENDLETON, of this county, and a young man by the name of DRAIN from Chicago, had some misunderstanding, which resulted in DRAIN's challenging young PENDLETON. He accepted the challenge and chose for weapons bowie-knives. They nailed themselves down to a two-inch oak plank by the pants and fought until DRAIN was mortally wounded. Young PENDLETON was cut nearly in pieces, and is now lying in a critical condition. Part of PENDLETON's knife is still in DRAIN's head. There is no hopes of his recovery. The Doctor thinks they will both die.—Cor. Baltimore Argus.

THE WAGON-ROADS TO CALIFORNIA—ROUTES TO BE PURSUED—SOUTHERN BOUNDARY OF KANSAS—THE KANSAS APPOINTMENTS, ETC.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, March 31.

Of the three wagon roads provided for by the act of the last Congress, that lying between Fort Defiance, New-Mexico, to the Colorado River, near the mouth of the Majave, (which river is the eastern boundary of California at that point,) is not required to be constructed by contract, as are the others, although the work will be performed under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior. This road is about four hundred miles in length, according to the information of gentlemen who are acquainted with the geography of the country, and for the construction of which the $50,000 appropriated by Congress is deemed to be sufficient. It is important by reason of its connection with Missouri or Arkansas.

Early in May a large body of troops, under the command of Lieut. Col. JOHNSON, 1st Cavalry, will start from the western boundary of Missouri, on the parallel of 37, to run and mark the southern boundary of Kansas to the eastern boundary of New-Mexico. The country over which that line passes is mostly prairie, well watered, and presents but few obstacles to travelers. The wagons necessary to carry supplies for the troops, heavily ladened with provisions and stores, will compel the commander of the party to improve the crossing of the streams and level steep descents, to make a comparatively easy way for the trains. Thus it is conjectured there will be a good wagon way constructed from Western Missouri to the eastern boundary of New Mexico. Before reaching the latter the parallel of 37 crosses the great trail leading from Independence to Santa Fé, which has been traveled for more than thirty years. After striking this trail there is a good road leading to Santa Fé or Albuquerque.

Fort Defiance is situated from one hundred and fifty to two hundred miles westward of those places, from either of which there is a road over which the supplies for troops at the Fort have been transported, and which is pronounced by officers of the army, who have traveled over it, a good wagon road. During a year of scarcity in New-Mexico the commandant at that Military post was compelled to go westward of the Fort from one hundred and fifty to two hundred miles to the villages inhabited by the Moquin Indians, who raise larger supplies of grain than they consume, and are peaceable and inoffensive.

Thus when the Southern boundary line of Kansas shall have been surveyed, there will be a good wagon road on this route, without much labor, to these Indian villages, which are only distant two hundred and fifty miles from the terminus of the Fort Defiance and Colorado wagon Road. It is expected that orders will soon be given, and by Midsummer men employed in its construction, and that the Road can be constructed to the Colorado River, and the report of the Superintendent be received in time to be presented to Congress early in the next session.

From the west bank of the Colorado River there is good grazing and water, and it is believed that the line of road will proceed up the Majave River to its source near the Tagon Pass. That portion of the road, from the head of the Majave River, through the Tagon Pass to the head of the San Joachim River, has already been traveled by the wagons of the settlers in the neighborhood of that Pass. On this line of road, from one hundred and fifty miles west of Missouri, lies the country inhabited by the Cherokee Indians, who raise a surplus of all agricultural products; and about one hundred miles east of the River del Norte, the New-Mexico settlements appear.

It is said that this route can be traveled as well in Winter as in Summer.

From these statements it appears that by next Winter there will be a good wagon road to the State of California irrespective of the other two—the Fort Kearney and El Paso—for which the Act of Congress makes provision.

The official announcement of the appointment of Mr. R. J. WALKER to the Governorship of Kansas, and Mr. STANTON to the Secretaryship, is made in the Union of this morning.

The instructions to Mr. R. J. WALKER are full clear and explicit, and in them are quoted the exact words of Mr. BUCHANAN's Inaugural, viz.: "It is the indispensable duty of the Government to secure to every resident inhabitant the free and independent expression of his opinions by his vote." In this the Cabinet cordially concur. They, and those who will shortly administer the affairs of Kansas, believe that there is nothing to prevent such a result in the adoption of the State Constitution, as the Legislative Assembly, at their last session, repealed that portion of the Election law which required a challenged voter to take the oath to support the Fugitive Slave law. Gentlemen who have made personal inquiry relative to this subject have been assured that the Administration and Mr. WALKER will endeavor to carry out their promise in good faith, being fully impressed with the importance of the result.

The President dismissed his many visitors this morning until to-morrow, stating that the Cabinet would meet an hour earlier than usual, to consider special and highly important subjects.

THE GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS—THE LATE MURDER—TRIAL OF REV. J. S. KALLOCK.

BOSTON, Tuesday, March 31.

Mr. AUSTIN will assume the duties of the Collectorship of this port to-morrow.

Mr. BAILEY, the present Postmaster, will retain the office until the expiration of his commission, which has about a year to run.

The Coroner's inquest on the death of WALNO WOOD has resulted in throwing no light on the murder. The verdict is to the effect that he died on Sunday morning, March 15, from stabs and blows inflicted by persons to the Jury unknown.

The trial of Rev. J. S. KALLOCK, on the charge of adultery, commenced this forenoon, before the Court of Common Pleas in Cambridge. Mr. KALLOCK is defended by R. H. DANA, CHAS. H. TRAIN and H. W. PAINE.

The trial excites much interest. When the case was called at the opening of the Court, a motion by defendant's counsel for a postponement was disallowed, and thirteen witnesses were called and sworn for the Commonwealth. Mr. KALLOCH occupied a seat near his counsel, and appeared self-possessed, but rather pale and careworn. The indictment was read, charging him with the crime of adultery, committed on the evening of the 5th of January at the Lechmere Hotel, with a woman unknown.

The first witness examined was Rev. W. F. HOLLAND, who testified to the fact that the defendant lectured before the East Cambridge Lyceum on the night in question. He declined to accept his (witness') invitation to take tea at his house, but preferred a room in the hotel for the purpose of looking over his notes.

Mrs. GRIFFIN, 19 years old, wife of one of the proprietors of the house, testified to her curiosity being excited by a conversation which she overheard between the defendant and the unknown woman. She saw them through a crevice over the door kiss each other. She saw the woman pinch defendant's cheeks and indulge in other affectionate flirtations, which led witness to suppose they were not married.

Mr. EPHRAIM B. BAILEY, one of the proprietors of the house testified that Mr. KALLOCK came to the hotel early in the evening. He introduced the lady with him as his wife, and called for a private room; and also for a warm whiskey toddy which he wished to be brought to him privately. The curiosity of this witness was also excited, and while KALLOCK and his female friend were absent at the lecture, he had a door of the room fixed partially open.

Without concluding Mr. BAILEY's examination, the Court adjourned till to-morrow morning.

CINCINNATI, Tuesday, March 31.

The steamboat White Bluff, hence for Arkansas River, was run into by a tow-boat and sunk at Cairo on Friday night. The second clerk and one of the firemen were drowned.

CLAIMS ON THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.—Mr. WHITTLESEY, the First Comptroller, having decided the Blanchard case, is now engaged in considering the testimony in the Carnick and Ramsey case, and as soon as he shall dispose of that he will leave the office and return to his home in Ohio.

The cases above mentioned are those in which Congress directed that damages be paid to parties for the breach of their mail contracts by the Postmaster-General. In the Blanchard case Mr. WHITTLESEY has allowed the sum of $62,000.

The other is one involving a larger amount. A contract was made with Postmaster-General HUBBARD with CARNICK and RAMSEY for the conveyance of the mail to California by way of Vera Cruz and Acapulco, subject to the approval of Congress. Postmaster-General CAMPBELL canceled the contract, and Congress directed that the damage they thereby sustained be paid them. Thus it will be found in the course of time that the executive officers of the Government will not be sustained in arbitrary violation of obligations to individuals, or if they do in this respect, it must be at the expense of the public treasury.—*Wash. NEW-YORK CITY.

A Mysterious Tragedy—Two River Thieves Shot—One of them Dead.

A rather mysterious and tragic affair, resulting in the shooting of two thieves, and the death of one of them, occurred yesterday morning. Between 1½ and 2 o'clock, (yesterday morning,) Officer BURNS, of the Eleventh Ward, while patroling his beat, was accosted by a young man, badly wounded and bloody, who desired to be taken to the Police Station for medical treatment. His request was complied with; a physician was sent for, when it was ascertained that there were nine buck-shot in the side of his neck and in his breast. He gave his name as JOHN WILLIAMS and stated, in explanation of his condition, that he was passing the corner of Market and South streets, where two men were quarrelling, and that, as he approached, one of the men, without any cause or provocation, drew a revolver and shot him. He fell to the sidewalk, and then both men ran away.

The story was regarded as so singular and suspicious, that some officers were dispatched to the place designated by the wounded man but a thorough search, there and in the vicinity, failed to reveal the least evidence of a struggle, and no one living in the vicinity knew anything of the alleged quarrel. This result tended to strengthen the belief of the officers of the falsity of WILLIAMS' story of the manner in which he received his wounds, and to confirm them in the opinion that he had been shot while attempting to perpetrate a burglary or some more heinous crime. Later in the day he was removed to the City Hospital, where he yet lies. His wounds are not considered fatal.

The Police of the Seventh Ward busied themselves in their district in an endeavor to find out the real facts of the singular case. But no burglaries had been committed during the night, nor any breach of the peace, so far as they could learn.

But the real facts soon appeared, and were learned from another section of the City. About 3½ o'clock in the morning the attention of some of the hands on board the Williamsburg ferry-boat Niagara was attracted by a small boat moored to Pier No. 23 East River, which appeared to contain a human body. Upon proceeding to the pier and making an examination they found in the boat the dead body of a young man, covered with blood. Notice was at once given to the Police, and the body was conveyed to the Second Ward Station-house, where it was recognised as that of a well-known river thief, named DANIEL O'LEARY, alias John Williams, but more generally and better known as "Sneaky." The man had been killed by a discharge of buckshot, at least one of which entered the lungs.

This made it pretty clear that the deceased came to his death at the hands of some seaman or watchman while on a maranding expedition among the vessels and docks, and that the young man WILLIAMS, who surrendered himself to the Seventh Ward policeman, was with him at the time. WILLIAMS, too, was recognised as a hardened river thief, known to the Police as JOHN KELLY.

Coroner CONNERY visited the Second Ward Station-house during the day to hold an inquest upon the body of O'LEARY; but, being unable to obtain any facts other than those which we have here given, was compelled to adjourn till to-day, when it is hoped this mysterious matter will be made clear.

By permission, the body was taken from the Station-house to the residence of deceased's father, where a wake was held upon it. At 5 o'clock the body lay stretched on the third floor of a dilapidated rookery in Mission-place, Five Points. It was placed upon a rough pine board, near the only window of a room begrimed with smoke, and almost devoid of furniture. Everything around bespoke poverty, most squalid even for the Five Points. About the corpse stood some two dozen ragged and rum-bloated women, and two or three miserable-looking men. One of the women, whose "cry" was loudest and most prolonged, held in her arms an infant. She seemed codsinerably under the influence of liquor, and when asked what relation she bore to the deceased, she turned suddenly round, and placing the infant astride the corpse, answered, "I am his step mother sure, and God knows I never begrudged him the bit or sup he ate, poor fellow, when he came, which in troth was not often!" She spoke in a loud and husky voice, and with a strong brogue. She then pulled back the sheet from the body, as if anxious to show the fatal wound on the breast. The miserable mourners looked gullenly on, in quiet—but the moment we left they renewed their lamentations. WILLIAMS, who is at the Hospital, still adheres to the story told to the Seventh Ward Police, of his being shot by an unknown man at the corner of South and Market streets, when there is scarcely a doubt that he was in the boat with O'LEARY when he was shot, and that he rowed to Pier No. 23, and there fastening the boat, left it and his dead companion.

Columbia College Removal.

There is a lively time now in the College building, preparatory to a change of quarters to the old Deaf and Dumb Institution in Fiftieth street, near Fourth-avenue. The library books, cabinet minerals, &c., are nearly all packed, and the removal will take place between the 15th inst. and the 1st of May. By the terms of the late sale of their property, the College may hold possession until the 10th of May, but they are anxious to get away as soon as the alterations now going on in the up-town edifice are completed. Some sixty workmen are now engaged there, and the whole establishment will be fitted up in improved modern style, with gas, Croton water, &c. Commodious rooms will be prepared for the literary societies, and also apartments for the accommodation of the President and two or three of the Professors, with their families.

Prof. ANTHON has purchased a brown-front house in Thirty-ninth-street, near Fifth-avenue, where he will reside. Mr. ANTHON is a bachelor, and has hitherto made his home in the College buildings for a number of years.

If the new quarters should prove well adapted to the wants of the College, they will probably be leased for a term of ten years; otherwise the proposed new structure will be commenced at once. But whenever begun, it will prove an ornament to that part of the City, as the trustees are disposed to disburse liberally in its behalf. It will require at least four or five years to complete it. The old yellow building now fronting on Park-place, the walls of which were put up in 1758, will be leveled soon after the 1st of May, to give place to a block of handsome warehouses.

April Fashions.

March went out like a lamb. Yesterday was more a Mid-summer than a Spring day, and in spite of the blinding, suffocating dust, Broadway and the millinery and dress-making ware-rooms were crowded with ladies earnestly given to the study of the April fashions. Dry goods merchants and mantilla venders were happy men with plenty of customers and heavy sales. Indeed, the new goods of the season are well calculated to tempt the money from the pockets of any who have a weakness in that line, for they are unusually rich and tasteful. Glacé, foulard, and China silks of delicate colors, with flounces or bayadere stripes; chintzs and lawns in palm leaf patterns; and rich grenadines and barèges are most in vogue. We saw an amber grenadine, with chene flounces, terminating in an amber fringe, which was very rich Flounces trimmed with fringe, are very generally worn. Delicate colors, pearl, stone and lilac are most in favor. Skirts are very full and very long—a most excellent thing in the present condition of the streets. The rumor that hoops were about to be collapsed seems to have been unfounded, judging from the testimony of living witnesses. The prophets have gone down, but the hoops haven't.

Basques and opera sleeves are still worn. Wide pagoda sleeves, slit up in the inside of the arm, are in vogue for dinner and evening dresses. Sleeves for morning dresses are made large and open, and are confined by a band at the wrist, or finished with a gauntlet cuff, with puffs and ribbon trimming.

Black lace jackets promise to be favorites for the coming season. These are of black tulle, covered with rows of narrow black velvet, or are formed of rows of black lace insertion, edged with narrow lace. Canezous of clear white muslin, trimmed with bretelles of needle-work, will be much worn. Collars are moderately small. Undersleeves for full dress are of tulle, with puffs and a deep frill of rich lace, and are invariably trimmed with ribbon.

Long basques, reaching almost to the knees, are and will continue to be worn. These are of velvet, silk, and cloth, and are in black generally, though we observe a growing tendency toward more fanciful colors. We saw a very pretty and simple one, with a double skirt; the upper skirt or frill being more than a quarter of a yard in depth. The edge was bound with galloon, and the front trimmed with crochet buttons. Another had a richly embroidered skirt, set on in box-plaits. Large circulars in fancy colors, with hoods, are also much worn. The new mantillas are generally in the shawl form, and are of taffeta, satin, or silk, with lace and chenilla trimmings. There is a very pretty basque-mantilla, the fronts of which form a flowing sleeve, while the back falls like a handy-fitting basque, and is terminated in a round point, ten or twelve inches in depth. This is much more graceful than the long basque. Very tasteful mantillas of chantilly and guipure lace are also worn.

Bonnets have long fronts, with drooping crowns and shallow capes; some are veritable gipsys. Lavender is the favorite material just now.

We saw a very pretty dress for a child, of light green merino, with full skirt, and high waist, richly embroidered. The sleeves were flowing, with wide sleeves of the same material. Blouses, closed in front by a lappet and buttons, are much worn by boys.

THE AUDIT OF THE WEEK.

Every man who has anything to do with the Press, ought of course to feel the self-gratulation and self satisfaction which the illustrious ARCHIMEDES desired, but was denied. For the modern penman stands indeed where the ancient philosopher only longed to stand, and wields the lever that moves the world, and, for the matter of that, the concentrating glass to boot, hurling up all manner of ships and tents that do besiege his sacred Syracuse. Such, at least, is the recognized theory of his position, and I, who am of the craft, shall be the last man to call it in question.

But every dignity has its penalty. Will you be Lord Chancellor of England? Then must you consent to put one feather-bed on your head, and another into your chair, and sweiter betwixt the two for as many hours long as it may please the Peers of Britain and the Bench of Bishops to prose away before your face. Will you be President of the United States? Then must you make up your mind to surrender your hand as completely into the control of others as any young French lady must, and to have it taken freely and dis posed of by whatsoever sovereign will.

And so if you will be an engineer of the Press and a leader of columns of type, you must expect to pay some painful price for your position and your power. And this price—this painful price, this penalty—is the printer. He it is who aveoges your elevation upon you and snubs your lofty self-consciousness and in a general way brings you down to the level of mortality by his blunders, wilful or wicked, by his humiliating transpositions of your cunningly-devised syllables, and his maddening modifications of your elaborately-pondered meaning, and his diabolical transmogrifications of your most felicitious phrases. I know that the press have some right to complain of the pen; and I freely admit, with the magnanimity becoming an ARCHIMEDES, that the chirography of the most gifted men is not always as clear as their fancies and their thoughts. But the tricks of type cannot be dismissed so simply. For by what fatality is it thet the word which undergoes the severest mutilation upon the type-setter's rack, invariably turns out to be precisely the one word most tenderly cherished on the writer's table, the apple of his eye, his pet lamb, the axis of his emotion, the hinge of his argument, the one sun of his small solar system? This fact blazes with the evidence of predetermination, and convinces me that errors of the press are ordained to establish a just balance and well-administered corrective of authorial vanity and elation. Does the unfamiliar reader question the fact? Let me recommend him to try his hand at composition and publication, if he wishes to be satisfied on that head. Or let him consider the following true tale of the afflictions which befell a certain friend of mine on the occasion of his first and only venture into print. He was—(and I am happy to believe is, though in what part of the world he may be now demonstrating the superiority of the American chemist and civilization to contradicting Germans, admiring Italians, skeptic Britons, sneering Frenchmen, or open-mouthed Savages, I do not know)—a most accomplished "gentleman of both hemispheres," as familiar with Paris as with Boston, and equally at home in a caravanserai and a hotel; but he had never meddled with the press till smitten with a generous rage for justice to a charming little protégé of his, who had chiseled out some of her pretty fancies into marble, he resolved to "twine a laurel wreath for her fair brows," or, anyhow, to "write a puff." So a puff he did write, and a "painful" puff—as our good New-England fathers would have called it—and his friend, the editor of the ——, was only too glad to take it from his pleasant self, and to give it for insertion. And inserted it was, and very neatly, too, and prominently, and signed with his initials, that all the world might take note of it, and her, the lovely be-puffed. And take note the world did with a vengeance! For though the "proof" had been "carefully read" and the article was very fair to see, two slight mistakes had crept in, two insidious little vessels of vengeance, and had fastened themselves upon—well, of course, upon the very vitals of that firstborn puff.

"Beautiful!" wrote the ardent amateur, "beautiful is that broad brow, and beautiful that crisped and curly hair!"

"Beautiful!" the printer set it up, "beautiful is that broad brow, and beautiful that crisped and curly hair!" Could even the Dred-Scott decision reconcile a man to this—he treating of a bust of Venus?

"Yes!" wrote the ardent amateur, "in this delicious figure of Daphne we recognize the very ideal of the shy maiden who fled from Love!"

"Yes!" the printer set it up—"Yes! in this delicious figure of Daphne we recognize the very ideal of the shy maiden who fled from Levi!" "The maiden who fled from Levi"—what Levi? and why did the maiden fly from him? Or does Levi here stand for Jew in the abstract, and Jew for the man of gold, and does Daphne typify the rare and righteone ladyhood which shrinks from silver chains and sumptuous slavery, and all the fleeting show of false and fatal nuptial bonds? So queried all the wondering town. So queried not the desperate victim of misguided ambition and inconsiderate affection, bnt taking np his carpet-bag, and seeing no man bnt his banker, departed into other lands, where I hope he is sitting now "clothed and in his right miod," and far from pens and presses both. Him, I cannot follow—nor would I if I could—bnt I remembered him and his great woe, when I last week saw how cruelly the remorseless fatee had dealt with me and with my "Audit." Miss HERON! I assure you that I never, never, never sent you to your dictionary to look for the meaning of pernicieuse, which has no meaning—deserves to have no meaning—and never, I hope, will have any meaning for you, whose instinct and whose intellect, I doubt not, will forever keep you from perniciousness of every kind. But there is a word which I did and do desire that you should think of before everybody comes to think of it for you, and that word is simply pleurnicheuse—an odious little word enough, were not the thing more odious still in any woman, and most of all in one whose passion should be grave and deep, and true and terrible—not tearful, profuse and vibratory. Perhaps you do not need to think of that word now, for I own I have observed (and with the greatest pleasure) that you do not now invariably pass through a quiver of hysterics before you reach an explosion of emotion: and that you will permit yourself to deviate so far from strictly meteorological analogies as sometimes to give us the lightning of your eyes and the thunder of your voice, without the shower of your tears.

And this is certainly a great, even a very great improvement. Do you not find it so yourself? Do you not find that it is easier for you to grasp the sad sincerities of sorrow and of wrath with your soul when your liberate yourself entirely from all anxieties about the modulation of your wail or the intensity of your guttural convulsions? There are moments, I know, in which intense feeling so keenly works upon the strongest natures, that the nerves and the muscles lose their tone for an instant, and the whole woman gives way to a wild, womanly agony; but these moments are few, very few, in the life of any really superior woman, and the most terrible intensity of passion, above all, of evil passion, expresses itself habitually in a powerful female organization rather through an icy coldness and concentration of look and a metallic resonance of voice, than through diffuse and deploring exuberance of melody and of notes. The models of hysterical despair are to be sought for in the police courts and the gin-palaces, and beneath the blare of the street lamps, in women who are forever flying from their own lives, or drifting helplessly along in a welter of sin and shame. The despair, the bitterest agony, of the intellectually and resolutely wicked, marks itself quite otherwise. Such a character (such a woman I cannot quite resolve to call her) as Leonore in the "World Own," for instance, malignant, cool and fiendish, loses all semblance of consistent reality when she is represented as bursting into tears and choking with sobs at every crisis of her feelings. The thing is totally ont of nature. Yet not much more natural is it that "Camille" should be portrayed as liable to the same affections of the throat and eyes. For Camille, though her habits of life have been such as develop a febrile quality in the constitution, is nevertheless a woman capable of intense self-control, and should never lose that self-control, nor seem on the point of losing it, excepting in moments of the most unexpected excitement. When Miss HERON renders the whole scene between the father of Armand and herself in a suspicious, spasmodic way, she sadly interferes with the effectiveness of what is otherwise most striking and the most admirable piece of acting which has been seen in a long time upon the New-York stage. Will she not give this matter a thought,—not in regard to the ploy of the "World's Own," which I see has been definitely withdrawn, but in regard to "Camille," and still more particularly in regard to "Medea,"—during this closing week of her engagement, and so leave us with a complete confidence in the stable reality of her power? For my own part, I still hold her to be the most gifted actress thet has come to us in many years. I had supposed it possible that the fair Pythoness of Dodworth's, Mrs. HATCH, might dispute the palm with her. But after reverentially submitting myself to the wisdom of that lady throughout an evening not the shortest of the season, I have given up that supposition. MARGARET FULLER OSSOLI, in one of her European letters, says that Mr. CARLYLE complained to her of COLERIDGE, that it wasn't "pleasant to sit for three hours and be pumped into as if you were a bucket." My experience of Mrs. HATCH brings me to the same conclusion, though with a difference—for whereas CARLYLE may have come away from COLERIDGE overflowed with "milk of Paradise," I came away from the prophetess of Dodworth's deluged with the "waters of Foo foo and Fum-fum, rivers of China." Seriously, I do not know how to describe my experience of the spirits at Dodworth's otherwise than in the expressive language of Maistre WACE, who sang in verse the story of Normandy a thousand years ago: "I went to the forest of Fenteorand," quoth straightforward Robert, "to find a stone therein upon which he that sitteth forthwith knows all things that shall be forevermore! I went, I looked, I returned—like a fool I went on a fool's errand, and like a fool I did return." Flatly and honestly let me say it—whatever truth there may or may not be in the doctrine of Spiritualism—or to whatever degree the lady in question may be "inspired by wiser powers than dwell in flesh—this is true and to be established—that the metaphysics, physics and theology, put forth by her on the evening, do those disembodied powers no manner of credit. I did not heer her utter one word thet might not have been uttered by any one of fifty odd, yes, very odd women, selected at random from any New-England coventicle of reformers in the merry month of May, or the mad month of March. Any man whose miserable fate has made him familiar with the distortions of Kantian and Fichtian reasoning which pass current with the more exacerbated portions of the undisciplined, eager and vivacious New-England population for discoveries of truth; with the rationalistic theology as it is diluted in the discourse of that most insufferable class of mortal men, the half-educated clever magi of the East, and with the fragmentary morbidities of misunderstood physiological doctrines as put forth by the lesser lights of the Wilkinsonian school, could not fail to recognize the ghosts of loug-departed boree, rather than the sheeny spirits of new angels of wisdom, in the tenor of Mrs. HATCH'S discourses. I should be sorry to seem at all uncivil or ungallant, but indeed I was very improperly glad to get away from Dodworth's Roome on the occasion in question. Why then are so many people so improperly glad to go there. Thereof, anon.

Robert J. Walker's Acceptance of the Governship of Kansas.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, March 26, 1857.

MY DEAR SIR: I have, at your request, reconsidered my determination, as announced to you, declining your tender of the office of Governor of the Territory of Kansas. In view of the opinion now presented by you, that the safety of the Union may depend upon the selection of the individual to whom shall be assigned the task of settling the difficulties which again surround the Kansas question, I have concluded that a solemn sense of duty to my country requires me to accept this position. I am brought to this conclusion with an unaffected diffidence in my own ability, but with a fervent hope that the seme overruling Providence which has carried my beloved country through so many perils will now attend and direct my humble efforts for her welfare, and that my course will not be prejudged by any portion of my fellow-citizens, in or out of Kansas.

I understand that you, and all your cabinet, cordially concur in the opinion expressed by me, that the actual bona fide residents of the Territory of Kansas, by a fair and regular vote, unaffected by fraud or violence, must be permitted, in adopting their State constitution, to decide for themselves what shall be their social institutions. This is the great fundamental principle of the act of Congress organizing that Territory, affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States, and is in accordance with the views uniformly expressed by me through out my public career. I contemplate a peaceful settlement of the question by an appeal to the intelligence and patriotism of the whole people of Kansas, who should all participate, freely and fully, in this decision, and by a majority of whose votes the determination must be made, as the only proper and constitutional mode of adjustment.

I contemplate no appeal to military power, in the hope that my countrymen of Kansas, from every section, will submit to a decision of this matter by a full and fair vote of a majority of the people of that Territory. If this decision cannot thus be made, I see nothing in the future for Kanzas but civil war, extending its baneful influence throughout the country, and subjecting the Union itself to imminent hazard.

I will go, then, and endeavor thus to adjust these difficulties, in the full confidence so strongly expressed by you, that I will be sustained by all your own high authority, with the co-operation of all your cabinet.

As it will be impossible for me to leave for Kaosas before the second Monday of May next, I would desire my appointment to take effect from that date.

Very respectfully, your friend,

R. J. WALKER.

JAMES BUCHANAN, President of the United States.

MR. WALKER'S VIEWS IN REGARD TO SLAVERY IN KANSAS.

Extract of a Letter written by Mr. Walker, September, 1856.

If this question, as provided by the Kansas and Nebraska bill, should be left to the people of the Territory in forming their State Constitution, it will be determined by soil, climate, productions and the laws which govern the movements of population. Here, the North, aided by its greatly superior numbers, by European, non-slaveholding immigrants, by the greater facility of movement, unincumbered by the transport of slaves, or the apprehension of their ultimate condition were taken, have great advantages over the South in the settlement of new Territories; and should he perfectly satisfied with the principle which leaves the determination of this question, when they become a State, to a majority of the people of the Territory. This is the Kansas-Nebraska bill. This is non-intervention—absolute non-interference by the Federal Government.

There is another reason not heretofore adverted to, which seems to render it impracticable long to maintain Slavery in Kansas. In all the Slave States there is a large majority of voters who are non-slaveholders, but they are devoted to the institutions of the South—they would defend them with their lives—and on this question the South are a united people. This class, composed of many small farmers, of merchants, mechanics, overseers, and other industrial classes, constitute mainly the patrol of the South, and cheerfully unite in carrying out those laws essential to preserve the institution. Against a powerful minority and constant agitation, Slavery could not long exist in any State. It is a well-known fact that this result would have followed soon, in several of the Slave States, but for the unanimity speedily produced there by the Abolition agitators and intermeddlers of the North. Now, Kansas is much divided on the question of Slavery there; there is a powerful minority there, if not a majority. A party not neutral but bitterly hostile to the institution; and for this, in addition to the reasons before given, I do not believe Kansas will become a Slave State.

Trinity Church Affairs.

Remonstrance and Protest of the Rector, Church-Wardens and Vestrymen of Trinity Church against the repeal, amendment, modification or alteration of the act of 1814 in relation to the said corporation.

To the Honorable, the Senate and House of Assembly of the State of New-York:

The Memorial and Remonstrance of the Rector, Church Wardens and Vestrymen of Trinity Church, in the City of New-York,

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH,

That your memorialists have to defend themselves against an application, understood to have been made to your honorable bodies, by certain persons describing themselves as inhabitants of the City of New-York, in communion of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in the State of New-York, for the repeal or modification of a certain law passed Jan. 25, 1814, entitled "An act to alter the name of the corporation of Trinity Church, in New-York, and for other purposes."

Your memorialists have also learned with surprise and regret that a bill has been recently introduced into the Senate intended to impair, if not to destroy the rights and franchises which your memorialists have enjoyed without interruption for more than a century and a half.

Your memorialists respectfully represent that the same application was made to the Legislature in 1846, and that it was renewed in 1847; that it was on each of these occasions pressed with great zeal and activity, that it was, supported by counsel of eminence who were fully heard on behalf of the applicants, and that its merits were thoroughly discussed and investigated, that Standing Committees of the Senate in 1846, and the House of Assembly in 1847, reported against it, and that the Legislature, in each instance, refused to attempt any interference with the rights of your memorialists.

Your remonstrants respectfully represent to your honorable bodies, that when the said act of 25th of January, 1814, was applied for, the following petition for the same (prepared by a Committee of the Vestry of Trinity Church, consisting of Richard Harrison, David M. Clarkson, Thomas Barrow, Robert Troup, Jacob Le Roy, Peter Augustus Jay and Thomas L. Ogden) was presented to the Legislature of the State, viz.:

"To the Honorable the Legislature of the State of New-York:

The petition of the Rector and inhabitants of the City of New York, in communion of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in the State of New-York,

Respectfully sheweth,

That so long ago as the year one thousand six hundred and ninety-seven, your petitioners were incorporated by letters patent under the great seal of the colony of New-York, and have ever since continued to be a body politic and corporate, by virtue of their said charter.

That at the time of granting the same, it was contemplated that Trinity Church therein mentioned, should be the sole and only parish church of the Protestant Episcopal denomination, in the said city, and that in fact it continued to be so until the Revolution by which the independence of the United States was obtained, and for a number of years after that memorable epoch.

That soon after the Revolution above mentioned, an act of the Legislature, passed for making such alterations in the Charter of the Corporation of Trinity Church as to render it more conformable to the Constitution of the State; by one clause whereof all the rights, privileges, benefits and emoluments which, in and by the said charter, were designed to be secured to the inhabitants of the City of New York in communion of the Church of England, were conferred upon all persons professing themselves members of the Episcopal Church, who should hold, occupy, and enjoy a pew or seat in the said church, and should regularly pay to the support of said church, and such others as should in the said church partake of the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, at least once in every year, being inhabitants of the said City.

That since the passing of the act above referred to, the pew-holders of Trinity Church, and of the churches or chapels belonging to the said Corporation and the regular communicants therein, have been the only persons admitted to vote at elections for Church Wardens and Vestrymen of the said Corporation, according to the true and fair construction contemporaneously and ever since given to the said act.

Your petitioners beg leave further to show, that in consequence of the rapid and unexampled increase and prosperity of our country since the said Revolution, and the corresponding growth and population of the City of New York, Trinity Church aforesaid, with the churches and chapels belonging to its corporation, became insufficient for the accommodation of all the inhabitants of said City who professed themselves members of the Protestant Episcopal Church, or wished to become so, on which account, and for a variety of other reasons not necessary to be suggested, numerous persons of this description have been induced from time to time, to form themselves into distinct corporations, each having its own peculiar endowments and places of worship, with rectors and other offices of their own choice, totally independent of any control or interference of your petitioners.

That a number of such religious corporations have accordingly been organized as the law directs, some with and some without the concurrence of your petitioners, to all which your petitioners have made liberal donations, and with whose internal concerns your petitioners or any of the members of the corporation of Trinity church, as such, do not claim any right to intermeddle, nor do the said corporations possess or claim any right for themselves or their members to vote in the elections, or regulate the affairs of Trinity church.

Nevertheless, a few individuals belonging to such separate corporations, have recently pretended to claim that right, and at the last annual election of church wardens and vestrymen of Trinity Church, held in the month of March, in the year 1812, two or three persons being members of the incorporated churches separate and distinct from your petitioners, tendered themselves as voters; but their votes, under no ordinance previously passed by your petitioners, were rejected, and no measures have been yet taken to enforce or establish the right as claimed.

It must be obvious, however, that attempts of the nature cannot fail to produce strife and litigation and to foster and to keep alive pretensions of the most unreasonable nature, and of the most mischievous tendency.

Your petitioners are, moreover, sensible that since the formation of such distinct corporations, the corporate name by which your petitioners are designated has become inapplicable, and ought to be changed, as they do not comprehend in their body all the inhabitants of the City of New York who now profess to be of the Protestant Episcopal Church; and your petitioners are further convinced that it has become essential to the peace and harmony of said church, that all doubts respecting the persons entitled to vote for church wardens and vestrymen of Trinity Church, which may exist or arise in consequence of the said separate corporations, should be finally obviated and settled.

Your petitioners beg leave further to represent that the law which requires religious corporations in New-York, Albany and Schenectady, to exhibit an inventory and account of their estates and revenues at certain periods; is attended with considerable expense and trouble without prodncing any valuable effects, that after such inventory and account has once been exhibited it cannot be useful to exhibit it again, unless the corporation should acquire further estates, and that as far as the corporation of Trinity Church is concerned, they have hitherto complied with the law, and hold no property (their communion plate and church furniture excepted) other than what they held and were possessed of long before the said Revolution and are legally entitled to hold by the charters and grants of the ancient Government, confirmed and established by the Legislature of the State; though your petitioners have greatly diminished that property by grants and donations to Columbia College, to a free school which the Legislature has incorporated, to a society formed for the promotion of religion and learning; and to many churches and religious societies, not only in the City of New-York, but elsewhere in different parts of the State.

Your petitioners, therefore, pray that your honorable body will pass an act for altering the name of their incorporation, and also to obviate and settle the questions that might arise in consequence of incorporating other Episcopal congregations in the City of New-York, and to do away the necessity of such inventory and account being exhibited more than once, unless upon the acquisition of additional property of religious corporations.

And your petitioners will ever pray, &c.

By order of the Corporation of Trinity Church, in the City of New-York.

Your remonstrants further respectfully represent, that the said petition was true in every particular; that it received the favorable attention of the Legislature, that the bill brought in pursuant to its prayer, was popular in both Houses of the Legislature, and passed by large majorities.

That the application for said bill, and the fact that it was pending in the Legislature, were notorious, and were the subject of public discussion in the City.

The said bill was fully debated and discussed at the several stages of its passage through the Legislature; and the House of Assembly before acting on it called on the eminent Abraham VanVechten, then Attorney-General of the State, for his opinion on the questions of right alleged to have been affected by it, and that the officer returned it as his opinion that the proposed bill, if passed, would not vary, affect or divest any existing right.

That objections were made to it in the Council of Revision, on which that Board was equally divided, so that the bill became a law in conformity with the then existing Constitution, the Council of Revision having taken no order on the subject.

Your remonstrants further represent that, if the law of 1814 had not been passed, the reasons urged in the above petition would apply to the present day with much greater force than they did then, and justice and public policy would now require the passage of a declaratory act to the same effect.

Your remonstrants further represent, that the law in question, while pending before the Legislature, received the general approbation and support of the Episcopal inhabitants of the City of New-York. That it has now been constantly acted on and acquiesced in for forty-three years, with the single exception, that at the annual election in 1844, at a time of uncommon excitement in the Protestant Episcopal Church, one person, (a gentleman of the legal profession) claimed the right to vote; admitting at the same time, that he had never communed in Trinity Church or in either of its chapels; that he did not own or hire a pew or seat in any or either of them, and had never contributed to the support of Trinity Church. That the vote thus tendered was rejected, and that its rejection was acquiesced in, without any attempt to establish by judicial proceedings, the claim thus set up.

Your remonstrants further represent, that there are now fifty separate and distinct Protestant Episcopal Church corporations or parishes in the City of New-York, (instead of the nine which existed in the year 1814,) besides the corporation and parish of Trinity Church.

Your remonstrants further represent that all the said new churches have been assisted by donations from the property and funds of your remonstrants, except two of them, which never applied for such aid; that such donations or endowments have in several instances (as in those of Grace Church, St. Mark's and St. George's) been of very large amount; and that your remonstrants have, during the last forty years, also contributed largely to new churches in every part of the State, so that the income of the corporation has never been at all equal to its expenditures, the deficiency being supplied by sales of real estate and by loans.

Your remonstrants further represent, that elections in Episcopal churches are usually conducted without excitement, and are almost always nearly or quite unanimous, accordingly it seldom happens that more than twenty votes (if so many) are polled, whatever may be the number of the constituency. The same remark is believed to apply to elections held in incorporated charitable and literary societies generally. That in the corporate elections of Trinity Church when there is no contest, the number of votes is generally small. That no inference can fairly be drawn from the neglect of corporators to exercise their right of voting; except that they are entirely satisfied with the management of the corporate body to which they belong, that there is no obstacle in the way of persons being admitted corporators of that church, the sole conditions being that they shall duly attend the services of the church, and hold a pew or partake of the holy communion in said church, or own a pew therein, or hire it from the church; and that all or any of the petitioners for the repeal of the set could have become and still can become members of the corporation by complying with these conditions, which are not only reasonable in themselves, but consistent with the usage and practice of all religious societies of every denomination of Christians throughout the State.

Your remonstrants further represent that the said act of 1814 was passed at a time when harmony had just been restored in the parish after a long and exciting personal controversy, and was intended to preserve order and harmony in a numerous religious communion. This it has happily effected and maintained for more than two generations.

Your remonstrants further submit, that the question of the propriety of the act of 1814, has been three times considered in the Legislature; first, at the time of its passage; second, in 1846, by the Senate; and third, in 1847, by the Assembly. Persons not members of the congregations of Trinity Church but members of other church corporations, claiming to be corporators of your memorialists, have never sought to establish their claims by the decision of a court of justice. No obstacle prevented their doing so, either before or after the passage of the act of 1814. If that act was unconstitutional, as it is urged, it interposed no obstacle at any time. It was simply void. But it was impracticable for your memorialists to test the question in any such mode. All they could do was to reject the votes of such persons when offered. It rested with the claimants, and with them alone, to bring the matter to the attention of the courts. And should the Legislature pass an act in its terms purporting to repeal, alter or amend the law of 1814, above referred to, then, your memorialists, insisting as they would, that the law of 1814 forms a part of their charter, and cannot be repealed, altered or amended without their consent, the question of the constitutionality of that law, and the further question whether it has not been substantially acted on by all persons holding pews, must still remain to be determined by the courts. The same points of dispute which now exist would still continue, and the further one be added as to the right of the Legislature to interpose in the mode suggested.

Your remonstrants humbly submit that after these repeated decisions by the Legislature, and the acknowledged neglect of the parties complaining to assert their alleged rights in a court of justice, the law of 1814 above referred to ought to be left undisturbed until those who complain of it shall establish it unconstitutional in the Courts, the only proper tribunals for the decision of such a question, and that the undisturbed possession of your memorialists under that law for forty-three years, of the corporate rights, franchises and property it professed to give or to confirm, ought on the strongest grounds of public policy to have the same operation in perfecting the title of your remonstrants and securing them against hostile claims, which a like possession for less than half that period has on any other private right or property, however acquired. They submit that the public confidence in the stability and security of all property and private right will be seriously shaken, should the Legislature repeal or interfere with a grant of corporate franchises, after a lapse of nearly half a century, for the express purpose of enabling parties to revive and reopen a question which, if it ever existed except in name, has been long since disposed of.

Your remonstrants further state that the pewholders and communicants in their churches of the communion in this City, who would be might be qualified to vote for parochial officers of Trinity Church under the proposed act, are many thousands in number, and may become much larger in the ordinary state of things. But, moreover, whenever (as might frequently be the case,) motives or hopes of pecuniary profit were presented, this number would be swelled by a host of others, excited by the expectation of gain, who without any sympathy of opinion, or of feeling with the Episcopal, or any other religious body, could be constituted nominal Episcopalians and legal voters at an easy rate. Thus considering the various doctrinal differences, temporal interests and selfish aims that may exist among so large a number, the facility with which that constituency may be increased for personal purposes in times of partizan excitement, the certainty that such excitement would be of frequent recurrence, if not invariable, at every election where an endowment so greatly exaggerated and over-estimated by public opinion would be the prize of the contest, this act, if carried into operation, would inevitably fill not only the parish of your remonstrants, but every other parish in the City, with discord, confusion, and personal animosities.

Your remonstrants, in referring to the fact, that while the administration of this corporation has been assailed on almost every other point, no imputation nor even insinuation has ever been made, that either the present or any former vestry, or any of their members, have ever been influenced in the discharge of their duties, by any corrupt motive or by considerations of personal interest, may perhaps, without indelicacy, be permitted to say, that while they regard the observance of strict personal integrity in the administration of such a trust, as a matter of such obvious and imperative duty as to call for no commendation, yet the fact that in the long history of this corporation, no instance of the violation of this duty has ever occurred or even been suggested, is not without its weight as an attestation to the utility, efficiency, and security attending the working of the system as it now exists.

The proposed measure is founded on two reports made to the Senate, embodying the broad and strong censure on your remonstrants' execution of their duties. Your remonstrants respectfully represent, that these charges are, in their judgment, unsupported by the evidence, and they respectfully refer to the Legislature of the State for the protection of your remonstrants' right, and to their fellow-citizens for the vindication of their character, to the testimony itself, whether produced for or against them. They confidently believe that while most of the adverse testimony will be found, on examination, to be vague matters of opinion, or hearsay on second or third hand information, on the other hand the positive testimony of those actually acquainted with all the facts of the management and application of the property will show that the charges brought against your remonstrants are without foundation; and they appeal to such testimony with entire confidence, even though that produced against them was taken privately and exparte, your remonstrants not having been present to demand from those who gave it, further explanations or specifications of names, dates and facts. They feel confident that the examination and comparison of the whole body of testimony will prove to the Legislature, that your remonstrants have had steadily in view in the management and application of their funds, the support of the Gospel and its ministration, and the promotion of religion, morals and education, wherever their aid could be most effectual in this City and throughout the whole State. That testimony shows that if, in any instance, such application of their funds was ill-judged, it arose not from personal or partizan motives, but from an error of judgment, incident to all human counsels, whilst in general their endeavors have been largely blessed in promoting the best interests of society.

In conclusion, your remonstrants respectfully claim that the law in relation to your remonstrants passed in 1814, and above referred to, forms a part of the charter of this corporation, granted by the State and accepted by your remonstrants, and that the same cannot be repealed, amended, modified or altered without their consent. Such consent your remonstrants are compelled by a sense of duty to withhold, and against any repeal, amendment, modification or alteration of the act in question, they pray leave hereby firmly, but most respectfully, to protest.

And your remonstrants will ever pray, &c.

By order of the corporation of Trinity Church in the City of New-York.

THE CANADIAN RAILWAY INQUEST.—The Toronto Globe says that the tackling supporting the injured locomotive gave way Thursday, and that the engine was again entirely submerged. Means were being provided to raise it again yesterday. On Thursday, a special train was despatched with the jurors and the Corporation to examine the swing bridge over the Welland Canal, which is constructed in the same manner as that which gave way. The strength of the bridge was severely tested in their presence.

Decisions in Equity.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—MARCH 30.

BEFORE JUDGE INGERSOLL.

INDIA RUBBER CAR-SPRINGS—RIGHTS OF ASSIGNEES—NOTICE TO CORPORATIONS.

The New England Car Spring Company et al., vs. The Union Indian Rubber Company et al.—This was a motion for an injunction to prevent the defendants from manufacturing car-springs, the complainants claiming to have the exclusive right so to do, by assignment from Goodyear, to whom the patent for vulcanized rubber was issued on June 15th, 1844.

The defendants claim the right to manufacture them under a license originally granted by Goodyear to the Naugatuck India Rubber Company, and by them assigned to the defendants. By this agreement, made July 18, 1844, Goodyear gave to the company, with few exceptions, his whole right under the patent. The company, amongst other things, were to pay certain tariffs on the goods manufactured, and to stamp the goods with his name and the date of the patent. Goodyear covenanted not to license any other persons, reserving, however, the power to sell the exclusive right for any particular subject of manufacture under the patent for a gross sum, provided that before such sale the company should have the right to become the purchaser of it at the same rate; and such sale was not to be made except on the refusal or neglect of the company to purchase it for sixty days after the offer should be made them, nor then until one-fourth of such gross sum should be first paid or secured to them to their satisfaction, and upon such sale the license of the company, to the extent of the exclusive right sold, was to cease.

On Oct. 29, 1847, Goodyear, for the sum of $3,000, sold to Charles Ely and Edward Crane the exclusive right to make car-springs under the patent. At the time of this transfer the factory of the Naugatuck Company was at Naugatuck, Conn., and all the Directors, except one, lived at Hartford; but they had an office in New-York, where the other Director, Charles J. Gilbert, who was also Treasurer, attended. Notice of Goodyear's intention to sell to Ely & Crane was given to Gilbert in the month of July, 1847. $1,000 of the $3,000 was paid to a Mr. Dorr, as a commission for effecting the sale to Ely & Crane; and on Nov. 4, 1847, Dorr delivered to Gilbert a draft for $1,000, for the Company's share of the purchase money, which draft was paid, and the transaction was entered on the books of the Company.

Ely & Crane assigned this right, purchased by them on Dec 24, 1848, to the New-England Car Company; and this right was by them transferred to the complainants Nov. 20, 1851; and on Nov. 4, 1848, the Naugatuck Company assigned their right to the defendants.

Held by the Court—That the notice by Goodyear to Gilbert of his intention to sell to Ely & Crane, and the receipt by Gilbert of the draft for $1,000, are to be held to be notice to and the receipt by the Naugatuck Company itself; that the notice was not required to be in writing; and that the receipt of the draft without objection was a waiver of any defect in the compliance with the conditions of the contract between them and Goodyear which were for their benefit.

That the Naugatuck Company having allowed Ely & Crane to become the purchasers of this right to manufacture car springs without objection, would be held to be estopped from saying that they had not assented to it.

That the right to manufacture car-springs having been thus transferred by Goodyear to Ely & Crane, in accordance with the terms of the agreement of July 18, 1844, the right of the Naugatuck Company to manufacture them ceased, and they could transfer no such right to the defendants, while the complainants being the assignees of the right of Ely & Crane, have the exclusive right to manufacture car-springs, and are, therefore, entitled to the injunction against the defendants as prayed for by them.

For complainants, Mr. Brady and Mr. Judson. For defendants, Mr. Noyes and Mr. Goddard.

THE SICKELS STEAM-CHEST.

Frederick E. Sickels vs. The Pacific Mail Steamship Company et al.—This was a motion for an injunction against the defendants, on the allegation that they were infringing on board their steamship, the John L. Stephens, a patent owned by the plaintiff for an improved steam-chest. The Court held that, although it appeared that the elements which compose the combination patented were known and used two years before the plaintiff's patent, yet the evidence that the combination was so known and used is so uncertain and insufficient that no satisfactory judgment can be founded upon it.

Ordered, therefore, That an issue be framed, to be tried by a jury, to decide, first, whether the patentee was the inventor and discoverer of the said combination; and second, whether it was known and used by others two years before the application for a patent. If the verdict should be against the defendants, then the complainant would be entitled to an injunction, either absolute or conditional.

For complainant, Mr. Dickerson; for defendants, Mr. Stoughton and Mr. Eaton.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—MARCH 31.

Before Judge Betts.

Marshal Isaiah Rynders having been sworn in yesterday before Judge Betts at his Chambers, made his first public appearance in Court this morning, and seemed to watch the proceedings on the trial of some alleged counterfeiters with interest.

Lydia Ann Fayard and Francis Fayard were put on trial charged with passing counterfeit quarter dollars. Another woman called Sarah Loomis was indicted with them, but the District-Attorney consented that she have a separate trial. Mr. Spencer appeared for the accused. It appeared very plainly that Mrs. Fayard did pass a bad quarter at a lager beer garden, the two women and the man being together; and that they went elsewhere and passed another one, and offered money which was refused at other places. No bad money was found on them, however. Mr. Spencer claimed that there was no evidence to convict the man, and that if the jury did convict him they must then acquit his wife as being under his control. Judge BETTS charged the Jury that whether she was under his control was a question for the Jury to decide.

The Jury, after a short absence, came in, saying that they had examined the matter carefully and could not agree. They were therefore discharged.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Peabody.

DIVORCE—PRACTICE.

McGiffert vs. McGiffert.—This suit is brought to obtain a divorce a vinculo matrimonii. The defendant has answered, denying the offences charged in the complaint on which the claim of plaintiff is based, and setting up matter of defence.

The parties have stipulated that the issue be referred to a gentleman as sole referee, "to take the proofs therein, and report the same to this court." An order of reference has been entered, strictly in accordance with the stipulation, and the parties have entered on the taking of proofs under it.

At this stage of the case, defendant moves to have the order reformed so as to restrict the proofs to the material issues in the case. He claims that it is too comprehensive in its terms; that the pleadings contain much matter not relevant to the real issue in the case, and that this order authorizes, and perhaps requires the referee to take proofs of the irrelevant matter improperly in the pleadings. There is nothing before the court to show the course pursued in the referee, and the motion is made on the pleadings, order and stipulation.

By the Court.—PEABODY, Justice.—1. The case is one which the Court has no power, of itself, to refer. The order made could not have been made except by consent of the parties. The order asked cannot be made without their consent, and the plaintiff does not consent, but strenuously opposes it.

2. There is, moreover, before the Court a stipulation binding the parties to a different order—the one now in force; the same which the defendant asks to have modified.

3. The necessity for the order asked does not appear. The one now in force, by virtue of the compact between the parties, seems to be proper and adequate to the purpose for which it was intended. The proofs authorized to be taken by it, are not proofs of everything a party in his caprice may offer to prove; but only of matters pertinent to the material issues made by the pleadings. Under the order, as it now stands, proof of irrelevant and redundant matter should be excluded by the referee. Such matter should not have been allowed to stand in the pleadings. If it has been, however, and remains there at the trial, the Court will then disregard it, and refuse to hear evidence of it. The referee should, therefore, reject such evidence, if offered.

For each of these reasons the motion must be denied.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The instructions to Gov. WALKER, as agreed upon by the Cabinet, are represented to be full, clear and explicit. In them are quoted verbatim from Mr. BUCHANAN'S Inaugural Address the following words: "It is the indispensable duty of the Government to secure every resident inhabitant the free and independent expression of his opinion by his vote."

It is rumored that a movement is on foot on the part of the Government to conciliate the South by purchasing the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, instead of Lower California and Sonora, as had been proposed, and that the designated sum of $15,000,000 is to be appropriated for that purpose. This rumor comes from New-Orleans, where a deep interest is felt in the success of the route now being opened across Tehuantepec, and most probably has originated in a desire entertained in that city, that the enterprize may be brought directly under the protection of Government.

By way of St. Louis we have later news from New-Mexico and Sonora. The Indians in New-Mexico still continue very troublesome, their depredations being on the increase. The people of Sonora are represented to be anxious for annexation to the United States, only needing encouragement to that end. The Indians there, also, are robbing and murdering in every direction.

The trial of Rev. J. S. KALLOCK, on a charge of adultery, commenced in Cambridge, Mass., yesterday, before the Court of Common Pleas. Several witnesses were examined, but the case was not concluded. A sketch of the proceedings will be found under our telegraphic head.

An absolute injunction has been granted in the United States District Court of Rhode Island against Messrs. BOURN, BROWN & CHAFFEE, at the suit of CHARLES GOODYEAR and others, to prevent them from manufacturing vulcanized rubber boots and shoes.

A young man, about 18 years of age, named DANIEL O'LEARY, alias "Sneaky," well-known to the police as a river thief, was found dead early yesterday morning, in a boat at pier 23, East River. He was covered with blood, and an examination proved that he had been killed by a discharge of buck-shot into the breast and head. The same morning a river thief named JOHN WILLIAMS alias JOHN KELLY, surrendered himself to a Seventh Ward policeman, and desired to be sent to the Hospital. He was suffering from wounds about the head inflicted by a discharge of buck-shot. He stated that while passing the corner of Market and South-streets, he was without any provocation fired upon by a man, an entire stranger to him. There is little doubt that this man WILLIAMS received his wounds from the same discharge that killed O'LEARY, while both were attempting a depredation upon some vessel or storage dock. There was a rumor in Brooklyn yesterday that both the men had been shot in the vicinity of Fulton Ferry, while engaged in stripping the copper sheathing from a vessel, by the mate in charge.

The street-sweepers are fairly at work, and it is high time, for yesterday the City was obscured under a most dense cloud of dust. So far, the down-town contractor has labored with a will. The little check given to the first night's proceeding, by the efforts of a platoon of indignant modern "Greeks," has had an effect the contrary of that anticipated—a large number of Italians having been brought to the rescue. In Nassau, John, Cortlandt, and several other down-town streets, the mud has been piled up as if by magic (but we suppose it was by shovels) in little hills on either side, and Broadway begins to look as it used to do—comparatively clean. The contractors in the upper wards are not idle either. Then let us rejoice and be glad, and hopeful that soon—the first of April having arrived—Croton can by law be freely used for street-sprinkling purposes.

Before a Councilmsu's Committee, yesterday, Mr. ROBERT AULD testified that owing to the use of steam on the Eleventh-avenue, property is not worth as much there as it was three years ago. Mr. FRANCIS DALTON said that steam very much depreciated his property there; that property no more happily situated (with the exception of the lack of the steam nuisance) on Tenth-avenue, was worth twice as much as on the Eleventh-avenue.

Nine bids were opensd yesterday at the Comptroller's office for Central Park Fund Stock. The Stock comprises 8,000 shares at $100 a share, redeemable July 1, 1887. The bids yesterday covered 6,691 shares, leaving only 1,309 shares untaken. The bids were mostly at par, though for some even one per cent. premium was offered. Upon the payment of the bids the stock will be issued forthwith.

The Board of Governors met yesterday, but did nothing of much interest. There are now 6,475 persons under their charge—only 17 at the Small-pox Hospital.

A Committee, consisting of P. PERRIT and some thirty other merchants and ship owners, were appointed, at a meeting on Monday, to lay before the Legislature their views of the subject of the New-York Harbor Encroachments, and a large delegation went up to Albany for that purpose yesterday.

The examination was entered upon yesterday before the Surrogate relative to the settlement of the estate of the late NELSON ROBINSON, of the firm of DREW, ROBINSON & Co., the heavy Wall-street Brokers. Mr. NELSON left an estate estimated at $1,500,000. The father-in-law of the deceased brings a claim of some $20,000 against the estate, based upon a verbal guarantee of the decedent, to redeem at a given price certain Stocks at his call, which Stocks have now depreciated in value. There is a large number of lawyers employed, and the case promises to be interesting.

Three wills were admitted to probate, yesterday, before the Surrogate. The first was that of Dr. SAMUEL B. PHILLIPS, who committed suicide a few weeks ago—the property, $25,000, goes to his wife. The second was that of WM. ARGOLL, a heavy builder and contractor, who leaves an estate of $100,000 to his widow and children. The third was that of ELIAS H. HERRICK, flour merchant. He left an estate of a $300,000. The bequests were all of private character.

The O. U. A.'s made a demonstration, last evening, at the Tabernacle, in which a large assemblage of both sexes participated. The feature of the evening was an oration on "Washington," by Hon. E. W. ANDREWS, (which was to have been delivered at the Crystal Palace on the 22d of February, but was postponed because noise and confusion prevailed there on that evening.) Music, vocal and instrumental, enlivened the occasion, and at a late hour the patriotic company dispersed.

The Young Men's Christian Association held a special meeting on Monday evening, to consider the report of their Investigating Committee. A long and stormy session, lasting until nearly 1 A. M., resulted in the adoption of the Committee's report, and the passage of a resolution inviting Messrs. EDGAR, MOORE and HUBBELL, of the old Library Committee, to withdraw their resignations.

That worthy institution, the Mariner's Family Industrial Society, held its Annual Meeting for the election of officers, &c., yesterday at 3 o'clock P. M. In the evening a public meeting was held in the Mariner's Church when addresses were made by Rev. E. F. JONES and others. This society supplies work for the wives of widows of sick or deceased seamen, paying liberal prices for what is done, and so saves many families from poverty and dependence every year.

The steamer New-York, one of MCLYMAN & Co.'s Glasgow packets, was yesterday taken in charge by the U. S. Marshal, at the suit of Capt. JOHN A. GARDNER, of Nantucket, for an unsatisfied claim for coal, and services rendered to that vessel last Winter, while she was in a disabled condition at the east end of that Island.

Mr. JOSEPH THOMPSON, whom Capt. RYNDERS has appointed as his First Deputy, was sworn into office yesterday. The Captain makes no further appointments of Deputies until next Tuesday, the opening of the April term of the United States Court.

Dr. GUILMETTE, of musical celebrity, delivered the last of his course of lectures on the Formation of the Voice, at the Medical College in Fourteenth-street, last evening. He expounded a new theory of his own, the point of which was that neither the larynx nor the glottis is to be considered the main agent in the formation of a voice, but that this effort is due to the action of the diaphragm. He illustrated by models and auricular demonstrations.

JEROME RYERSON, Sheriff of Kings County, died suddenly yesterday morning. CASPIAN A. SPARKS, Under-Sheriff, filed his bonds as Sheriff during the day.

The Condition of Kansas.

It is announced,—we know not upon what authority,—that Governor WALKER will not proceed to Kansas for some weeks to come. It is greatly to be regretted that there should be any necessity for this delay. He is needed in Kansas now. The political condition of the Territory requires prompt and energetic action. The elements of civil strife are again accumulating. The election for a Constitutional Convention, ordered by the Legislature in spite of Governor GEARY'S veto, is about to be held:—the Free-State settlers have revived their organization and resumed their attitude of resistance to the Territorial authorities:—rival claims are springing up,—and the Territory is threatened anew with civil commotion and disturbance. These circumstances create an imperative demand for the presence and instant interposition of the new Executive. If a man of Mr. WALKER'S stamp is needed at all, he is needed now. When the crisis is over, an inferior man would answer quite as well.

What specific course the Administration has resolved to pursue in regard to Kansas, we are not aware. The step which seems to us above all others, essential to the peace and harmony of the Territory, is the postponement of the election for delegates to a Convention to frame a State Constitution. The country is not ready for such a step. The tide of emigration is but just rising,—and the tens of thousands who are to enter Kansas as their home during the coming season, should have a voice in making its fundamental law. The enactment authorizing the election, is of very doubtful validity:—it is without precedent:—it was passed in defiance of the Executive department:—it is not approved by the popular sentiment of the Territory:—and it ought not to be carried into effect. The postponement of this Convention would meet the views of the great body of the people,—of all, indeed, but the violent, fanatical faction whose purposes it is designed to promote. The whole country, we are confident, would rejoice to hear that Governor WALKER had authority to interpose and prevent such a renewal of strife as this election will certainly involve.

The chances, we apprehend, are against such action on his part. The census is to be taken to-day, and the election will probably be held in June. If this is so,—and that proceeding has the sanction of the Government at Washington,—then it is greatly to be regretted in our judgement, that the Free-State settlers in Kansas have resolved to take no part in the election. We cannot perceive what they can possibly gain by such a step. If they meditate revolution,—forcible resistance to all Territorial authority but that of the Topeka Constitution and the men who hold office under it,—then their proceedings are at least unintelligible. But all such intentions are disclaimed. The only effect, therefore, of refusing to vote will be to throw away the chance either of influencing the result, or of challenging the fairness of the trial. The Free-State settlers are probably a majority of the voters:—in any fair contest, therefore, they might hope for victory;—and it is only by taking part in it that they can do anything to make it fair. Let them call upon the new Governor to enforce justice,—to prevent fraud,—to protect the polls,—to exclude all illegal voters and to secure for every one entitled to vote the chance of doing so. If he does this, they may triumph. If he refuses or fails to do it they will be in position to appeal from him to the President—from the President to Congress, and, from both, if need be, to the People. But, if they declined having anything to do with the election, they lose all right to be heard in the matter at all, and voluntarily place the whole game in the hands of their opponents. Such a course is simply suicidal.

The Free-State settlers cling to the Topeka Constitution and declare their purpose to ignore everything else. What practical good they expect thus to secure it is not easy to conjecture. They cannot be so insane as to hope for admission to the Union under it,—or to expect Governor WALKER to accept it and resign his post to Gov. ROBINSON. The Topeka Constitution is a thing of the past, and it is the mere Quixotism of politics to treat or regard it as a living, practical reality. It would be just as sensible to rely upon the Missouri Compromise for the exclusion of Slavery from Kansas, as it is to look to the Topeka Constitution for its fundamental law.

Whatever is to be done there should now be done under the immediate, personal supervision and sanction of Governor WALKER. The Country reposes a good degree of confidence in his ability, justice and fair intentions:—and any needless delay on his part in assuming the Executive duties will be regarded with general distrust and incur the public censure.

An Insurrection Not to Be Quelled.

Three months ago the slaveholding States of the Union were smitten with a sudden panic. In the very hour of the victory which had been won over the principles of the Constitution and the interests of the Nation by a blind and passionate oligarchy, there came upon that unhappy section of our common country, a vague unaccountable terror of blood, and a mysterious sense of danger which it seems not superstitious to regard as a warning visitation of Heaven. The holders of four millions of slaves, spread over an empire stretching from the Ohio to the Gulf, and from the Mississippi to the Atlantic, were seized with a contemporaneous conviction of conspiracies and plots among the rude barbarian masses of their bondmen, for which no sufficient warrant in fact has since been found. Ignorant, uninformed, undisciplined—imprisoned within the fatal circles of debasement and degradation even more securely than within the jealous watchfulness of their masters—it was not possible that the negroes of a single State or a single county even, should have effected such a concert of action as would make their movements really dangerous. The only indication offered to the world, of the existence of anything like a common purpose in the minds of that enormous horde of savages which it is the Southern policy to perpetuate in the heart of the Continent, was in truth a most touching argument of the barbaric simplicity of the slave population. Excited by the declamation which during the Presidential canvass had been fulminated over all the South against the Republican Party of the North, the negroes had evidently conceived some pitiful undefined hope of the coming of a great Deliverer; and so with one consent from Kentucky to Texas and from Arkansas to Virginia these untutored creatures fixed upon Christmas Day, the one great holiday of all their dismal year, made doubly bright to them by its hours of welcome idleness and by its holier associations, as the season in which they should be redeemed from their long captivity. Severely did they expiate this brief dream of freedom. They were chastised for it with all the disproportionate fury of fear, nor did the whites come to their senses and try to langb the matter off till the world had learned a fresh lesson, not soon to be forgotten, of the insecurity and instability of all essentially false and unjust institutions. This is the extent of the harm which has been done to Slavery in America by slave-insurrections, nor are such insurrections likely to achieve any more immediate results. But throughout the Northern border of the Slave Dominion there have been growing symptoms for some time past of a much more formidable insurrection against the power of the slaveholding oligarchy. An insurrection of the blacks may be repressed by the bayonet; an insurrection of the whites must sooner or later triumph by the ballot, and this is the present danger of the Slaveholder, if danger we ought to call it, which bears the flower, safety, in its bosom.

The tide of free immigration which has been steadily beating in upon the northern levée of Slavery, has made some breaches at last in that rampart of wrong and ruin. Virginia is threatened from the East—Kentucky and Missouri from the North; but it is upon Missouri particularly that the deluge is most imminent. So rapidly has the anti-slaveholding population of that great border State increased during the last few years, that the question of emancipation has been boldly mooted in her Legislature, and though disposed of for the present in the slaveholding interest, will surely come up again at the August election, when a large party are prepared to make it the issue on which the contest shall be waged at the polls. These facts have no doubt come to the knowledge of our readers through the allusions which have been made in various journals to a speech delivered in the Missouri Legislature, on Feb. 12, by Mr. GRATZ BROWN, of St. Louis, but they may not have dwelt on the significance of this movement as thoughtfully as its importance deserves.

The demand for emancipation in Missouri is but the crest of a wave which will not recoil.

A comparison of the census of 1851 with the census of 1856 reveals the existence of two great tidal movements of population within the Slaveholding territory.

From the older States of Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee, a steady stream of slaveholders and of slaves has been moving into Arkansas and Texas. The brief and violent diversion of a portion of this stream in the direction of Kansas has already began to subside, and leading Southern journals, such as the National Intelligencer, the Memphis Bulletin, and the Charleston Mercury, coincide in the conclusion that the tendency of the slaveholding population towards the Southwest is acquiring the character of an Exodus. It bears away mainly, the smaller slaveholding interest, leaving the lands of the older States more and more exclusively in the hands of the great proprietors.

Meanwhile, a constantly-increasing portion of the northern and European movement of free labor is directing itself upon the frontier of the South. It has made itself felt as a kind of ground-swell in Virginia, Maryland and Kentucky, and in Missouri has at last begun to shake the surface into foam. In 1851 the freemen of Missouri stood to the slaves of the State in the proportion of sixty-five to one; in 1856 they count as one hundred and thirty-two to one. Where free Iowa touches the border of Missouri, Slavery has almost wholly withered away, and the representative of the City of St. Louis does not hesitate to say, in his place in the Representatives Hall, that "emancipation is already actually going on in Missouri," and in twenty-two counties of the State is "practically accomplished." This voice of hope from the West is echoed by a voice of despair from the South. The Charleston Mercury, commenting upon the speech of Mr. BROWN, gives up the Northern Slave-States to Freedom, and calls for the new "Confederation of Cotton" with renewed and desolate emphasis.

The Charleston Mercury is in the right. This insurrection of white republicanism against white oligarchy, of white free labor against white feudalism, of white civilization against white barbarism, of which Missouri has sounded the tocsin, will not be quelled by the scourge and the bowie-knife. Its triumph may be delayed by the efforts of the fanatics of Slavery. Violence on the Western frontier—perverse legislation, and more perverse judgment at Washington may impede the advance of right and reason for awhile,—but neither border violence, nor perverse legislation, nor more perverse judgment, nor the factitious prosperity of the cotton-planting States, nor the insane ambition of the men of "manifest destiny," can permanently contend with success against the gathering might of millions of freemen, who must and will enter upon the lands made desolate by improvidence and ignorance, to enjoy them, to plant them and to reap the rich harvests of righteous labor and of honorable industry.

Let our readers fix their eyes, then, attentively upon this coming insurrection of the whites—for it involves a boundless hope for our country, and indicates a great Providential interference in our national policy. It is to be encouraged in every way, and in every way can be legitimately encouraged. Whatever swells the growth of the Western States, and moves capital, laborers, intelligence onward towards the valley of the Mississippi, contributes to the deliverance of the people from this paralyzing incubus of the peculiar institution. The activities of domestic enterprise and internal commerce are the magnificent ministers of this great work; and, while lending our aid to them, we may well afford to contemplate with greater calmness and more assured confidence the angry issue of the moment, which may affect, but is powerless to avert, the impending revolution. The fate of Kansas is beyond the reach of Border-Ruffians and Southern dreamers, and though we should not bate one jot of energy and effort to secure that young Commonwealth from outrage and from wrong, we may look forward without a fear to the day when the State which has bred her the most of outrage and of wrong, will stand by her side in the vanguard of Western freedom, wealth and prosperity.

Cleaning the Streets.

For two successive nights Mr. REYNOLDS has endeavored, with all the means in his power, to make an effective beginning of the street-cleaning process in the thirteen Wards which are now entrusted to his care. Each time he has been interfered with, and night before last two hundred Policemen were required to preserve the peace. The assailants are instigated by those ex-contractors and Ward Inspectors, who have been Mr. EBLING'S principal mediums of plunder during his term of office. They have succeeded in persuading the laborers, who would otherwise have been rejoiced to find employment, that after the first removal of dirt shall have taken place, the machines invented by Mr. ROBERT A. SMITH will supplant them, and that their carts and spades will, thenceforth, be uncalled for. Hence, they consider the new contractor as their personal enemy, and, accordingly, seek to prevent him from doing his duty.

By one word or sign from Mr. EBLING this illegal movement could be utterly broken up. The inspectors for the different Wards are appointed by him, and he is responsible for the iniquities they perpetrate. They are behind the scenes in this matter, and when their first effort shall have failed, as, thanks to the aid of the police, it will fail, they boast of having a still more odious plan in reserve, which we shall expose and call upon the public to frustrate in due time.

We had occasion, some weeks ago, to animadvert upon the rascalities of Mr. EBLING'S Ward employés; upon the manner in which they violate the laws, levy black mail on lumber and shipping merchants, and otherwise sell the interests of the City. They are paid about six hundred dollars annually, but their places are sometimes made to yield from three to four thousand dollars, the surplus being obtained by dishonest practices. They now come forward, not for the first time, as the last forlorn hope of corruption in street matters, and, unless strictly watched by the public, may plunge the City back into the chaos from which it is trying to emerge. A threat from the Commissioner who controls them—even an intimation, which is meant to be regarded—will restore confidence to the laborer, and Mr. REYNOLDS will be unmolested; but such a hint, we apprehend, will not be given.

The wages of the Corporation for laborers are one dollar and a half a day, work being given for only three days in the week. This would amount to an average of less than five dollars a week. Mr. REYNOLDS' promises permanent employment to a large body of men at one dollar and a quarter a day, for all the days of the week, which is an increase, in reality, of nearly three dollars on City wages. Yet the poor workmen, who would be rejoiced at this method of increasing their income, by night occupation, are insanely deterred from engaging with Mr. REYNOLDS, lest they should not be hired for a sufficient length of time. They are harming themselves only, for men can be brought into the City from elsewhere, if they cannot be engaged here, and the authorities are determined, at every hazard, to protect the present contractors in carrying out their plans; but how infamous are those who pull the wires by which the movements of these misguided individuals are directed.

In spite of all obstacles the lower Wards of the City begin to assume an improved appearance, and, ere ten days elapse, they will be in better order, we trust, than they have been for many months.

DOWN WITH THE DUST!—To-day is the FIRST of APRIL. Aside from the usual cause of rejoicing which such an announcement would involve, it will now be matter of special exultation, because the streets can now be sprinkled. For the last ten days the whole City has been enveloped in a dense cloud of dust. The dirt which Hercules unloaded augean loft had allowed to accumulate for the season, had been reduced to powder, which was swept by the wind into every room of every house,—into every seam of every garment, and into the eyes, ears, noses and mouths of every man, woman and child in the metropolis. The City for all that time has been as dry and dusty as the Barcan desert. The dwellers upon Broadway have contributed, as usual, towards sprinkling the streets,—but this was not allowed by law! The Croton Aqueduct Board has made a rule,—which strikes us as utterly absurd in its inflexibility,—forbidding the use of the Croton water for such a purpose until the 1st of April:—and for the sake of upholding that rule the whole City has been compelled to undergo the discomforts and to incur the serious damage arising from the clouds of dust in which it has been enveloped.

But, to-day, the blockade is removed. The water has permission to run. The street-sprinklers will, probably, be at work from early morn to dewy eve. And we may hope again to breathe something less offensive and less deadly than the dirt which has fed our lungs for a fortnight past.

What Next in China?

The position in which the British Government finds itself at this moment with regard to China, furnishes an excellent exemplification of the difficulties with which every civilized nation has to contend,—which, in its dealings with barbarous Oriental races, is expected to secure its own safety, without infringing the code of honor in use in the West. The European diplomatist at an Eastern Court finds himself in a position in which the training received at the Courts of Christian monarchs is all but worthless. He finds that the authorities which, all through his career, he has been accustomed to cite, are unknown or disregarded; he finds fear to be the only restraint upon the worst and wildest passions; he finds strength the only measure of right and law; he finds public opinion powerless, and finds honor and duty voiceless.

In transacting business with the Turk, Persian or Chinaman, the Frank, in order to gain the very smallest and meanest of his ends, has either to descend to trickery, or resort to bullying. If he cheat or deceive he not only outrages his own conscience, and does violence to his own prejudices, but calls down on himself the contempt of the whole of that portion of the world whose good opinion he most values. If he threatens, he must now and then put his threats into execution, and the result is bloodshed and broils, which naturally enough lay him open to the imputation of reckless disregard of human life.

There are few things, strange as the assertion may seem, so difficult as to bully with discretion and success. To bully and gain nought by one's bullying, is virtual ruin and overthrow. A high tone should never be assumed unless the force that can be used in support of it is amply sufficient to justify it. An arrogant demeanor is called pluck and high spirit when backed up by 200,000 men. When based on 50,000 only it is often simply ridiculous. To threaten an Eastern nation with penalties you have not the means of enforcing, is to throw aside all held on it. If the Emperor of Russia had succeeded in the recent war with Turkey, and installed himself as the real ruler of the Christian subjects of the Porte, MENSCHIKOFF'S pranks at Constantinople would have the eccentricities befitting the emissary of an irresistible potentate. As it is, Turk and Christian laugh at them as the follies of an old fanatic. If the British had succeeded in the Cabul expedition, it would have prevented the Sikh war, the carnage of Chillianwallah, and the dear-bought victory of Sobraon. Orientals are remarkable above all things for accepting facts, of judging of your rights by your powers. If you drub them well, they at once conclude you are justified in doing so or you would not have done it. If you refrain from drubbing them when you have received provocation, they at once conclude that you are afraid, and are therefore in the wrong. In manufacturing a "note" the European or American diplomatist appeals to his adversary's reason, cites precedents, and authorities. Upon an Eastern Mandarin or Vizier—this is all thrown away. He is trained in the morality of despotism; he never does things he would rather not do from any better motive but fear. We therefore say to him, not—"You promised to do so-and-so; I call on you to fulfill it for the sake of your own honor, and in the interest of public faith and morality,"—but "You have made an agreement; my government is powerful—its guns are heavy—its crews are brave; if you do not fulfill it, I shall cause your palace to be beaten about your ears, and hundreds of your countrymen to be massacred. The survivors will then most probably cut off your head."

The latter arguments are the only ones to which he has all his life been accustomed to pay deference; and, consequently, the only ones which produce any effect on him. But they grate on the ears of the Christian public at home, who can rarely be got to believe or understand that all mankind have not progressed in the same ratio as themselves, or that the wisdom of Washington or Loudon may be the folly of Constantinople or Pekin.

The dispute of the British with China is deplorable, not so much in the cause which has given rise to it, as in the fact that it is not likely to have any satisfactory ending. If the British have at their command the means of coercing the Chinese into submission, we think the quarrel would have been on the whole a piece of good fortune for everybody. But the last news shows clearly they have not. Canton is burnt down—but what then? Suppose all the towns on the coast were burnt down—what then? There is still an immense empire lying within, densely populated with fanatics, who may be butchered like sheep, but who, their fanaticism once fairly roused, will never surrender. To march an army into the interior is out of the question. All the troops in India are not sufficient for an enterprise like this. A blockade is just the thing the Chinese Government likes. After six months of slaughter, poisoning and bombardment, matters will in all likelihood stand in just the position they now occupy, with just this difference: that the Chinese will say, "We thought the foreign barbarians were very powerful; we have seen the worst they can do, and what is it after all?" Whether the war continues, or is brought to a close by the triumph of Radicals and the Tories, the result will be pretty much the same—the decline of foreign influence in China.

The point which has been raised by Mr. COBDEN, and dwelt upon so much by many of his friends, that the name of the lorcha which was seized was no longer de jure on the British register at the time of her seizure, is a good illustration of the love for pettifogging by which that gentleman has always shown himself animated in the field of foreign politics. In discussing questions of domestic economy he is clearheadedness and foresightedness themselves. Once he crosses the Channel, and gets into the misty domains on which URQUHART has long been a most indefatigable but most unsuccessful hunter, he seems unable to see two yards from his nose. He discusses great questions of war and peace much in the spirit in which an Old Bailey lawyer moves to quash an indictment. He carps and quibbles, raises a whoop of triumph over a wrong word or a mistake in a date. No Chinese could understand the British allowing an outrage, such as the seizure of a vessel bearing her flag, to pass unnoticed because her register had run out by a week. They did not know this, and the whole question turns on their knowledge and their animus. To apply the technicalities of the common law to dealings with Mr. Commissioner YEH, is a piece of absurdity, of which the great Anti-Corn-Law agitator should be the last to be guilty. YEH, we venture to assert, does not suffer a culprit to escape decapitation who, being charged with having stolen a loaf on the first day of the month, pleads, in arrest of judgment, that he stole it on the tenth. He is, by no means, likely to appreciate in others a respect for formalities in penal proceedings which he never feels himself, and which he would certainly ascribe to any motive rather than the true one.

GOING TO THE COUNTRY.—This is the expressive way of putting it, when a British Minister, finding he can no longer command a majority of votes in Parliament, determines to make a direct appeal to the people in a new election. This is what Lord PALMERSTON is now going to do in reference to the China war, and, though there is every prospect of his being sustained by the country, yet, to make all sure, and remove every cause of popular disaffection, he performs an act of justice which he would not, probably, otherwise have done; thus giving an exemplification of the power of public opinion even in a monarchical Government. The case of the two Crimean Commissioners, Sir JOHN MCNEIL and Colonel TULLOCH, has before been alluded to in our columns. The report of these officers condemnatory of the conduct of Lords LUCAN and CARDIGAN, General AIREY and Colonel GORDON, was disapproved by a Board of General Officers to whom they appealed, and the Government, by bestowing no mark of favor on the Crimean Commissioners seemed to take sides against them. But the people gave an unqualified decision in favor of General MCNEIL and Colonel TULLOCH, which stirred the Government up to the necessity of tendering them some reward for their services; and accordingly they were awarded a thousand pounds each, which they promptly declined. The offer of money in such a case was construed as an affront, and the popular dissatisfaction was more loudly expressed than before. Lord PALMERSTON was in a dilemma, but there was only one way to escape from it, and that he took. By the last mail from England, it appears that the Premier offered a resolution in Parliament recommending that the Queen should bestow some mark of her approval upon the Crimean Commissioners. The resolution was passed, and it amounts to a reversal of the judgment pronounced upon the incapable officers by the Court of Generals. It is one of the most striking exemplifications we have seen of the power of public opinion in Great Britain; and it shows how necessary it is to the preservation of popular rights for the Government to be compelled occasionally to go to the country for support. It is rarely that our own Government ever shows such a marked deference to the popular will.

THE BURDELL MURDER.—The following paragraph appears in yesterday's Evening Post. Whether it has any foundation in fact, or is merely a floating rumor, we have no means of judging. It belongs to that class of news which is significantly described as being "important if true:"

"We understand that the counsel of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM and ECKEL are confident of their acquittal on the charge of murdering Dr. HARVEY BURDELL. They say that they are able not only to establish their clients' innocence, but to give the name of the actual murderer, and show how the deed was done. The rumor that Judge WHITING was engaged as senior counsel in the case is incorrect. Ex-Judge DEAN is associated with Mr. CLINTON on behalf of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM, and Judge GRAHAM on behalf of ECKEL."

WHOLESALE FALSEHOODS.—An afternoon sheet yesterday amused itself by publishing an announcement of President BUCHANAN'S death, and also by circulating a story that the cause of the epidemic at the National Hotel, Washington, had been discovered to be the use of a chest of tea which had been poisoned by the Chinese for the British and American Markets. By way of adding zest to the news, the startling statement was added, that thousands of chests similarly prepared had been sent to Great Britain and the United States. It is scarcely necessary to add that the whole story was an impudent and criminal fabrication.

HOW TO ESCAPE THE COMET.—A young New-Yorker, yesterday, on reading the announcement that a comet had been discovered by the Astronomers at the National Observatory, moving eastward, remarked that he would go out West to escape from it.

Note from a Railroad Conductor.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I notice in your paper of yesterday, the 30th inst., an article entitled "Impertinence of a Railroad Conductor," to which, on account of its gross perversion of facts, I feel bound, in justice to myself, to reply. On the day the occurrence referred to by your correspondent is said to have taken place, a lady beckoned to me from the door of a store in the avenue (not from the sidewalk) to stop my car, which I instantly did. After what I considered a somewhat unreasonable delay, she got upon the platform, when I immediately rang the bell for the driver to go ahead. She took a look inside the car, and observed, "You have no seats," (room there certainly was,) and requested me to let her out. I replied, "You should have asked me if I had a seat for you before you got in." She rejoined, "It was your duty to tell me you had no seats." I then said to her, that "It was no part of my business to volunteer information of that kind;" and I submit, with due deference to the opinion of the whole traveling public, who are at all acquainted with the position of the conductor of a City railroad car, that it was a perfectly proper reply. By this time the car stood still, and the lady stepped off.

Asks the distance I "allowed the car to proceed," and the length of time I gave myself to reply, I leave others to judge, when I have stated the fact, that the lady got on the car in the middle of a block, and that I left her on the crossing at the next corner, and that one half minute is the time ordinarily consumed in running a block.

JESSE W. CONKLIN,
Conductor of Car No. 43.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, March 31, 1857.

We very gladly give place to this explanation. Waiving the matter of personal discourtesy, which is charged by the lady and denied by the conductor, the whole case turns on the point, whether the conductor of a car which is already full, ought to "volunteer information" to that effect. Mr. CONKLIN appeals to the traveling public for support in saying that this is no part of his business. We think it should be made his business,—and that of the Company which employs him, not only to give "information" of this kind—but to refuse to receive any more passengers, after the car is already filled.

What has become, by the way, of the proposition which was before the Common Council to this effect? Have satisfactory reasons for dropping it been given by the Railroad Companies who would be affected by it?

Wallack's Theatre.

The Rev. Mr. MILMAN'S tragedy of "Fazio," was produced here last night with Miss MATILDA HERON in the part of the unhappy heroine. It would be difficult to find a play more entirely suited to her powers than this, which,—although faulty in point of construction, and frequently absurd in respect to diction,—has a good tangible story and many situations of decided dramatic interest. Bianca is a favorite character with actresses, and we presume Miss HERON has long claimed it for her own. The perfection of her performance last night assures us that she has made every thought, every motion, every exclamation of that unhappy individuality a profound study.

It is an unfortunate thing that with an old play it is impossible to say anything new on the spur of the moment; even when prodigiously fine acting is lavished on it. The only comfort about MILMAN'S play is that the pompous fustian of the dialogue always admits of a pleasant expression of contempt, but its strong glutinous consistency, and the savage splendor of an occasional image redeem it from the vice of dullness. After the faint pleasures of Mrs. HOWE'S dish, the strong savor of this is not unpleasant. Illuminated with the intense significance of Miss HERON'S inimitable art, the character of the heroine enlists our sympathies from the opening scene to the final one (which, by the way, has been somewhat injudiciously cut.) The growth, the culmination of pure womanly passion, are depicted with a force which we are persuaded Miss HERON has not heretofore approached. In the later scenes of the play, where she lies bound midst the dire consequences of her own passionate acts, her pathos was painful, heart-rending. The scene in the fifth act, where Fazio is led out to execution whilst Bianca remains motionless and unconscious, was intense and peculiar, but the sudden change of scene which ensues, renders its elaboration a little absurd. Mr. MILMAN, however, pays no regard to time and place, and the fault is with the author rather than the actress.

As a whole, Miss HERON'S Bianca is the best sustained and most remarkable of her impersonations. There are fewer of her own mannerisms in it, more grace, more womanly earnestness than in Medea or Leonora. While we appreciate Miss HERON'S good taste in avoiding hackneyed rôles, we feel sorry that this superb impersonation was not placed before us at an earlier period of the season.

Mr. DYOTT played vigorously and well. Mrs. ALLEN is a charming lady, but she appeared to be ill at ease in the character of Aldabella, and in truth that rôle seems to be somewhat beyond her powers.

OLE BULL'S CONCERT.—OLE BULL gave a second concert at Dodworth's Rooms last evening, which was announced as his second grand farewell. The room was crowded to its utmost capacity. OLE BULL never played better than on this occasion, and the audience received him with a fever of enthusiasm. The novelty of the evening was the concerto in E flat, for the violin, in three parts, never before played here by this distinguished artist; it is quite needless to say how perfect was his execution. Miss VICTORIA GILLER, except that her rendering of "Home, Sweet Home," lacked expression and intensity, made a very favorable impression. M. GASPARONI, in one of his pieces, was not in excellent tune. The tenor, Mr. GIANONI, with an air of abandon and a fair voice, made a pleasant sensation. OLE BULL'S adagio, to the accompaniment of Mr. MORGAN on the Alexandre Organ, was an exquisite performance. Nor must Mr. TIMM'S conscientious labor in the arduous task of accompaniment be passed without honorable mention; no artist is more praiseworthy than Mr. TIMM.

Are Ticket Swindlers Protected by Law?

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: At the close of a police report for Saturday, I read these words:

"The magistrate then admonished him not to repeat the offence, and told him to go about his business."

The magistrate was Mr. Justice CONNOLLY; the culprit, a scoundrel keeping an office in West-street near the Jersey Ferry; the offence, cheating a soi-disant Russian Prince out of a considerable sum of money; the business he was told to go about, swindling strangers, the ignorant and the untraveled, by selling them spurious for genuine tickets ostensibly securing passage over the New-Jersey Railroad. These tickets, when the defrauded present them upon the cars, prove entirely worthless, or else are second-class tickets, for which they have paid first-class price.

In addressing you, Mr. Editor, it is not, let me premise, with the design of controverting any of these facts. On the contrary, I admit them all. I have myself seen the office in question. I have watched the runners stationed at the corner of West and Cortlandt, and about the real ticket office over the way I have seen the laboring man with his bundle, the stranger, embarrassed with wife, children, handbox and carpet-bags; bewhiskered gentlemen of foreign nativity, seized by these reprobates, and carried off to the bogus office to be cheated with impunity. I have been led at times to regard the institution as under the especial patronage of the police, as I have seen the runners interrupt a friendly chat with the policeman of the station, to call out to a passenger "Tickets to Philadelphia? This way, Sir. The office is moved two or three doors down West-street," and take the party in charge, while the star moved off in the other direction. At other times, I have supposed the concern to be under the secret guardianship of the New-Jersey Railroad Company, as it certainly has their "forward deck" tickets to sell, and its employes mingle on the most confidential terms with those of the railroad. The point, however, is hardly relevant. It is a question of law, not of fact, I want light upon.

Is there no law by which mock-auctions, bogus ticket-offices, and similar impudent swindling shops of the City, may be closed? Is there no law by which Peter Funks may be punished? If you tell me no, then, at the risk of being accused of impertinent interference, I beg to protest against the treatment these men are exposed to. They are acting, if not against, then according to law. They are nevertheless, dragged every day from their places of business, hurried before a Magistrate, and "compelled to disgorge"—that is the phrase, I believe,—the legal profits of their trade, at the instance of some lawfully plundered accuser. To be sure, they are never punished. The return of the money, and an admonition are the worst. But if they have violated no law by what right are they arrested, threatened, obliged to disgorge, admonished? Why have they not their action of false imprisonment against their persecutors? If they have violated a law what measure of shame, contempt, and what severity of punishment should be spared the Police and Police Magistrates, prosecuting officers, and Grand Jurymen, who connive at the continuance of this atrocious system of fraud, stealing and pocket-picking? If there is no law, how shamefully the State Legislature, which, while perpetually and needlessly legislating about City affairs, has allowed this flagrant crime to escape without prohibitory law or penalty? If they have violated a law, why, in face of the notorious fact that thousands support themselves by the practice, are the culprits admonished and sent about their business—this business? The whole subject is a muddle. I cannot think otherwise than that, if the law cannot reach this gigantic wrong, it is time law should be suspended and the will of the people installed in its stead. It is high time for a Committee of Safety. W.

MARINE MATTERS.

Steamship New-York Libeled.

The steamship New-York, one of MCSTEMON'S line of Glasgow steamers, was yesterday libeled by the United States Marshal, to satisfy a claim of Capt. JOHN A. GARDNER, of Nantucket, for coal, wood, &c., supplied to that vessel in January last.

The New-York having run out of fuel on her passage from Glasgow, last Winter, was compelled to stop in the ice at the east end of Nantucket, and seek a supply from that town. Some one hundred tons were carted from the town for a distance of eight miles, a road having first to be shoveled through heavy snow-drifts all the way, requiring the services of about two hundred men; a large number of horses and carts were then employed to transport the coal from the town to the beach, whence it was hoated off to the vessel at great personal risk and exposure. The steamer was thus enabled to escape from her perilous situation, and $2,000,000 of property, or thereabout, was saved to the owners and Underwriters. Capt. GARDNER is the person who rendered this important and timely service, and who, instead of receiving payment for the labor bestowed by himself and his neighbors, has been compelled to institute legal proceedings to collect the bill. He alleges the most unhandsome treatment on the part of the captain of the steamer after he had obtained the supplies, and very uncivil treatment from the agents of the steamer on presenting himself at their office in this City for a settlement of his claim.

Steamers in Australia.

The Sydney Morning Herald of November 27, sets forth, with great particularity, a trial trip of the fine steamer Governor General, belonging to the Australian Steam Navigation Company, intended to run between Melbourne and Sydney. This fine steamer is the old New-Orleans which went from New-York to San Francisco, in the early history of the gold discovery, ran for a time between that place and Panama as an auxiliary steamer for the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and after a variety of ill fortune, was sent to Australia and sold for $200,000 in 1853. But she is now probably as good as new.

Immigrant Arrivals.

There were six arrivals of ships and steamers on Monday, each bringing from one to three hundred immigrants, most of them of the better class, and nearly all of whom have already embarked for their future homes in the West. The following are the names of the vessels, with the number brought by each:

Lady Franklin, from Liverpool..... 147 passengers
American Union, from Liverpool..... 265 passengers
Albion..... 319 passengers
Rattler, from Havre..... 213 passengers
City of Baltimore, from Liverpool..... 250 passengers Steamer New-York, from Glasgow..... 80 passengers making 1,267 in one day.

The steamers also brought about 50 cabin passengers.

The above arrivals make 24 vessels in all that have brought immigrants to this port during the month of March.

The Hamburg passenger and freight business has paid well during the last season, the Company owning the steamers Borussia and Hammonia having, it is said, divided 20 per cent. among their stockholders, as a net profit.

Two new steamers are to be added to the line, which are already in course of construction. Extensive dock accommodations have been secured for their business in Hamburg. Several new sailing vessels are also to be built, and that by next Spring the entire line will consist of four screw steamers, and nine sailing vessels.

Bark Adriatic and the Lyonnais.

The Bangor Whig and Courier of Monday has the following letter from Captain DUNHAM:

LA CIOTAT, Saturday, Feb. 28, 1857.

We arrived here the 10th inst., and finished discharging the 20th. On the 21st we had about half of our ballast in, and all cleared from the Custom House, and I was to have been paid my freights at 5 o'clock, and to have gone to sea the day after. At 4 o'clock an order came from Havre by telegraph from the owners of La Lyonnais to stop the freight and the vessel. I immediately went to Marseilles, and protested against the proceedings, and against the jurisdiction of the French Courts to try an American for an accident on the high seas. I have made a full statement of the case before the Consul; and both the mates and two men who were on board at the time of the accident, have gone to Marseilles to sign it. As soon as it is finished the Consul is going to send it to the American Minister at Paris. The Consul thinks that as soon as he receives it he will make a demand on the French Government for the immediate release of the vessel. * * * * All the Americans at Marseilles say it is the most absurd charge that they ever heard of, and that I can recover heavy damages for the detention it has caused. There cannot be found upon record another case like this—of the subjects of one nation attaching the property of another for a casualty that happened on the high seas, without the jurisdiction of any nation. I do not know what the owners of the Lyonnais expect us to do, unless it is to pay for the ship; for if she is insured, as the papers state, I should think they would think they stood a better chance of getting their money from the underwriters.

Naval.

The steam frigate Niagara is to-day delivered by the commandant of the Navy Yard to the custody of Capt. HUDSON and his officers, who have been directed to report for service. Her coal is all on board, the painting and carpenters' work are about done, her sails are being bent, and everything will be in readiness for her trial-trip on Tuesday next. She will be gone a week, when, if everything proves satisfactory, she will immediately depart for England. Her guns will be left behind to enable her the better to perform the service of laying the telegraphic cable.

The Mississippi will be ready for sea by the 1st of May, as per order from the Department. The whole number at present employed in the Navy-Yard is about 1,600. The store-ship Supply will be dispatched in a few days for the Brazil station. The Wabash, the flagship of the home squadron, lies at anchor off the Battery, The receiving-ship North Carolina is to be dismantled, and to have new masts and rigging throughout. There are now about 300 recruits on board, the numbers not very rapidly increasing.

The engines on board the new steam frigates Roanoke and Colorado, now lying at the Portsmouth Navy-Yard, are said to work with entire satisfaction, and to be of superior workmanship to any others in use in the navy. They were made in Richmond.

The United States frigate Merrimac, from Norfolk, arrived below Boston on Monday, and was ordered into quarantine.

☞ Steamers of the Hartford line hereafter leave Peck-slip (E. R.) at 4 o'clock P. M.

☞ The Washington Union states that the usual Tuesday morning receptions at the Executive mansion will be discontinued until further notice.

The number of fire-arms completed and proved at Liege, during the seven years from 1850 to 1856 inclusive, was 3,461,503. 10,000 or 12,000 workmen are employed in this trade at Liege. The value of the arms exported during 1856 was 11,084,622 francs.

Harbor Encroachments.

In pursuance of a call of the merchants, ship owners, underwriters, and others interested in the commerce of this City, a large and respectable meeting convened at 1 o'clock this day, in the Insurance Buildings, Wall-street, to consider and take such action as was thought advisable on the Report of the Commissioners on Harbor Encroachments.

Hon. MOSES H. GRINNELL was called to the Chair, and A. A. Low was appointed Secretary.

P. PERIT, Esq., then stated the object of the meeting, and in a forcible and earnest manner, the important subjects which had called them together. Much feeling and interest were manifested by property holders, merchants, and others, in the immediate importance of restraining, by the action of the Legislature, further encroachments upon our Harbor, and that the Report of the Commissioners, defining the lines of the Harbor, should be legally adopted and enforced.

The following resolutions were offered by Mr. PERIT, and seconded by a speech of A. B. NEILSON, Esq., President of the Board of Underwriters:

Whereas, The Commissioners on Harbor Encroachments have, after a thorough survey of the Harbor of New-York, conducted under the supervision of Professor BACHE, Superintendent of the United States Coast Survey, described lines as the suitable limits for docks and piers in the waters of the port; and

Whereas, The lines so described have the well-considered approval of the said Commissioners, and of their advisory council, consisting of Professor BACHE, General TOTTEN, Chief Engineer of the United States, and Commander DAVIS, of the United States Navy; and

Whereas, It is of paramount importance to the commercial interests of this City, and of the State, that such lines be adopted by the Legislature as will prevent further injury to the harbor; and

Whereas, The said Commissioners have also recommended to the Legislature for adoption regulations for the government of the Harbor, which have received the unanimous sanction of the Chamber of Commerce; and although occasional objections and opposing interests may, and under such circumstances will be interposed, even private interests are liable to conflict with the public good, this meeting is of opinion that the lines recommended by the science, skill and perseverance combined in this commission, so well and favorably known, are the best that could be suggested for the future security and prosperity of the Harbor of New-York.

Therefore, be it Resolved, That this meeting do most earnestly recommend that the Legislature shall adopt the lines described by the Commissioners for the limits of docks and piers in the Harbor of New-York, and the several bills recommended by the Commissioners for the government and regulation of the port.

Remarks were made by JOHN A. STEVENS, Esq., R. B. MINTURN, Esq., and several others, showing the continual and increasing dangers to our commerce from the encroachments, which were of daily and unceasing occurrence, and the salutary action of the Harbor Commissioners in restraining for the past two years the tendency to encroach.

It was asserted that it was the well-grounded conviction of our merchants, that unless some positive legislative inhibition be at once imposed, these encroachments will be carried to such an extent as to lead to the ultimate destruction of the harbor.

Involving, as this matter does, the interests of every merchant, mechanic, and property holder in our City, it was urged that the necessity was imperative, either to adopt the lines recommended, or to make such supervision as will secure from further peril the navigable waters of this great port.

It was stated the regulations submitted in the report of the Commissioners for the government of the port had received the critical examination and the unanimous approval of the Chamber of Commerce at the largest meeting convened during the past year.

On motion of JOHN C. GREEN, Esq., it was moved that a Committee be appointed to proceed to Albany, and lay before the members of the Legislature the views of merchants and others interested in this great question.

The Chair appointed as such Committee:

J. De Peyster Ogden, Wm. K. Strong, John David Wolfe, Pelatiah Perit, Isaac Bell, Jr., Andrew Foster, A. B. Neilson, Robt C Goodhue, Russell Sturgis, John A. Stevens, Isaac Townsend, Peter Lorillard, Royal Phelps, A. A. Low, Anson G. Phelps, John D Jones, Mort. Livingston, Wm. B. Crosby, Robert B. Minturn, Simeon Draper, Chas. H. Russell, Thomas Tileston, Geo F. Talliman, John C Green, Henry Chauncy, Henry Grinnell, E. G. Faris, E. D. Morgan, Geo. W. Blunt, N. L. McCready, J. Phillips Phœnix, Wilson G. Hunt,——Hazard.

It was further Resolved, That the proceedings of the meeting should be published in the morning papers; whereupon the meeting then adjourned.

M. H. GRINNELL, President.

A. A. Low, Secretary.

The Hundred-Mile Race.

From the Albany Journal, Tuesday.

This extraordinary trial of horses, and what may be termed a cruel treatment of dumb beasts, came off yesterday, and caused considerable excitement in our city. At the corners of the streets, all day long, there were to be seen congregated together crowds of men and boys discussing the merits of the race and the respective qualities of the horses. The telegraph hourly reported the progress of the race, which, together with home-manufactured reports, increased the excitement. It was not until nightfall, and the result known, that the crowd dispersed.

Notwithstanding the heavy roads and the snow drifts through which the horses passed, they made eighty-two miles in seven hours and fifty minutes, to Ilion, when both horses were side by side. At a mile east of Frankfort, DALTON'S horse gave out and was put in stable, when TAYLOR'S horse was blanketed and kept moving on a walk towards Utica. After walking for two hours, DALTON was seen coming up, when the blankets were removed, and both nags were moving towards the goal at good speed. TAYLOR reached Utica at 5 o'clock, DALTON six minutes behind him. TAYLOR run to Whitesboro, four miles, in twenty-two minutes; thus running the hundred miles, in twelve hours and twenty-two minutes. DALTON put up his horse one mile this side of that place. After stopping at Frankfort he was informed that TAYLOR'S horse was staggering along the road, and, feeling assured that his horse could walk the distance, he was persuaded to start out, but when within a few miles of Utica he found that he had been deceived. In passing through Little Falls the horses took different streets, which some supposed might lead to a dispute in deciding the race, but this the judges, and even DALTON himself, allowed was of no importance, as the distance was the same. There is no disputing the fact that the race was a cruel one, and the parties themselves are glad that it is over with. The horses this morning were in one stable, and in as good condition as could be expected.

Dreadful Accident on the Illinois Central Railroad—Five Men Killed and Eight Injured.

From the Chicago Press, March 28.

We learn from a gentleman who arrived yesterday from La Salle that a frightful accident occurred on Thursday morning on the Illinois Central Railroad, near La Salle. About 7 o'clock in the morning, the gravel train, loaded with laborers, who work along the line, started from La Salle southward. The train crossed the bridge all right, and as the engine came on to the embankment on the other side of the bridge, it all at once gave way, and the whole train was precipitated a distance of probably twenty-five feet. Four men were killed on the spot, and one died a few hours afterwards. Eight others were severely injured, some with broken legs, arms, &c. The engineer and fireman escaped with their lives, though somewhat injured. The marvel is that so many escaped.

The heavy rains of last Sunday, along with the general thaw that ensued, had so softened the embankment that it appeared as soft and as incapable of bearing up a train as the softest kind of mud. Whenever the engine came off the bridge it seemed as if it had fallen over a precipice.

But disastrous as the occurrence has proven, it seems providential that it is not much more fatal. The passenger train that ought to have passed over the road at that point on Wednesday night, by some trivial accident was delayed, and did not arrive at the fatal spot till after the gravel train was wrecked. As it was loaded with passengers, bound up in close cars, the sacrifice of life that would have attended its attempt to cross must have been much larger.

Our informant did not learn the names of the dead and injured. They were all Irishmen.

A Noble Benefaction.

From the National Intelligencer.

We have not for a long time heard of so noble and praiseworthy an act of private munificence as was brought to our notice on Saturday last by the excellent financial Secretary of the American Colonization Society. It was no less than a gift of twenty-five thousand dollars in one sum to the Colonization cause. The following letter from a mercantile firm in New-Orleans briefly tells the interesting story:

NEW-ORLEANS, Saturday, March 21, 1857.

Rev. W. McLain, Secretary American Col. Society:

DEAR SIR: At the request of our mutual friend, DAVID HUNT, of Rodney, Miss., you will please find enclosed draft of Union Bank, this city, upon Bank of the Republic, New-York, at 70 days' date, payable to your order, for twenty-five thousand dollars, ($25,000,) being a donation from Mr. HUNT to the Colonization Society. Mr. HUNT is now full of years and the executor of his own benevolence. Please advise him of the receipt of the within, and much oblige yours, very respectfully,

THOS. HENDERSON & PEALE.

It is due to the generous donor of the above princely sum to say that it is not the solo act of liberal support which he has performed for the philanthropic cause of colonization. Of that cause he has ever been a devoted friend, and has given annually, during several years, five hundred dollars; and a little more than a year ago he gave, at one time, five thousand dollars.

Conviction of Ward, the Sylvania Murderer.

The Toledo papers have been filled for some time past with the records of the trial of RETTAN J. M. WARD, for the murder of his wife at Sylvania. On Thursday the jury returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree. The wretched prisoner received the announcement with stoical indifference The Blade sums up the result of the trial as follows:

"The case is one of the most extraordinary on record. The evidence going to show the identity of the remains as those belonging to the body of Mrs. WARD, is exceedingly slight; and yet, so strong are the circumstances which point to the guilt of the prisoner, and so overwhelming the train of evidence against him, that the jury have had no difficulty in coming to a positive conclusion in regard to the matter, and will be fully sustained by the verdict of popular opinion. So far as we are informed, there is not a doubt of the righteousness of the judgment which has been rendered.

The murder is one of the most brutal, horrid and disgusting, in all the annals of crime. A husband not only murders his wife, after cold-blooded premeditation, but he sits up nights, with his dead locked, cuts her into small pieces, and burns up her remains in the stove. This process occupied several days, in which time he drew largely on the shops around for shavings, and the unsavory scent went forth from the chimney, and filled the nostrils of those who happened to be in that vicinity. WARD occupied himself with this disgusting and appalling work, till he thought he had obliterated all traces of the guilt, and then defied detection. But 'murder will out.' It is amazing what an array of facts, unimportant in themselves, have been brought to bear on the case, and what an irresistible conviction of guilt they carry to the mind. WARD has not yet had his sentence, but he will be hung by the neck till he is dead, dead! We hear it said that his will be the first case of capital execution in this county."

Mrs. Patten and the New-York Insurance Companies.

From the Columbia (S C) Times.

New-York is a noble city. There is perhaps no place in the world more notable for its humanity and for the habitual practice of the highest virtues. We have had many examples of its philanthropy, but none more characteristic than one which recently presented itself. The captain of a large and valuable ship fell sick at sea. The wife seized the quadrant, in his dying condition, and steered the noble Neptune's Car and cargo in safety. Admiration for her bravery stood on tiptoe—the trumpet of Fame proclaimed her fortitude—the tongues of rumor reckoned her praises—the underwriters gave her one thousand dollars. Lo! magnificent! splendid charity! One thousand dollars to a heroine, and that too from the charitable and grateful hands of eight Insurance Companies with capitals large enough to insure a navy—one hundred and twenty-five dollars apiece for the safety of as many thousands. Under the same circumstances a Southern negro would have spurned it. But we don't understand New-York generosity. A thousand dollars to a noble woman may be quite enough for her daring courage; it may sustain her whilst she nurses her husband and sends him packing into the grave, and then perhaps she will find a workhouse, while her beneficiaries dine in the Fifth-avenue on their profits. She did not touch their souls by service.

The Indian Troubles in Florida.

A letter from Fort Myers, dated 8th of March, communicates the following intelligence:

Yesterday a party of JOHNSTON'S company, Florida mounted volunteers, arrived here from Fort Centre, having a squaw and child about a year old, which they captured on the 4th instant. The day before a warrior was shot, (the squaw's husband,) after being four times called to surrender. Both of these occurrences took place twenty miles north of Istokpoga Lake.

This morning an express arrived from Capt. STEVENSON, commanding in the Big Cypress, stating that Lieut. FREEMAN, with "G" Company, 5th Infantry, who were in advance, reconnoitering "Garden Hammock," near Bowlegstown, were fired on by the Indians. Lieut. FREEMAN was wounded severely in the arm, and three privates wounded. Capt. STEVENSON arrived at the scene of action next morning, with the remainder of his command, and made an attack, driving the Indians out, who fought gallantly for 15 minutes. The loss of the 5th Infantry is four killed, six wounded, and one missing. Loss of the Indians not known, though they were distinctly seen carrying off a number of bodies from the hammock. Capt. STEVENSON is of opinion that the Indians are going to make a stand there. Great excitement here, sending out troops, &c.

A letter of the 11th, from Fort Brooke, informs us that the above news is confirmed by official and private reports. We give an extract from this letter:

"Gen. HARNEY has left Fort Myers for the scene of action. None of the mounted artillery have gone as far as I know. The Indian squaw is to be turned loose in Bowlegstown to inform the Indians that Gen. H. is in Florida, and close after them, as up to this date the Indians are not aware that he is in Florida, so says the squaw."

A BOY FOURTEEN YEARS OLD CONVICTED OF MURDER AND SENTENCED TO DEATH.—In the Toronto Globe we find a detailed account of the trial of a boy named JAMES M'GARRIE, between thirteen and fourteen years old, for the murder of JAMES M'CULL, a boy nine years of age, in October last, in the township of Garafraxa, Canada. According to the evidence the murder was most deliberate and inhuman. Having had a quarrel with the boy M'CULL, he enticed him into the woods to get apples, and when there he beat him with a stick, and afterwards took a piece of a broken bottle, cut his throat with it, and inflicted gashes and cuts all over his body. He then stripped the body, tied it between two logs, and, with the clothes tied round in a bundle, left the scene. When questioned by M'CULL'S father he denied the murder, but afterwards confessed it, giving its horrible details. He escaped the vigilance of the officers for two weeks, but was subsequently captured. After the evidence was heard, the Jury, having retired a few minutes, gave a verdict of guilty of willful murder, with a recommendation to mercy. The Judge, before passing sentence, asked the boy if he had anything to say why the sentence of death should not be passed upon him, who replied, "I say they've sworn to a lie. Old SCOTT says he gave me $5, and he did not." He then sentenced him to suffer death by hanging on the 11th day of April next, stating that he would lay the whole facts before the Executive, but expressed the opinion that there was no hope of mercy from that quarter, on account of the horrible nature of his crime. During the whole trial the prisoner exhibited no signs of sensibility, and received the sentence with an air of callous and careless indifference.

HOMICIDE AT STOCKPORT, COLUMBIA COUNTY—ESCAPE OF THE MURDERER.—Two operators in the Paper Mill of Chittenden & Co., Stockport, Columbia county, named JOHN TEAL and HENRY CALKINS, had a falling out about their work on Monday last. TEAL reported CALKINS to his employers. Soon after CALKINS went to the room in which TEAL was engaged and commenced upbraiding him. TEAL was a powerful man, weighing 220, and CALKINS of a very light form. CALKINS called TEAL a liar, when T. sprang for him; but C. having a "knocker" made of hickory in his hand, dealt TEAL a most powerful blow over the left eye, causing the blood to flow freely. The parties were then separated. Two hours later TEAL sought C in the lower part of the building, and said to him that he told Messrs. C. & Co. that he would not strike him in the mill, but that as soon as he left he would give him the ——— licking he ever had. While TEAL was talking, CALKINS raised a piece of steam pipe, one inch in diameter and six feet long, and struck TEAL so heavy a blow over the right eye that it brought him to the floor, and crush in the skull. CALKINS immediately fled the village. TEAL lingered in great agony till Saturday night, when he died. CALKINS, who formerly resided in Troy, has been traced to Waterford, but there the trace was lost. Both parties are married men, and have children.

IRVING SAVING

NEW-YORK CITY.

Councilmen' Special Committee on Streets.

The investigation as to the causes of the present predicament of the streets, was resumed before the Committee on Tuesday, when the following evidence was given:

John Pasley, sworn: Is an Inspector of Streets in the Eighth Ward, under Mr. Mott, Superintendent of of Streets and Lamps. This witness gave some account of street cleaning in his Ward during 1855; paid his men ten shillings per day in that year, and 18 cents a load to cartmen; all the dirt collected in the Eighth Ward was dumped at Watt-street; has no interest in any of the carts employed in his Ward, nor does he receive any assistance from the Police in removing nuisances and preventing the violation of ordinances; gave bills last Fall to the workmen employed in his Ward; knew of a man who bought up quite a large amount of these due bills, paying nine shillings out of ten; the new contractors have as yet done nothing in the Eighth Ward; since Jan. 1, 1857; witness had been employed on no other district than Broadway; had only ten men on his roll since that date; the sales from the Eighth Ward were deposited at foot of Hammond-street; think the cost of cleaning his Ward during 1856, was between twelve and thirteen thousand dollars.

John M. Sherwood, sworn—Was the Inspector of the Third Ward in 1856; the dumping ground was at the foot of Vesey-street; an immense quantity of dirt is brought into Dey-street and West-street by the farmers; thinks the cost of cleaning that year could not be less than $13,000; thinks it cannot be done for less; from ten to fifteen loads of dirt are taken daily out of Dey-street; the cleaning of West-street and Washington-street is hardly completed before it is necessary to do the work again, the filth accumulates so very rapidly; in that year Broadway was cleaned every day.

Michael Burns, sworn—Is Inspector for the First Ward; employs on an average 23 men; has had as many as 30; number of carts will average 18 for dirt and seven for ashes; has paid as high as two shillings for cartiog; inspects his Ward three or four times every day; never owned a cart used for dumping; in the Summer season always cleaned the Ward once a week, and Broadway and Washington street three times a week; has to obtain a license from the Croton Aqueduct Department for permission to water the streets.

Adjourned until next day.

Teachers' Association.

A regular meeting of the Teachers' Association was held at Educational Hall, on Saturday evening, 28th inst., D. S. Scott, Esq., President, in the Chair. After the reading of the minutes, Mrs. Vaughan, a well-known thinker on the subject, presented some features of a new system of primary teaching, particularly in regard to the subject of Language. Her address was listened to with interest, and called forth commendatory remarks from Messrs. Harrison, Fanning and Scott, and a vote of thanks.

An essay, on the "Diffusion of Knowledge" was read by Mr. Jacob Fehrman, of Grammar school No 2, in the Seventh Ward. The essayist received a vote of thanks for his very creditable performance. The other business of the evening was of a routine sort. The number of members present was about thirty. This Association meets in a room of the Hall of the Board of Education—a small but comfortable room, its walls unadorned except by the fine portrait of Dr. Patterson, by Boggle. During the coming month the book cases are to be arranged about the walls, in which the Association Library will be disposed. This collection is but small as yet; they hope to make it the nucleus of a valuable professional one before long.

An Excellent Remedy.—Whoever is troubled with hoarseness, cough, or soreness of the throat, can apply an excellent and safe remedy by using Brown's Bronchial Troches, an invention by Messrs. John I. Brown & Son, of Boston, and which may be had of all our principal druggists. We have tried the article, and can safely recommend them in all cases of throat irritation. To singers and public speakers they are of great value. So much are they now used that counterfeits have appeared, of which the inventors and proprietors have warned the public. He that is troubled with any soreness of the throat can easily attest our words by a trial.

LONG ISLAND.

Death of the Sheriff of Kings County.

Jerome Ryerson, Sheriff of Kings County, died at his residence in Brooklyn at 4 o'clock yesterday morning, from congestion of the brain and lungs. Deceased was elected Sheriff in 1855. He has been unwell for several months past, but not to such a degree that he could not attend to the duties of his office most of the time. On Monday night he retired, apparently as well as he had been for some time, but about 3 o'clock yesterday morning it was discovered that he was dying. He was much respected by his acquaintances for many ennobling qualities.

Caspian A. Sparks, Under Sheriff, filed his bonds with the County Clerk yesterday as Sheriff, as required by the statute. Mr. Sparks has been Under Sheriff for seven or eight years.

Mr. Ryerson was about 40 years of age, and leaves a wife and several children. The funeral will take place on Thursday next, at 2 o'clock P. M., from his late residence at the jail, and will be attended by the Common Council, Board of Supervisors, and a large military force. The Board of Supervisors met yesterday afternoon, and adopted resolutions of respect to his memory.

Gas.

There is a prospect that the citizens of Brooklyn will be supplied, at no distant day, with gas at a reasonable rate. The Brooklyn Consolidated Gas Light Company propose to supply the public lights for $1 25 per thousand cubic feet, and in private houses at $2 50—to make no charge for metres, and besides removing all the odious restrictions of other Companies, they propose to furnish each consumer with twenty feet of service pipe, and as much more as each may want at actual cost. They want a contract to supply the city for ten years at the above prices, unless some other Company offers to furnish the gas at a less price, then the contract to be void. A Committee of the Council has reported in favor of entering into contract with this Company, and to give them permission to lay their pipes throughout the city. The report will be considered one week from next Monday night.

Getting Along.

Coroner Snell, of Brooklyn, is creating quite a furore. A few days since a gang under his advice censured a druggist and physician in the care of Beskman, who committed suicide, and on Monday Dr. Lapham, of New-York, was censured by one of his gang, they determining that a patient whom the Doctor lost at Greenpoint did not have the disease for which he was treating him.

Ragged School in Williamsburg.

The Industrial School, under the auspices of the ladies of Williamsburg, held their third anniversary on Monday evening, at Washington Hall, and it would be difficult to find a better-disciplined or better behaved group of children than were then assembled. One could scarcely identify the neatly-dressed boys and girls with the rag-pickers and beggars of a few months before, now transformed by the magic of cold water and kind treatment into presentable human beings. The children entered heartily into the spirit of the thing—recited well; sung, with the love of it.

There was a happy indifference to color; ebon faces shone here and there, and one little colored boy described the good deeds he was going to do in Kansas some day. The Treasurer's report was read—which was interesting in a certain degree, inasmuch as it gave one some idea of the amount of good which could be done with $1,056, the sum received and expended with a trifling reservation during the last year. Mr. Van Meter, of the Five Point's Mission, related some interesting anecdotes from his personal experience, and Rev. B. Peters, of the First Universalist Church, gave a short address. An impromptu collection was taken, and the sum of $46 20 raised thereby. The managers are anxious to raise funds for the purpose of a comfortable house to supersede the tumble-down old building which they occupy at present. They deserve it.

☞ An act was adopted by the Brooklyn Common Council Monday evening, empowering the city to issue bonds for the payment of outstanding claims against the late city of Williamsburg, the same to be paid by taxation upon that portion of the city.

Tuesday, March 31—P. M.

The employment of Money on the Street today was quite active, though the character of the demand indicates no signs of pressure, and the supply comes easy to the leading Discount and Stock Brokers at the current rates. As the out-door rates on paper still rule 1@2 ₱ cent. above the Bank rate, the offerings at most of the large Banks this week are pretty full. Trade is active in nearly all departments, and doing well in most of them. The exception are that the Northwestern collections are behind hand from last year's sales, and that the Import Market has been rather overstocked with some descriptions of fine goods, or we should, perhaps, say invoiced, at prices from the other side, (owing to the enhanced value of raw silk,) which cannot be made remunerative on this. The Cotton Market continues firm, and Cotton Goods are well sustained, the general report from the Eastern manufactories being satisfactory. The Railway traffic for the month now closing has been eminently satisfactory on the great trunk lines leading from the sea-board, and on most of the Western lines. The gross receipts of the New-York Central and Erie exceed, in each case, the income of March, 1856, by over a hundred thousand dollars, and the latter is still on the increase. The management of these important lines is, to all appearances, efficient and harmonious. The effect of these results in March, however, and of the general, not to say universal appearance of trade and money affairs throughout the country, is not reflected from the Stock Exchange, where a most determined, systematic, if not in some respects unscrupulous combination has been brought to bear, from day to day, against all values not supported, as some few of the leading railway bonds and shares happen to be, by European orders. With these exceptions, the market this afternoon closes much depressed and at the lowest points since the sailing of the last weekly steamer. New-York Central, 88⅜; Erie, 52⅞; Michigan Southern, 71¾; Illinois Central, 132½; Illinois Central Bonds, 102⅜; New-York Central 7 ₱ cents, 102½; Reading, 79⅜; Toledo, 72¾; Missouri State Sixes, 84, and Rock Island Shares, 99 ex dividend. The last named are dependent solely on the domestic demand, and have of late been so well sustained as to entail heavy and almost invariable loss upon the Bears who venture to include the Stock in their general onslaught. On the eve of closing the transfers they were compelled to make purchases and settlements at 106@107 ₱ cent.; large private settlements at the outside rate. To-day another line of shorts was entered upon at 105 with, and 99 without the five ₱ cent. dividend. The whole rise since the attack upon this security began last Fall, including the extra dividend in January, is equal to 25 ₱ cent. A similar result in almost any other dividend-paying stock, active at the Board, would not be out of the question, if the same care and determination about the market standing of the Stock were evinced by its managers and friends; so great are the short sales of almost all stocks in excess of the actual supply on the Street, and so true is it that most investment purchasers prefer to come in at liberal, rather than depressed prices.

The buyers and drawers of Sterling Exchange came together quite freely to-day at the advance of ⅛@¼ ₱ cent., which had been claimed by the leading banking houses, and a large business was done for the Africa at 108¾@⅞ for ready money, and 108½@⅝ in settlement of credits and on short indulgence to the buyer. Francs without alteration, 5.22½ net. Southern Bank bills 108⅝ on London, and 5.23¾ on Paris. The correspondent of the Rothschilds will make the usual shipment of about $800,000 in Gold bullion by this steamer. The free calls of Sterling to be paid for to-morrow, will probably increase the supply of Money offered on temporary loan by the private banking establishments. The New-York Sub-Treasury closes the market with a general balance of $15,471,426. There has been little or no change since Saturday last.

The profits of the year are 15 ₱ cent. on a capital of $7,500,000. The annual meeting of the Stockholders was held to-day, and after a spirited canvass, representing about 50,000 shares, the old Board of Directors was reelected. The contest was mainly on two names on the list. The Directors elect are: Messrs. John Wurts, Silas Holmes Jacob R. Le Roy, Wm. S. Herriman, Charles N. Talbot, Lora Nash, Edward J. Woolsey, Geo. T. Olyphant, Daniel B. Fearing, Robert Ray, Daniel Parish, Samuel B. Schieffelin, and Ahiel A. Low.

To-morrow, April 1, the Illinois Central Company will pay the half-yearly coupon on their Construction Bonds. The Southern Michigan Company will pay the remainder of the principal of their Income Loan of 1857. This payment has been going on since 25th inst., as the Bonds were presented. The interest on the Mineral Point Bonds due to-morrow, we are requested to say, will be paid at the Manhattan Bank.

The summary style in which the Herald has recently whipped round from the position of the special and even extravagant eulogist of the Chicago and Galena Railroad to the attitude of a fierce assailant of the line and its finances, has called forth a reply from an intelligent and well-advised correspondent at Chicago, whose communication we print in another place, without pretending to vouch for all the data, or to indorse the closing argument of the writer. It seems quite clear that we were not mistaken, the other day, in assuming that the sudden change against the stock was based on no new financial policy of the management. The mortgage loan said to be on the market is of two years' standing, and the unsold portion of it was distinctly referred to in the last annual report to the stockholders, as part of the ways and means of the concern, in the further improvement for extension of the line.

The resignation of Mr. Conover, as Cashier of the Importers' and Traders' Bank, takes effect to-morrow, April 1. Mr. Hampton, whose appointment as Assistant Cashier, was recently announced, will, for the present, act as Cashier. Mr. Conover intends to commence business on his own account at an early day.

The export of the leading articles of Domestic Produce and miscellaneous goods for the week is $1,795,749, against $1,600,374, the corresponding week of last year.

Money Circulars for Europe.

[Translated Extract.]

New-York, Tuesday, March 31, 1857.

The slackening in our Money market, although but slight, has continued with but little interruption since our last advices of 23d inst. The effect of this has, however, been scarcely perceptible upon stocks. There is in reality but very little disposition, at present, on the part of capitalists, to touch speculative kinds, and the transactions in railroad shares, which have been quite animated during the week, have been done mostly among a limited circle of operators. A sudden rise in several of the most prominent of these stocks was not sustained, and the daily fluctuations indicate rather lower prices than last week, and today the feeling at the close is one of heaviness. Investment stocks, such as City and Railroad Bonds, have been neglected. Money, if anything, rather easier, without alteration in rates. Exchanges on Europe are generally firmer, especially London. The bulk of the business was done, however, at 108¼@108⅜ for sterling, and 5.23¾@5.23¾ for Paris.

De Coppet & Co.

[Translated Extract.]

Per Africa.] New-York, Tuesday, March 31, 1857.

Our last advices were dated 23d inst. Money continues to work a little more favorably, but the rates of interest are without quotable change. The stock market, with the exception of railroad shares, has remained very dull, and the trifling advance that we have to notice is only exceptional. For a fortnight past the operators for a fall have made extraordinary efforts to counteract the upward tendency which the improving condition of the Money Market would seem to justify; but, to attain this end, they have been compelled to put out short contracts for an extraordinary amount of stocks. Upon this circumstance, in connection with the handsome receipts of the railways for the month of March, and the encouraging aspect of money affairs, those who are creating for a rise now place their chief reliance. The rate of Sterling Exchange has slightly advanced, but it still ranges below the point at which Specie can be shipped at a profit. The purchases of American Securities on European account have been trifling during the month of March. State Stocks a little more active. Missouri continues at 84; California 7s, 1875, are offered at 58, without takers, being 5¼ ₱ cent decline; Virginia, small sales, at 91⅞@⅞; Indiana at 83; North Carolina at 92¾; and Georgia at 92. City and County Bonds: We quote a few sales of Sacramento 10s at a slight depression. A few Milwaukee and Chicago Bonds have changed hands at previous prices. The last $100,000 of the St. Louis County Bonds have been taken, and the Boods are now held at 3 ₱ cent. advance. Railroad Bonds, dull. We quote a few sales of Erie 2d Mortgage at 95¾@⅞, and 3d Mortgages at 91@92; 1871s at 80@79; New-York Central Bonds, almost without sales, the 7s at 101¾@102; the 6s at 90. Illinois Central Construction Bonds, with limited sales, have advanced 1 ₱ cent. Sales of LaCrosse and Milwaukee Sinking Fund, 1st Mortgages, have been made at steady rates, and Racine and Mississippi 1st Mortgages, in fair amounts, at 2 ₱ cent. advance. Railroad shares active, at a slight decline. Erie has fallen ¼; N. Y. Central ¾; Panama ¾; Michigan Southern 1¼; Cleveland and Toledo ⅝; Chicago and Rock Island ¼; Hudson River ¾; Reading advanced ⅝; Michigan Central ¼; Illinois ⅛; Galena and Chicago ¼; Milwaukee and Mississippi ¼; La Crosse and Milwaukee ¼; Cleveland and Pittsburg, and Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati, without change. Money a trifle easier. On call 7 ₱ cent. First Class 8¼@10; Second Class 11@12; Stock Contracts 9@12. Exchanges—Large transactions. Sterling has advanced. Chief sales at 108¾. Francs 5.22½. Semi-Monthly Circular for Europe.

Extract.] New-York, Tuesday, March 31, 1857.

Since the issue of our last report, of 17th inst., the fluctuations in the Stock market have been frequent, but generally unimportant. For the last few days the tendency has been rather upward, but the advance has been mostly lost since yesterday morning, and prices are heavy at the close. In the speculative Railroad Shares business continues large; but in other securities, with few exceptions, there is little or no animation. The orders for investment, both for foreign and domestic account, are unusually limited. Without any material diminution in the demand, money matters have had an improving tendency, the supply having somewhat increased, notwithstanding a moderate curtailment by the Banks during last week. The disbursements by the Sub-Treasury, for the fortnight, have slightly exceeded the receipts, although the latter were large; and the export of specie being less than the receipts of Gold from California, the Specie reserve of the Banks is increasing. As a considerable proportion of the imports during the next three months will be left in bond, in order to obtain the benefit of the reduction of duties, after 1st of July next, the disbursements by the Government, in the meanwhile, will probably considerably exceed the revenue, and the Specie strength of the Banks be proportionally augmented. For State Stocks prices are generally steady. There have been large transactions in Missouri 6s at 84¾@83¾@84, and a moderate business in Virginia 6s at 91¾@92; North Carolina 6s at 92¾@93; Tennessee 6s at 87; Indiana 5s at 84@83, and 2¾s at 53; (s declins in the former of 2, and in the latter of 1 ₱ cent. from our last quotations;) Illinois Interest Stock at 86¾@90, (an advance of 3 ₱ cent.) California 7s; 1875, have been sold at 64@64¼, and 1870s at 64¼, but since the receipt of the unfavorable advices per Illinois, they are offered lower, without buyers. For Railroad Bonds the market has been without activity, and prices are slightly lower, except for Illinois Central and Chicago and Rock Island. Of the former the construction bonds are in fair demand, and the supply limited. The sales of the fortnight have been moderate at 101¾@102¾. Free lands, without privilege, are steady at 93, and the market continues bare of those with privilege. Chicago and Rock Island Railroad Bonds are held at 102¾, an advance of 2 ₱ cent. on our last quotations. There have been small sales of Erie, 1871, bonds at 80@80¾@79 3d mortgage, at 92@91@92; 2d mortgage, at 96¼@95¾; 1875's at 92@91¾. Hudson River, 1st mortgage at 97¼@96¾; Michigan Southern, sinking fund, at 77@80@78. New-York Central 6s at 90, and 7s at 101¾. For Railroad shares our present quotations, as compared with those of 17th inst., show generally but slight changes. The only marked exception is in Illinois Central, which, in consequence of the proposed issue of new shares had for a time a strong downward tendency, selling, on 23d inst., as low as 128¾. They have since reacted to 133, and were firm at 133¼ at the close of to-day's business. The new shares, when issued, will be divided among the holders of the old stock at par, and an installment of $30, payable ½ in July and ½ in January next, called in on each share. This arrangement is equivalent to a call of $15 ₱ share on the existing stock. Chicago and Rock Island Shares have advanced 1¾ ₱ cent. A semi-annual dividend of 5 ₱ cent. cash has been declared, payable in April. Money is active at 7 ₱ cent. on call, and 8@10 ₱ cent. for first class paper. The bank returns for the fortnight show a decrease in loans of $366,864, and an increase of 248,001 in specie. The exports of specie were $453,397. Receipts of Gold from California, $1,137,129. Foreign Exchanges closed firm. London has an upward tendency. Cammann & Co.

Galena and Chicago Union Railroad Company.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

For the benefit of parties who may be deceived by the recent characteristic attacks upon the Galena and Chicago Railroad Company in the financial columns of the Herald, it may be well to state that they are said to emanate from some of the ambitious imitators of the well-known "Ursa Major" of the Stock Exchange. Those who are familiar with his incredibly reckless and injudicious operations in the stock of this Company some months since, involving a loss of many thousand dollars, by a similar attempt to depreciate its value, can readily understand the motive for these manufactured statements, and need hardly to be informed that they are untrue. A few facts and figures from official sources will show this to be the case, and prevent, we trust, the injury that might otherwise be done to unwary stockholders.

1. So far from the gross receipts the present fiscal year, which commenced on 1st June last, having fallen off $200,000, they exceed those of last year for the same months $130,612, in spite of the late disasters. The following official returns from the office of the Company prove this without further argument:

June	$220,920	$313,392
July	163,151	225,650
August	203,881	255,920
September	259,646	336,239
October	318,155	359,985
November	295,596	223,502
December	150,385	121,791
		1857.
January	100,701	91,644
February	89,573	71,624
Total nine months	$1,767,956	$1,998,563

2. As to the proposed negotiation of the Second Mortgage Bonds of the Company, this is no new determination or policy, but simply the fulfillment of the clearly announced intention of the directors so far back as June last, as published in their usual annual report. It is there very plainly stated that the residue of the Second Mortgage Bonds still held by the Company would be negotiated when convenient, in order to pay off the floating debt, amounting to nearly half a million of dollars, and furnish further means for continuing the double track required.

3 Instead of a deficiency in the estimate of receipts by the Directors—the fact is the reverse. In the last annual report the estimates were given the same as the previous year, whereas the receipts from the 1st June, 1856 to 1st March, 1857, have been in excess, as the table above printed shows.

4. With regard to the amount of damage to the road the past Winter, if the reader will take the trouble to compare the receipts for the month of February last, when the late great freshet occurred, with those of the previous year, he will find a falling off for the month of only $11,949, and can thus form an intelligent opinion as to the probable amount of damage. From the best information we can obtain, the entire injury will not amount to anything like the sum assumed by the Herald writer.

5. That additional funds are needed to complete the double tracks and depôt improvements rendered necessary by the continually increasing business of the Company is not surprising when the extent of the road and the magnitude of its traffic are understood. The total length of the roads now in actual use, exclusive of the double track, is 259¾ miles, and the whole expenditure, including all the stock, capital, mortgage bonds, stock dividends and floating debt, is about nine millions, or $35,000 ₱ mile, which is much less than the cost of the Illinois Central line. This sum includes also the cost of sixteen miles of double track finished, and also more than a half million dollars paid for the St. Charles Air-Line Branch, which was indispensable to the interests of the stockholders, and the cost likewise of the immense grain depôt and extensive grounds of the Company at Chicago, and the three thousand feet of river front on the Mississippi at Fulton. A connection at this point will ultimately be made with the Chicago, Iowa, and Nebraska Railroad, now in process of construction which will render a new and rich region of country tributary to the Galena line, as the shortest and best route to Chicago and the East. The leading Directors of the Galena and Chicago Road are well known to be cautious business men of sagacity and prudence, who are managing its affairs so as best to accommodate and increase its vast and profitable traffic. By their purchase and completion of the direct line to Fulton they have secured the best and soortest route between Chicago and the Mississippi in all Northern Illinois, and prevented a dangerous rival line from starting into operation. When the Iowa connection is completed at Fulton, as it will be ere long, an additional amount of business will pour in from the region further West, that will surprise even the most sanguine friends of this Road and task its admirable equipment and organization to the utmost. Bes des the lines of road to Freeport and Fulton, with a way and through freight business more profitable than any other road at the West, the extensive real estate owned by this Company in the very heart of Chicago, is of immense and increasing value, and would alone go far eventually towards discharging its bonded debt, should it be sold as the city increases in size and the depôts be removed to the outskirts.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Administration and Kansas Affairs—Laws of the Territory and Freedom of Opinion—Kansas Appointments—Money in the Treasury.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, April 1.

Mr. WALKER had another interview with the President this morning on Kansas Affairs.

The Administration has initiated none of the proceedings in Kansas having in view the election of officers preliminary to the formation of a State Constitution; but, with the intention and desire to eliminate the distracting question of Slavery, will assist in carrying forward the measure which has been commenced in the Territory for that purpose, leaving the people at large, without any reference whatever to their political divisions, to settle it by a free and unembarrassed vote for themselves. It having been repeatedly asked how independent suffrage can be exercised if the laws of the Territory are to be regarded valid, the reply from the best sources of information is, that the law providing for the election is a fair one, it explicitly declaring that all free white male citizens over twenty-one years of age, residents of the Territory on the 1st of April, shall be entitled to vote for delegates to the Constitutional Convention. This is to be administered without regard whatever to any test oaths.

Gov. WALKER and his Secretary of State, Mr. STANTON, have repeatedly said their efforts, in accordance with the views of the Administration, will be to secure the expression of opinion to all the people of Kansas, while they will carefully abstain from any act which could be construed into partiality on one side or the other. Whichsoever way the citizens may decide, the Administration will be content. Gov. WALKER expects his opinion that Kansas will be a free State.

The President has made the following Kansas appointments:

JOHN M. WHITFIELD, Ex-Delegate from Kansas, Register, and DANIEL WOODSON, Ex-Secretary of State for Kansas, Receiver, for the "Delaware Land District."

FREDERICK EMORY, Register, and JAMES P. DOWNS, Receiver, for the "Western Land District."

WM. H. DOAK, Register, and EPAPHRODITUS RANSOM, of Michigan, Receiver, for the "Osage Land District."

CHARLES E. MIX, Chief of the Indian Office, has been appointed Commissioner of Indian Affairs ad interim, vice Commissioner MANYPENNY, resigned.

MOSES MCDONALD has been appointed Collector, and SAMUEL JORDAN Postmaster of Portland, the latter, vice WOODBURY, whose commission had expired.

LEONARD JONES has been appointed Postmaster of Bangor, Maine, vice HAINES, whose commission will soon expire.

The Departments are besieged by hundreds of people who are anticipating extensive changes in the clerical force, but none are made. Sixty such applicants arrived here this morning, and were registered at one hotel.

MOSES BATES has been appointed Collector at Plymouth, Mass.; and LYNDEN TAYLOR, Surveyor of Pawcatuck, Rhode Island.

The United States Treasurer reports that the amount subject to draft, in the various United States Depositories, on the 24th of March, was $24,722,821.

The Probability of a War Between Spain and Mexico—General Scott and the War Department—Secretary Cass' Health—Mr. Walker and the Governorship of Kansas, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, March 31, 1857.

Whatever opinions may exist elsewhere as to the probability of a war between Spain and Mexico, no such impression is entertained in well-informed quarters here. The notes of preparation are not considered serious, and their solution, which is by no means distant, will express the weak deception that has been practiced upon the credulity of those who were disposed to accept appearances for fact. Vessels of war may be sent to rendezvous at Havana, but they will be sent back again, without having fulfilled the object of a seemingly warlike mission. Amidst the unceasing distractions of the Court at Madrid, any chance was gladly seized upon by which attention could be directed from their own internal strifes, and concentrated upon some object that might enlist, even for a time, the sympathy and spirit of the nation. The Spaniard is jealous of national as of personal honor, and Mexico had affronted it, in the neglect or refusal to punish the murderers of Spanish subjects, alleged to be in its service under the command of General ALVAREZ. This case offered an opportunity for a sensation. The Spanish Charge d'Affaires at Mexico demanded his passports, returned home and laid the case before the Ministry. They invoked the Cortes to come to the rescue of the country, and bury the hatchets of faction. The upshot of this appeal was the preparation of which we hear so much, and are destined to see so little; and the end will be, another of the many farces which are too often played upon the stage of nations.

Senor TASARA, the Spanish Minister here, who holds a position of mark and influence at home, and who stands well at the Foreign Office, has told his friends in very earnest Spanish, that if they would preserve the beauty of their own face, they must not bite off their own nose; which, being translated into common English, means, if they would keep the Queen of the Antilles, they had better keep out of war. The hint has been taken, and the zeal has diminished correspondingly. Meantime, COMONFORT, in Mexico, by way of reestablishing friendly relations, and proving his sense of justice, has executed a few Mexicans by way of compensation for the Spaniards, and since all cause of quarrel has thus been partially removed by a touch of the Draconic system, it is only necessary for a few long-winded compliments to be written, in which the gallantry of both nations shall be reciprocally glorified.

Gen. SCOTT will return to New York, where headquarters are to be retained, as during the last four years. But in order that the Secretary of War may have the benefit of his experience and tact, in directing the active policy of the Department, the General will visit Washington monthly hereafter, for the purpose of Conference. The father of Mr. FLOYD, and many of his nearest kindred, among the eminent men of Virginia in the past generation, were the devoted personal friends of Gen. SCOTT, and however they may differ upon political topics, the Secretary brings with him a sort of filial and traditional esteem for the old soldier, who has conferred so much glory on the native State of both, and reflected honor on the national name over the civilized world. The country will be gratified to know, that between the War Department and its first General, the most friendly relations exist, and are likely to be cultivated by both.

Although the indisposition of the Secretary of State has been but trifling and temporary, any cause of derangement at his advanced age naturally excites the apprehensions of friends, who looked with serious misgiving upon his entrance into office at a time of life when repose and retirement seemed to be demanded by the laws of Nature. General CASS has set to work with an earnestness and purpose that show his intention of mastering, not only the great business of the Department, but its details thoroughly; and this effort has already manifested its effects, in signs of comparative prostration. Few men, who have turned the long lane of three-score and ten, are in better preservation, and, what is more, few have deserved it better, from a life of temperance, care, and regularity. Still the admonitions of age cannot be disregarded, and its disabilities must be expected. General CASS is not equal to the exertion and labor which he might have encountered ten years ago, and within that single decade, the ordinary business of the Department over which he presides, has been immensely increased, while the intellectual force of the office has nearly remained stationary. An additional clerk, at $1,400 a year, was voted at the last session, but the compensation will not do more than secure the services of an amanuensis. Millions are voted away every year for doubtful claims and jobs, but when talents are to be rewarded or procured, by which some of these millions might be saved, Congress and a class of newspapers get up a fit of virtuous economy, and tell us upon how little a backwoodsman may live by the year, as if that was the true standard of appreciation. They understand these things better in England, and hence it is, that men are found in secondary positions who are quite equal to the responsibilities of the first. We will begin to get wisdom as we pay for it, and grow older.

The reasons assigned by Mr. WALKER, for reconsidering his first refusal of the Governorship of Kansas, are now before the public, and with them a general outline of his intended policy in the Territory. No one is disposed to question the motives which prompted this determination, because in the existing condition of Kansas, the Executive office presents little inducements for ambition, and hardly a temptation for enterprise. Thorns beset the path on every side, and by whatever impulses its incumbent may be prompted, whether originating in the purest patriotism or the noblest spirit of self-sacrifice, there are men there, ready to torture and misrepresent his acts, to arraign his motives, and to denounce his integrity. More than ordinary courage is therefore required, for a man of any public character, to accept a position so complicated with delicate responsibility and involved in personal danger. And whatever misgivings may be felt as to Mr. WALKER'S proclivities, reasoning from his political antecedents, this fact of itself will attract to him the sympathy and countenance of those in and out of Kansas who desire to have it withdrawn as a source of contention from the political arena, and to see peace, order, and prosperity established where outrage and crime have heretofore held awful revel.

The principles upon which he proposes to conduct the Territorial Administration, will challenge respect and favor from all sections and parties, and if he shall succeed in carrying them out practically, he will have the consciousness of having fulfilled a trust of the first importance in a manner to deserve well of his country, and will bequeath a name to his children which they may cherish with pride over every legacy that fortune could bequeath. How the ends sought to be attained are to be secured without invoking an "appeal to the Military Power," in the midst of a population a portion of which cannot be restrained but by the presence and exercise of power, is a part of this problem which yet remains to be solved. Mr. WALKER contemplates a peaceful settlement of the question "by an appeal to the intelligence and patriotism of the whole people of Kansas." He will have the God-speed of every patriot in that mission, whatever doubts may exist as to the effect of the moral resources thus invoked. The lawless and desperate ruffians who have heretofore desolated Kansas and reddened its soil with innocent blood, will not be addressed by any such appeals. But they may feel that in renewing outrages hitherto unpunished under a Governor openly backed by the whole power of the Administration, and who commands the confidence of the section they profess to represent in the contest, they are treading on dangerous ground and must provoke the punishment at last which has so long been deserved. Possibly such considerations may serve to restrain outlaws whom no feeling of duty can move, and who recognize no inspiration of patriotism.

Trial of Rev. Mr. Kalloch for Adultery.

BOSTON, Wednesday, April 1.

The trial of Rev. Mr. KALLOCH for adultery was continued to day at Cambridge. P. B. BAILEY, one of the proprietors of the Lechmere House, resumed his testimony yesterday, and occupied the stand for several hours. The gist of the testimony was, that suspecting something, he took measures to have a peep into the private room engaged by Mr. KALLOCH when he and his female companion returned from the lecture. This was accomplished by a large key forming an aperture at the top of the door, through which could be seen the bed in the room and a portion of the floor. The bed was not disturbed by the defendant, except to take from it a pillow, when the witness says the parties occupied the floor together, but in a part of the room rather out of the range of his peeping hole. The witness could not testify to the direct act of criminality, but repeated the disgusting conversation, which he alleges the parties indulged in, with other incidents, which he thought injurious to the reputation of his house. When Mr. KALLOCH called for his bill, witness charged him five dollars, which was paid without grumbling. SAMUEL B. GEDNINES, an omnibus race-taker, who alternated with Mr. BAILY in peeping into the room on this interesting occasion, corroborated the preceding witness.

Mr. STEEN, of Brattleboro, Vt., said to be the husband of the lady implicated with Mr. KALLOCH, was in court very near to that gentleman, and occasionally conversed with him. It would seem that the gentleman is satisfied that his wife is blameless; and the testimony relating to her alleged criminality appeared to make no unfavorable impression upon him.

These portions of the evidence describing the alleged endearments of the loving couple, seemed rather to excite merriment than otherwise.

It is stated that Mr. STEEN volunteers his presence to testify, that were it not for severe sickness his wife would add her testimony to that for the defence.

The trial will occupy several days.

Rhode Island State Election.

PROVIDENCE, Wednesday, April 1.

BRAYTON has a handsome majority over CHARLES JACKSON, the ablest Democrat in the State.

Kansas Matters—Emigration—Politics and General Prospects.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times:

WYANDOT, K. T., Sunday, March 8, 1857.

EMIGRATION.

I have been here nearly a week without finding time end opportunity to send the TIMES a single letter. Yet every day of my trip and sojourn has been prolific of observations which are so interesting to me that it seems impossible that they should not interest others.

The items gleaned during my journey were chiefly relative to the great question of Kansas emigration. Even at that early season—before the ordinary time for opening up the navigation of the Missouri River—every train and way-boat teemed with pioneers to this loviest and best of all the divisions of the Union. And not only are they coming, but they come to stay; and with the means to improve their homes and secure their material comfort. Never in my life have I seen a finer and more intelligent class of people than those now swelling the ranks of our population. Though a large proportion are from the free North, yet numbers are coming from the enslaved South,—self-emancipated from her thraldom, and bringing, not slaves, but money to invest in strengthening the defences of Freedom.

The sound of political strife on the border has ceased. Men who a few months ago stood arrayed against each other as mortal foes now mingle cordially in the common pursuits of life. All seem animated by a desire for peace. Of course, the Atchison party still maintains its discipline, and still cherishes the idea of finally consummating the political wrong which was to give Kansas to Slavery. This organization will still continue its struggle, though it dare no longer call to its aid the adjuncts of brute force. A recent evidence of this persistence is found in the late attempt of the Platte County ruffians to seize on the Shawnee Reserve. They organized a band of squatters, and, in defiance of law, rushed over prematurely and occupied the lands not taken by the Indians, erected shantios, (in many cases brought them from Missouri,) and went back—HOME! Of course, they will be over to vote. We shall see whether Mr. BUCHANAN and his subordinates will permit this wanton and brutal contempt of the federal authority to reap its intended reward.

But whatever may be the result of such efforts, the general result is clear. I don't believe there is a Free-State man in Kansas who is posted, that doubts that the emigration of the present season will settle surely and forever the destinies of the future State in favor of freedom.

As a matter of course, this immense influx of people gives a corresponding impulse to business. Claims are even now being taken with the greatest rapidity, and improvements are commencing with unparalleled energy. Towns are springing into existence at all eligible points.

LITERAL.

Personal.

WAGONSELLER, the defaulting cashier of the Newcastle Bank, has been permitted to retire unmolested to his home, the money ($30,000) having been recovered. The Bank declines to prosecute.

A banquet was given at the Girard House, Philadelphia, on Tuesday, in honor of Dr. DORRANCE, who sails from New-York this week to undertake a scientific exploration of Eastern Africa, under the patronage of the Russian Government. Dr. DORRANCE proceeds first to New-Orleans, to select 50 able-bodied men to accompany him, already acclimated to warm climates.

Mr. A. H. PURDY, Manager of Purdy's National Theatre, is now lying seriously ill—his disease is inflammation of the lungs; strong hopes, however, are entertained of his speedy recovery.

☞ A lively French daily, L'Union, has been started in New-Orleans, under the editorship of M MALESPINE, a gentleman known to French readers at the North. L'Union is well-posted, feuilletonish and agreeable. Another English daily newspaper is announced in the same city, to be called the Daily Times. New Orleans will possess with these additions, nine daily papers, the Picayune, Delta, True Delta, Bee, Crescent, Bulletin, Courier, L'Union and Times. The Courier and Bee are printed half in English, and half French.

NEW SOUTHERN PAPER.—The South is the title of the new and handsome daily, established at Richmond, Va., by Mr. ROGER A. PRYOR. It is ably conducted, looks well to Southern interests, and has a straightforward way of speaking. Mr. PRYOR is quite competent to give his paper a high name among the Southern presses, the majority of which, unfortunately, are not remarkable for enterprise or genius. The South starts well and deserves success.

NEW-YORK CITY.

The Late Mysterious Homicide.

CORONER'S INQUEST—EXAMINATION OF THE WOUNDED MAN KELLY—VERDICT OF THE JURY—THE MATTER STILL A MYSTERY.

An inquisition upon the body of the young man O'Leary, who was found dead in a row boat at Pier No. 23 East River, on Tuesday morning, was held yesterday by Coroner CONNERY, at the office of the Coroners in Chamber street.

During the forenoon, the Coroner visited the Hospital for the purpose of taking the deposition of the man Kelly, the supposed accomplice of the deceased, who is suffering from shot-wounds in the head. Kelly seemed much improved. The Coroner addressing him said:

Williams, (he gave his name as Williams)—I have come to take your deposition, concerning the manner in which you received your wounds, and any knowledge you may have of the boy O'Leary, who is dead?

Williams—Go to ——, your's bothered me enough with your questions.

Coroner—Williams, I have not before asked you any questions, and—

Williams—Wasn't you here yesterday, eh?

Coroner—I was not.

Williams—I thought you was—some fool was!

Coroner—It wasn't me—come now, kiss the book (offering him a Bible,) and tell me on the virtue of your oath—

Williams—D—n you, don't bother me. I'm tired of talking now, I had to talk all day yesterday.

Coroner—(Coaxingly)—Come, now, kiss the book, (again offering the Bible to him.)

Williams—(Impatiently)—Take the —— thing out of the way, I tell you!

Coroner—Do you know that I am one of the Coroners for the City and County of New York?

Williams—I don't know who you are, and don't care a —— either.

Coroner—You are a bad fellow—you'll do!

A conversation in this vein was continued for some time longer; but at length Williams became somewhat tractable, and by degrees answers to a few questions were wormed out of him, but not any of them were of any importance. He gave his residence as No. 33 Chrystie-street, and steadily persisted in adhering to his first story. Told the Seventh Ward Police that he was shot at the corner of Market and South streets, by some unknown man, and that after lying on the sidewalk for nearly half an hour, he arose and went in search of an officer, that he might secure medical treatment. He denied all knowledge of O'Leary, the deceased, and said that when shot, he was on his way to Catharine Market from the American Theatre, which he had spent the evening. Nothing further could be elicited from the fellow.

The Coroner then proceeded to the office in Chambers-street, where he resumed the investigation.

William S. Brownell, pilot of the ferry boat Niagara, testified that, shortly after 3 o'clock Tuesday morning, while with his boat in the New-York slip, he heard a cry for help, coming, apparently, from a drowning man, in the river. The cry being repeated, he jumped up, and shoving the window of the pilot-house down, looked in the direction of the Fulton Ferry, from which the sound appeared to proceed. He then ran to the other end of the boat, and calling the watchman of the Ferry Company, told him that there was a man drowning in the direction of Pier No. 24. He then accompanied one of the deck hands and watchman to Pier No. 24, and when on the end of the pier they saw an object in the water, between 50 and 40 feet distant, which appeared like the body of a man. It soon floated out of sight, and was not seen again. Then looking down into the river they saw a boat containing something. A lantern was brought forward, when the body of a man was found lying in the boat. The body was covered with blood, and the boat was also besmeared with blood. The deck hand went down into the boat, felt of the man, and declared him dead. The police were then notified.

The ferrymen then returned to their boat, and started for Williamsburg. Mr. Brownell further testified that while returning to Williamsburg he heard a shot near the Catharine Market, and also adds:—"I heard from one of the firemen of the Peck slip Ferry Company—his name is James Cook—that he saw the man who shot them—Kelly and Leary. He said he was an old country farmer-looking man, belonging to the Black Ball line, and was a night watchman, and that the shooting was done between 2 and 4 o'clock. Yesterday (Monday) afternoon, while he was telling me this, a ship belonging to the Black Ball line was leaving for sea, and he said he believed that was the vessel the men who were shot intended to make a haul from. He said the thieves were on board the vessel; the watchman hailed them, but receiving no reply, fired upon them, and one went over the side of the vessel into the boat; he then fired at the other one who jumped into the river.

A young man named Bartlett Gilhoun, the owner of the boat in which the body of O'Leary was found, testified that the skiff had been stolen during the night of Monday from Pier No. 27, by some parties unknown to him, and that he had never known Leary.

James Cook, the man referred to by the pilot of the Niagara, testified that all he knew of the case was learned from some longshoremen, whose names he did not know.

A number of other witnesses, including the father and sister of O'Leary, were examined, but their testimony was not material to the purpose of the examination. The father of deceased said he had not seen his son for three weeks, and that he had heard from other parties that he was a very bad boy. The sister said she saw her brother on Monday evening, in company with some other young men, going into a liquor store in Roosevelt-street.

No other witnesses were examined. The Jury, after a brief address from the Coroner, rendered as their

VERDICT:

"That deceased came to his death from a pistol or gun-shot wound in his body, inflicted by some person or persons to the Jury unknown."

The Church in Ruins.

One goes abroad to see ruins. But traveling costs, and few can afford it. Let everybody who can't pay the cost of traveling and still sigh to see ruins, come down and get a South-side view of the Brick Church Ruin, which is just now in the zenith of its magnificence. The whole South wall is down. The roof is all gone. Of the steeple only a few upright timbers remain of what was the spire, above the tower. But the North wall stands yet, and the East end, with its circular and oblong openings that once held windows, and its arch over the ancient pulpit seems as firm as ever. A view of the ruin at sunset might excite as much admiration at the next Academy Exhibition as the "Temple et Paestum;" or if our sky is the prevailing state of the streets is lacking in color to tempt the painter, the Illustrated papers at least might get a telling engraving here for next week's issue. It seems a pity that so fine a ruin should be disturbed. Won't some enterprising Ex-Alderman get out an injunction and make a reputation for taste?

Our church in ruins is not a Melrose Abbey, or Tintern, or Drybrugh. It has no encircling garment of evergreen ivy. The owl did not complain to the moon last night from any snug recess in some emptied niche, from which the statue of a saint has been tumbled, for very good reasons. But it is a very fair ruin, nevertheless.

An accident nearly occurred there yesterday. The building had been so far demolished that only the wall facing the Park was left standing, when, after a momentary shower, as if a strong wind had agitated it, it fell with a loud crash, raising a cloud of dust that obscured the whole neighborhood. As many workmen were in the immediate vicinity, preparing to level it, it seemed impossible that all of them should have escaped without injury. One man only was slightly hurt; the rest, perceiving that it was about to fall, saved their lives or bones by most precipitate flight. Their escape was really marvelous. A part that was standing near was crushed to pieces.

Dr. Guilmette in the Lecture-Room.

Dr. GUILMETTE, a gentleman who was received with much favor at his appearance with LOUISA PYNE in English opera, has achieved reputation in another field, by developing a theory of the formation of the voice, not precisely new in all its features, but applying the laws of the human mechanism to the perfection of eloquutionary power. Two lectures delivered by this gentleman at the Fourteenth-street Medical College, the last on Tuesday evening, were designed to introduce his theory to public notice, and were successful. Dr. GUILMETTE takes the ground that the anatomical structure of the vocal organs of the human throat has been but partially understood, even by scientific men. He claims (what practical elocutionists have all along contended for) that the diaphragm is the active agent in producing the quality of voice; not the larynx nor the glottis. Further, he demonstrates that the tone is produced by the vibration of the mucous membrane of the windpipe, to which the larynx and the glottis are efficient aids, but in which they are not sole workers. For the development of a healthy voice, exercise in the elevation and depression of the diaphragm, with the consequent vibration of their membrane, is therefore the essential thing. The auricular and anatomical illustrations with which the Doctor had occasion to illustrate were exceedingly interesting.

The Burdell Murder—False Reports.

There is no foundation whatever for the report that the counsel of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM and ECKEL have discovered the murderer of Dr. BURDELL, and will "name him at the trial," establishing beyond controversy the innocence of their clients. How such a rumor originated, they cannot imagine. It is one of those fabrications which require the whole force of an inventive genius to devise.

The statement of a cotemporary, that a suit was commenced on Tuesday in the Supreme Court on behalf of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM, for the recovery of dower in Dr. BURDELL'S estate, to which she claims to be entitled as his widow, is also untrue. Such a suit could not, of course, be commenced, until the Surrogate has pronounced on the question of the marriage, now pending in his Court.

About Mr. Van Meter's Arrest.

Rev. W. C. VAN METER, of the Five Points Mission, writes a long narrative of the circumstances attending his recent arrest in Illinois. During the Winter, he went West with a number of poor children, in behalf of the Five Points Mission, and also of the Children's Aid Society of this City. A lad had previously been placed with a hotel keeper in Washington, Tazewell County, Ill., who was Overseer of the Poor as well as landlord. To this gentleman, Mr. VAN METER said, that if the lad in question was in danger of becoming a charge upon the county, as was feared, he would remove him. The boy was then with a farmer. Mr. VAN METER went to see him, but he refused to leave his master. Two days after, he was arrested on a charge of bringing paupers into Illinois,—was fined $100 and costs, and was placed under bonds to return to the State in April to stand his trial. Mr. VAN METER, in his statement, says:

"Not one ever taken by me has been in a poor-house, or in any wise a tax to any county in Illinois. Last Monday we sent twelve to good homes in that State, and I am preparing to take another lot with me, when I return to stand my trial."

The First Stage Monopoly in Town.

In 1785 the Legislature of this State granted to ISAAC VAN WINKLE, TALMAGE HALL and JOHN KINNEY the exclusive right for ten years of running "stage-wagons" on the east side of the Hudson, between this City and Albany. This monopoly was granted on the ground of the great expense and labor attending such an undertaking, and because the establishment of the line would tend "to promote the ease and benefit of the people of this State." By the conditions of the grant, the grantees were obliged to provide at least "two good and sufficient covered stage-wagons," one of which was to start from each city at least once a week, unless prevented by the badness of the road or some unforeseen accident. The rate of fare was not to exceed 4d. per mile for every person, including 14 pounds of baggage, and for every further 150 pounds 4d. more were to be charged. This would make the fare to Albany about 50s. or $6 25.

More Trouble in High Life.

Much excitement has recently been created in a large German city by the discovery of gross criminal conduct on the part of the wife of a prominent merchant, the daughter of a well-known New-Yorker. It seems that the Police broke up a house of ill-fame, and among its inmates found the lady in question in company with her paramour, also a merchant. On inquiry, it was discovered that she had been a frequenter of the house for some time past. The lady, who has been married 12 years, and is the mother of three children, has been sent home to her parents by her injured husband, and is now on her way to this City. The lady and her relatives are Americans, while the husband is a German.

☞ REESE'S Medical Gazette for April sums up the graduates of medicine for the current Spring (so far as heard from) as follows: The New-York Colleges, 180, (University, 112; Thirteenth-street, 31; Physicians and Surgeons, 37;) Philadelphia, 270, (Jefferson, 212, Pennsylvania College, 58.) From 14 colleges there graduated 763 physicians and surgeons. Let us be thankful that the supply still continues unabated.

☞ Some 60 children left New-York in the New World, on their way to the West, yesterday, under the auspices of Messrs. C. C. TRACY, of the Newsboys Lodging House, and J. P. ROOT, of the Brooklyn Children's Aid Society. They walked in procession from the office of the Children's Aid Society to the boat, the New World, at the foot of Cortlandt-street.

Fatal Fire in Monroe-Street—Suspicion of Foul Play—Arrests.

A Mrs. PETERSON, wife of a Swede named OLOF PETERSON, was burned to death at the fire which occurred in the building No. 2 Monroe-street, about 12 o'clock Tuesday night. She occupied a room on the second story of the premises, which is kept as a porter and lodging house by a Mrs. ELLEN MARTIN, and her painful death was not known until after the fire had been extinguished, when some one, in passing through the room, discovered the corpse shockingly burned and mutilated.

The examination made by the Fire Marshal tended to create the suspicion that the husband of Mrs. PETERSON had set fire to the premises for the purpose of destroying his wife, with whom it was known he lived unhappily. He was, accordingly, arrested, and with him another man, also named PETERSON, with whom he was in company during the evening. The prisoners were detained by Justice WOOD to await a further examination by the Fire Marshal, and the inquest by the Coroner.

Relief of Broadway—Adjourned Meeting.

The Special Committee of the Board of Councilmen, appointed to consider the best means of relieving Broadway, held an adjourned meeting on Wednesday afternoon, in the Council Chamber of the City Hall, Councilman BOOLE in the chair.

There was a crowded attendance, every seat in the Chamber being occupied.

Mr. J. HASSON addressed the Committee. He is an owner of property on Chatham-street. Is entirely opposed to any interference with Chatham-street. Can see no advantage from widening the street by removing back the east side. A better plan, in his opinion, would be the extension of City Hall-place. The difficulty arises almost entirely from the crowding produced by omnibuses. Thinks the attempt altogether premature. The expense would be more than property-holders can bear or permit; ultimately the City would have to pay the deficiency. The street is now taxed to the utmost.

Mr. BEN LOCKWOOD spoke in favor of attempting the relief of Broadway by opening out Nassau-street. Above the lower part of the Park no relief is needed. The throng is chiefly below the City Hall. He regarded the number of omnibuses as the great nuisance of the City. New-York is overridden by the omnibus interest. Does not think one omnibus in ten is needed to go below the Park. But if the omnibuses are really to run down to the Battery, then the only practicable mode of relief will be to widen Nassau-street from Chatham-street to Broad-street; in that case, part of the omnibuses can take that route. That would more effectually relieve Broadway than opening a new avenue west of Broadway. He also argued in favor of the extension of Church-street, even at the cost of interfering with Trinity church property. A most unessential improvement would be the removal of the markets up town.

Ex-Alderman CHAUNCEY thought the time had arrived when it was incumbent on the citizens to put a stop to the endless meddling with the streets. The streets were wide enough—wider than those in Boston—wider than the streets in the busy part of London. The difficulty was not in the streets being too narrow, but in their not being well regulated. Regulate (said he) and pave the streets that run parallel with Broadway. Broadway might be relieved by a very simple ordinance compelling a certain number of omnibuses to pass through streets that might be named. He repeated his conviction that the omnibuses in Broadway are sadly too many. The project for opening Crosby street would not relieve Broadway. Nor would it be a benefit to Crosby street. He argued that better paving and regulating was all that was necessary.

Several other gentlemen having addressed the Committee, (chiefly in confirmation of the opinions already delivered,)

Ex-Councilman SWANN remarked that this Crosby-street affair was before a Committee of Councilmen in 1854. But no one then appeared to make any complaints. Those who are in favor of the project now don't care for their opinions being known. Why should the Committee agitate the question further? In the present rambling method of discussion twenty meetings might be held without any additional light being thrown upon the matter. The resolution upon which the Committee are acting had no special reference to Crosby-street.

On the conclusion of Mr. SWANN'S remarks, the Committee agreed to adjourn all further special reference to Crosby-street until that day week. As to Pearl street the inquiry should be adjourned two weeks.

The meeting then broke up, an animated conversation being maintained among the crowd for some time.

Police Intelligence.

THE PHOTOGRAPHED $100 BILLS ON THE BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

Henry Darling, doing business as a speculator at No. 142 Broadway, who was arrested on Monday in the store of J. Beck & Co., where he attempted to pass a spurious (photographed) $100 bill on the Bank of the Republic of this City, in payment for a piece of silk worth $23, was brought before Justice OSBORNE yesterday for examination. No facts were elicited that have not been already published. A. P. MCKINNEY, clerk in the store of Beck & Co., testified to the receipt from the accused of a spurious $100 bill, in payment for a piece of silk, and to the calling of a police officer to take him in custody. Capt. Carpenter, of the 20th Ward Police, deposed to having arrested the prisoner in the store of Beck & Co., and to having taken him to the Station-House, where three other bills similar to the one which he attempted to pass, were found upon him. These bills Darling acknowledged to be his, and stated that they had been photographed for him by Meade & Brothers, in Broadway, to whom he represented that he wanted them to experiment with. Darling also stated that it was not his intention to utter the bills.

Henry W. Ford, Paying Teller of the Bank of America, was sworn, and denoted the spurious character of the bills found in possession of the prisoner.

No other testimony was taken. Darling is about 45 years of age, and resides in Brooklyn. In reference to the question, "What have you to say, if anything in reference to the charge here preferred against you?" he answered, "I shall say nothing—but this is by advice of my counsel."

The accused was then ordered to find bail to answer in the sum of $3,000. The bail was furnished by Stille Manning, of No. 142 Broadway, an associate speculator with Darling.

THE CASE OF YOUNG JENNER, THE CONFIDENTIAL CLERK.

George W. Brainard, of No. 103 Murray-street, appeared yesterday before Justice OSBORNE, at the First District Police Court, and made three additional affidavits against his late confidential clerk and bookkeeper, Wm. H. Jenner. The affidavits are similar in purport to those made by the same party some time since, and accuse Jenner with having, at different times, appropriated to his own use certain moneys belonging to the complainant, and making false entries in his books so as to cover up the fraud. The first complaint was dismissed on a certiorari, but Mr. Brainard again renews the complaint,—making this time three separate charges. The accused was held for examination in the sum of $300 on each charge.

STEALING GOLD COIN.

Henry Popp, a German servant, aged 22 years, was taken before Justice CONNOLLY, yesterday afternoon, by Lieut. Burns, of the First Ward Police, on a charge of stealing $70 in gold coin from Wm. Mandgel, of No. 24 William-street. Popp pleaded guilty to the charge, and seemed very contrite,—but the Magistrate, having no other alternative, committed him to answer, in default of $500 bail.

Letter from Miss Matilda Heron in Reply to the Attacks of the New-York Herald.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: In reading the Herald of Sunday, and today, I am pained to see that an unkind and most unjust personal attack (not a criticism) is made on me, my plays, their morals, and their worth.

The comparisons made between Miss KEMBLE and me are of a nature too gross to comment on. It is not of them that I would speak; for I am sure that lady's good heart is as deeply wounded at the effect which my ungenerous assailant hurled at me from behind the ambush of her praise, as I would be did I hold towards her the ungraceful position in which the writer in the Herald has placed that retiring, estimable lady.

There are points, however, of this writer's article that, in justice to myself, I beg to be heard upon.

...ARING BEFORE THE SENATE ...mittee.

Rev. A. J. ... has addressed the Committee ... The part that has been assigned me in the argument ... mainly to a discussion of the ... I shall cover no ground that has been ... gentleman who has preceded ... but little to the facts, except ... they should be fully understood ... to apply the law that governs the case.

I address the Committee as a judicial body. The duty is imposed on them of deciding grave and important questions of law and fact. I shall assume that their minds are free from the influence of all pre-existing formed opinions. They cannot dispense justice with the purity, unless their minds be, as is required by the common law of a juror, in the expressive language of the books, "like a piece of blank paper," void of all previous impressions.

It is clear enough that the mind of a court or jury should be honest. Much more is required, or justice cannot be attained. It must be free from all bias and prejudice. It must struggle to discover their existing ... to guard against them; and it too often happens that they exist, though their possessor is unconscious of their existence.

I regard it as a great misfortune to us in this case, that some of our testimony was taken in the absence of Mr. Ramsay, and the greater part of it in the absence of Mr. Noxon. Their experience in courts, in listening to testimony and judging best of it when uttered by the witness in their presence, and their distant residence from the City of New-York, the scene where these differences exist, made their attendance more than usually desirable; especially as all the ... of the Committee were present at New-York, and heard all the ex parte evidence of the prosecution. I do not allude to this circumstance in the spirit of complaint, for I am fully aware of the great and pressing labors which these senators are called on to perform; but I speak of it with deep regret, for no reading of our testimony by those senators can make so deep an impression on their minds as would the listening to the evidence as it fell from the lips of the witnesses. It is necessary to see the witnesses and to observe carefully their manner and appearance, to enable you to judge best of their intelligence and character, of the purity of their hearts and the truthfulness of their words. The members of this Committee, experienced in courts, will readily appreciate the advantages of hearing and seeing the witnesses.

I am the more embarrassed by this circumstance, because I do not feel at liberty to detain you so long as I would owe to you the evidence we have taken. I may have to say, however, that the witnesses we have called are men of the highest standing and character in the State; such men as Bishops Potter and Delancey, Gen. Dix, Mr. Verplanck and others of equal standing; men whose integrity has never been questioned, and whose opinions are entitled to the highest consideration.

All the charges against Trinity Church, on the part of the prosecution, were based on hearsay and suspicion. Every one has been fully met and answered by competent evidence—overwhelmingly and conclusively answered. We ceased only to call witnesses, when members of the Committee assured us there could be no necessity for further cumulative evidence. We have called evidence to every charge and even to every instrument made by the witnesses for the prosecution—evidence that will go out to the world, and will be read—for a deep interest is now felt in this matter—it will be read carefully by every churchman, and I hope by others—and by this evidence, the prosecutors, Trinity Church, and even yourselves, in your conclusions upon it, shall be judged.

I concede that nearly all this evidence on both sides is entirely foreign to what I suppose is the main object of this prosecution, viz: the repeal of the Act of 1784. How the property has been managed and what is its amount, can certainly have no connection with the right to vote at the annual vestry elections. As a lawyer, I could not advise that any evidence upon these questions was necessary on our part to enable us to resist all legislative interference with our legal rights. But the evidence has been given by us for the purpose of putting at rest, I trust for all time to come, the gross misrepresentations that have been made and circulated on those subjects; to vindicate, before the whole community, the management of the affairs of Trinity Church against the assaults of her enemies.

It was clearly not the design of the original charter that any person should be a voter at the vestry elections, unless he belonged to Trinity parish. By the original charter of 1697, it was provided that the wardens and vestrymen should be elected "by the majority of the votes of the inhabitants of the said parish, in communion, as aforesaid;" that is to say, as previously expressed, "in communion of our Protestant Church of England, within our City of New-York." None but the parishioners of Trinity Church had the right to vote.

The act of 1704 did not change this. By section 8, the inhabitants were to meet annually at the said church, to choose two church wardens and twenty vestrymen, communicants of said church, "by the majority of the voice of said communicants so met, and not otherwise." By this act, also, none but communicants of Trinity Church were allowed to vote.

The third section of the act of 1784 changed materially the corporators, by allowing pew-holders to vote in addition to communicants. It was as follows:

"Sec. 3. Be it further enacted, &c., that all persons professing themselves members of the Episcopal Church, who shall either hold, occupy, or enjoy a pew or seat in the said church, and shall regularly pay to the support of said church, and each of them so shall, in the said church, partake of the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, at least once in every year, being inhabitants of the City and county of New-York, shall be entitled to all the rights, privileges, benefits and emoluments, which, in and by the said charter and law first above mentioned, are designed to be secured to the inhabitants of the City of New-York in communion with the Church of England."

It will not be denied but a new class, viz.: pew-holders, was then admitted to vote. Communicants were to vote as before. It has been claimed that the words "in the said Church" mean in the Episcopal Church, in a general and denominational sense, and this breadth of construction has been attempted to be given to the section, so as to include all communicants and all pew-holders in any and every Episcopal Church in the City of New-York. I deny the fairness of this construction. I claim that a careful examination of the act will conclusively show that the words "in the said Church" have an individual and local signification, and are not used in the broad sense imputed to them. The act is entitled "An act for making alterations in the charter of the corporation of Trinity Church," &c. In the 2d section power is conferred upon the wardens and vestrymen to call and induct a rector to the said Church, so often as there shall be any vacancy therein. This could, of course, mean no other than Trinity Church; and in the third section above quoted, I do not see how it could be doubted that the expressions "a pew or seat in the said Church" and paying "to the support of the said Church," and "partaking of the holy sacrament in the said ... Church," are intended to have a local and individual application and refer to Trinity Church alone.

It could have reference to no other Episcopal Church in the City of New-York, for no other church of that denomination was erected in that City till nine years afterwards.

The act of 1788 made no change in the charter of Trinity Church, except a slight modification of the corporate name.

It was not until 1813, when there were nine Episcopal churches in the City of New-York, and 19 years after the first of such additional churches had been built, that a claim was made by two or three persons, being corporators of other Episcopal Churches, to vote at the Trinity Vestry elections. In consequence of that claim, of which I shall speak hereafter more particularly, the act of 1814 was passed. That act was entitled "an act to alter the name of the Corporation of Trinity Church in New York, and for other purposes," and the second section was as follows:

"And be it further enacted, that all male persons of full age, who for the space of one year preceding any election shall have been members of the congregation of Trinity Church aforesaid, or any of the Chapels belonging to the same, and forming part of the same religious corporation, and who shall hold, occupy, or engage a pew or seat in Trinity Church, or any of the said Chapels, or have partaken of the holy communion therein, within the said year, and no other persons, shall be entitled to vote at the annual elections for the Church-wardens and vestrymen of the said corporation."

It is this section, so clear and explicit in its provisions, that the movers of this investigation seek to repeal, under the erroneous supposition that if it were repealed, members of the Episcopal Churches in the City of New-York, not being either pew-holders or communicants of Trinity Church or its Chapels, would have the right to vote at the annual Vestry elections of Trinity Church. The object of this movement is, by controlling the elections of wardens and vestrymen of Trinity Church, to select those who will appropriate the property of Trinity to the benefit of other Episcopal Churches in the City of New York.

It is only thus incidentally, and as a consequence of enlarging the number of corporators who may vote at the vestry elections, that any question of property is involved in the controversy. It is a question of the right to elect those who control property, and not a question of ownership itself. Some have been misled by the erroneous impression that the property of Trinity Church is held in trust for the benefit of others. There is no foundation whatever for such an opinion. A careful examination of the charter and grants will show that the property was given to the corporation absolutely as its own absolute property. It is only subject to that great trust, that high religious obligation by which all possessors of wealth, yourself, Mr. Chairman, and all others, are responsible to the Most High for a proper application and use of the gifts of Providence. In that sense it is a trust estate, and in no ... impression I have referred to may have been ... part from the original name given to the ... By the Charter of 1697, the corporation ... was declared a body corporate, by ... The Rector and Inhabitants of our said ... York in communion of our Protestant ... and this same underwent but ... until the act of 1814. Now it seems to ... that because the inhabitants of the City of New-York are mentioned in the name of the corporation, they are also to be deemed incorporators, and included. ... can neither the language nor reason ... by the mere name given to a corporation. ... it is but of material as a matter of law, that a name should indicate either the object of a corporation or the number and character of its corporators, though it is certainly advisable as a matter of taste, that the name should be appropriately chosen. The Legislature may incorporate a company called "The Merchants of Albany," but such a name would not make all the merchants of Albany corporators any more than the name of "Mechanics' and Farmers' Bank" would legally indicate that it belonged to mechanics and farmers alone, and excluded all others from an ownership in its stock. We have near by a Bank called the "National Bank," but it is simply a Stare institution.

A grant made to "The Rector and Inhabitants of the City of New-York in communion of our Protestant Church, &c.," is simply a grant to the corporation. It conveys no interest to the individual inhabitants of the City. The grant of Queen Anne, made in 1705, after reciting the incorporation by the name I have quoted, proceeds to give, grant, ratify and confirm unto the said "Rector and Inhabitants, &c.," certain property, to have and to hold to the said Rector and inhabitants, &c., and their successors forever. This using words of perpetuity applicable to a corporation alone. The property is thus given to the corporation as such in its own right, in perpetuity, and no individual right vests under the grant, in any inhabitant of the City of New-York. No lawyer can fail to understand that "successors" is a word of perpetuity, applicable only to a corporation, not to individuals.

The selection of the corporate name of Trinity Church was made in accordance with a custom prevailing at that early day. St. Peter's Church, in this City, was chartered in 1769, by the corporate name of "The Rector and Inhabitants of the city of Albany, in the County of Albany, in communion of the Church of England, &c." That name was changed in 1789 to "The Rector and Inhabitants of the city of Albany, in communion with the Protestant Episcopal Church, in the State of New York," and it still bears that name, though there are four other Episcopal Churches in the same city. A grant now made to "The Rector and Inhabitants of the city of Albany," &c., would be simply a grant to the corporation of St. Peter's Church. Bishop Potter tells us in his evidence, that when St. Paul's Church was set off and organized in this City, no one thought of its making a claim on St. Peter's for a portion of its corporate property.

Mr. Verplanck also informs us that the Episcopal Church at Fishkill was chartered under a like corporate name; and by reference to 3 R. S., 1st ed., 544, it will be seen that the Episcopal Church at Poughkeepsie was called "The Rector and Inhabitants of Poughkeepsie in communion," &c. Grace Church, in the town of Jamaica, Queens County, was called "The Rector and Inhabitants of the town of Jamaica, in communion," &c.; and similar corporate names were given to other churches.

At the time Trinity Church was chartered, and for many years afterwards, it was undoubtedly supposed that this church would be sufficient for the accommodation of all the inhabitants of the City of New-York who were in communion with the Episcopal Church. The original charter, and the subsequent legislative acts, were evidently framed upon the idea that provision was to be made for but a single parish. With that view the church building and churchyard, in the charter of 1697, are declared to be "the parish church and churchyard of the parish of Trinity Church," and were dedicated "to the service of God for that use and purpose, and no other." And it was also declared that "the rector shall have the care of the souls of the inhabitants within the said parish, in communion," &c. The power of "regulating the affairs of the said corporation and parish of Trinity Church" was given to the vestry, and the church wardens were expressly prohibited from disposing of any of the pews to any person not an inhabitant. Indeed, the charter went so far as to declare that the church and churchyard should be "the sole and only parish church and churchyard in the City of New-York."

Even at that time, when there was no other Episcopal Church in the City of New-York, it did not follow that a member of the Episcopal Church, happening to come to the City of New-York to reside, had a right to vote at the vestry elections until he became a member of the parish; for, by the charter, full power was given to the church officers "to choose, nominate and appoint so many others of our liege people as they should think fit, and shall be willing to accept the same, to be members of the said church and corporation." This power to admit, which implies the power to reject, if the applicant be not qualified or be unworthy, is, of course, only applicable to inhabitants of the City of New-York, for all others are expressly excluded by the charter. It shows a discretion in admitting parishioners, vested in the officers of the church, to be exercised within the prescribed limits—a discretion necessary to preserve the discipline and order of the church. In other words, it shows that the relation of rector and parishioner was first to be established in the usual mode to constitute a person a corporator. In this respect it was placed upon the same footing of all other churches It seems to me plain that the charter excludes all as corporators who are not parishioners of Trinity Church.

The word "parish" by no means includes all who reside within a given district. The meaning, when used as in this act, is declared by the Court in 16 Mass. Rep. 488, to be, "a competent number of persons, dwelling near together and having one bishop, pastor, &c., set over them."

It is an established rule of the English Church, that a person can be a parishioner in but one parish. By the 28th canon of that Church, unless he be a wayfarer or traveler, he is not entitled to partake of the communion except in the parish to which he belongs, though it is in the discretion of the pastor of another parish to admit him. This same rule governs every Episcopal Church in this country, as will be seen by reference to the 13th canon of the American Church; and it must be conceded that such a rule is indispensable to Church discipline, and must be maintained inviolate. Surely the English Government will not be supposed to have been willing to violate, by any charter, so well settled and salutary a principle of its own established Church; and no strained construction should be put on a charter, to give it a meaning so repugnant to the probable intent of the Government granting it.

So too in this country, where every form of religion is fully and equally protected, the government will not be supposed to have intended to make an exception to its beneficent rules of toleration, in singling out this particular church as an object of unjust discrimination, and despotically to say, it shall not be governed according to the established forms and usages of its faith, by a vestry chosen by its own pew-holders and communicants, but may be governed by a vestry chosen by the votes of those who do not worship within its walls, or kneel at its altar; by those who are members of other religious corporations, and aliens to this. Will the law deprive the parishioners of Trinity Church of the rights enjoyed by every other Church in the State of every denomination, that of choosing its own officers? It would be a deprivation of the right of self-government. A vestry chosen by the votes of those who are members of other religious corporations would select a rector for the congregation who would not be the choice of the parishioners, and would manage all the affairs of the corporation with reference rather to the interests of the Churches to which the voters belonged, than to those of Trinity Church. It would be an unheard of despotism, thus to permit one set of men to govern another—to control its spiritual as well as temporal affairs. It would be utterly at war with all our ideas of civil and religious liberty.

The principle that makes a person a member of, but one parish, and responsible to but one religious society, pervaded the whole Christian world, and is indispensable to the maintaining of discipline, and preservation of purity. If, when the pastor withholds the sacred elements from one of his flock because of his unworthiness, he can go to another parish, and there enjoy the right to receive the holy sacrament, the church would fail utterly in its influence and its power to do good.

I understand that it is the practice in all well-regulated churches of different denominations, when a person removes from a parish of which he is a member, to take with him a letter dismissory, accrediting him to the pastor in charge of the parish to which he removes, certifying to his good standing in the church, in which he is formally transferred from one society to the other, and admitted as a member of the latter.

So universal is the sentiment in favor of the necessity for this discipline, that all our general laws for the forming and regulating of religious societies are framed upon it. The general act of April 6, 1784, as to all religious denominations, authorizes the male persons of full age belonging to any church, congregation or religious society not already established, to assemble and meet together, and by a plurality of voices, elect trustees and organize as a corporate society. (1 Jones and Varick 104. So too, the act of 1801, re-enacted in 1813, called "an act to provide for the incorporation of religious societies," provides in the first section for the incorporation of societies of the Protestant Episcopal Church, but extends the benefits only to those not already incorporated. (1 Kent and Radcliff, 1336.) By thus allowing a person to be corporator in but one church, the statute protects fully the Episcopal and other churches in their long-established and indispensable usages.

There is certainly nothing in the charter of 1697, or in the subsequent statutes, that sanctions, in the least degree, the idea that persons in communion with the Protestant Episcopal Church, who were parishioners of other parishes, could vote at the vestry elections of Trinity Church. Even if it were the fair interpretation of the act of 1784, that Episcopalians generally who were inhabitants of the City of New York, had a right to vote, which I deny, yet it is certain that even then, on well settled principles of law, that right would cease on uniting with another congregation. The moment a member of Trinity Parish became a corporator in another church, he ceased to be a corporator of Trinity Church. (The inhabitants of the Parish of Sutton vs. Cole, 3 Mass. R. 96. The Methodist Episcopal Church of Cincinnati vs. Wood, 8 Hammond, R. 288.)

No one has ever yet voted at the vestry elections of Trinity Church who was not a member of Trinity Parish; and the fact that no one out of the parish so voted or claimed the right to vote from 1784 to 1812, a period of 28 years, shows a contemporaneous practical construction of the act of 1784, which, in a case of doubt, should be conclusive.

The fact that no person has ever voted at the vestry elections of Trinity Church, except a pew holder or a communicant of that church, has never been controverted. It was not denied in 1814, nor in 1845 or 1847, when applications were made to the Legislature to repeal the act of 1814. But we have, nevertheless, not neglected to prove it. I know it is difficult to give proof in regard to transactions which occurred sixty or seventy years ago, but fortunately we were able to ... something from which to argue; the ... those that did not [illegible] ... Adjourned to hear further witnesses.

THE STILLWELL METHODIST SOCIETY CLAIMING INTEREST UPON A LEGACY.

The trustees of the Stillwell Methodist Society presented a petition for payment of interest upon a legacy of $6,000, left them by Mr. Samual Stillwell. The decedent was one of the principal movers in the secession from the Methodist Society. From a brother of his, who was a minister, the name of "Stillwell Methodists" was given to the seceders. The will stipulated that the legacy should not be paid till three years after the death of the testator's widow. The widow died eighteen months ago, and the petition le for interest upon the $6,000 from the date of the widow's decease.

Mr. Samuel Doughty, the widow's executor, is ready to pay the interest when the proper parties are determined to show such payment should be made. At the present time there are two sets of trustees, each claiming to be entitled to the money. Several witnesses were examined, showing that the parties whose names were affixed to the petition were the genuine trustees. On the 9th inst., to which time the case was adjourned, witnesses will be heard for the other trustees.

WILL OF JOSIAH S. SUTHERLAND.

This will case came up again, the second citations ordered by the Surrogate being made returnable on this day. Mr. Sutherland died on the 3d of last January, leaving his entire estate to his wife, whom he appointed as sole executrix. The brothers and sisters of the deceased contest the will, alleging under influence. Mr. Wm. Sutherland, one of the brothers, died since the last citation, and the Surrogate directed that his legal representatives be cited to appear as contestant in his place, through Mr. David R. Jaques as their special guardian. The examination of witnesses was set down for to-morrow.

Inspected during first quarter of 1857, 1,659 bbls. Pearls and 4,977 bbls. Pots, against 393 bbls. Pearls and 3,219 bbls. Pots same time last year. Saleratus, 7¾c ₹ lb.

COFFEE—is dull and heavy. Java, 15c.@15¾c.; Laguayra, 11½c.@12¾c.; Maracaibo, 11¾c.@12¾c.; Rio, 9¾c.@12c.; Jamaica, 11¾c.@11¾c.; and St. Domingo, 11¾c. ₹ lb.

COTTON—The demand is good, both for home use and shipment, and as there are fewer samples offering, as well of Cotton here as of Cotton in transitu, prices steadily favor factors. Middling Uplands, 14¾c.@14¾c; do. Gulfs 14¾c.@14¾c., and other kinds at proportionate rates, ₹ lb. Our available supply comprises 84,881 bales—the bulk of which runs, in quality, under middling, and therefore does not suit the leading buyers—against 58,709 bales same time last year.

DRY GOODS—The Dry Goods trade exhibits no remarkable change. The current rates are moderate, and, with the exception of favorite domestic Cottons, which command particularly high and satisfactory prices, the tendency of the market for most articles is in favor of purchasers. The numerous auction sales, themselves not nearly as successful as those which occurred earlier in the season, seriously impede regular business, especially in foreign fabrics. The disposition to warehouse these is increasing, and by the time the revised tariff shall take effect, it is anticipated that there will be an unusually large amount of goods in the public stores to be affected by it. In the meantime purchasers will hardly venture to buy more than may be found necessary to meet their requirements, and this will not suffice to maintain a demand that cannot generally be satisfied by factors easily, and at rates, at the best, not much at variance with the prevailing currency.

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western flour is in moderate request and is heavy in price. Sales have been reported since our last of about 8,000 bbls., in lots, mainly at prices within the annexed range:

Ordinary State	$5 50@$5 60
Straight State	5 60@ 5 70
Favorite and Extra State	5 70@ 6 00
Common to Good Indiana and Upper Lake	5 50@ 5 75
Common to Good Superfine Ohio	5 70@ 5 90
Fancy Michigan	5 70@ 5 90
Extra Indiana and Michigan	5 95@ 7 30
Extra Ohio	6 00@ 7 75
Fancy Genesee	6 00@ 6 20
Extra Genesee	6 75@ 8 25
Extra Missouri	6 00@ 8 25

Canadian is less abundant, and is in more demand. Superfine to extra is worth $5 95@$7 40 ₹ bbl; 1,000 bbls. were disposed of within the range. Southern continues in fair demand, but heavy in value. The transactions since our last comprise about 1,500 bbls. low Mixed to choice Extra, at $6 05@$6 75 ₹ bbl. Rye Flour is quiet, yet steady, at $3 40@$4 50 for Fine to Superfine, ₹ bbl. Corn Meal is in moderate supply and demand, at $3 15@$3 20 for Jersey, and $3 60@$3 65 for Brandywine, ₹ bbl. The latter brings $17@$17 25 in puncheons.

FISH—Dry Cod are sparingly dealt in, though being procurable at $3@$3 87½ ₹ cwt. Pickled Cod, $3 75@$4 25 ₹ bbl. Mackerel are in light supply and fair request. $19@$20 for large No. 1; $11@$11 50 for small do.; $10 50@$11 for large No. 2; $9 75@$10 25 for small and medium do.; $8 25@$8 50 for large No. 3; and $7 75@$8 for medium do., ₹ bbl. Pickled Salmon, $21@$23, ₹ bbl., and $23 ₹ bbl. Shad at $10 50 for Connecticut No. 1, and $9 50 for No. 2, ₹ half bbl. Pickled Herring are plenty and heavy at $3 12½@$3 50 ₹ bbl. Smoked Herring are in fair supply and demand, at 35c.@37½c. for Sealed, and 27c.@28c. for No. 1, ₹ box.

GRAIN—Wheat is quiet, but held with slightly renewed confidence. Prime lots are comparatively scarce and most needed. The sales reported to-day embraced 8,300 bushels, including Canadian and Southern white, at private bargains. The nominal range for all kinds is from $1 40@$1 65 for ordinary to choice white, and $1 20@$1 25 for red, ₹ bushel. Rye is in demand, and is steady at 84c.@88c. ₹ bushel; 7,250 bushels were disposed of within the range. Barley is worth $1 52@$1 75, for inferior to prime, in lots, ₹ bushel, being very scarce and in demand. Barley Malt is rare and held at from $1 80 @$1 85 ₹ bushel. Oats are moderately inquired for, and are heavy, at 54c.@55c. for Western; 52c.@54c. for State; 51c.@53c. for Jersey, and 49c.@51c. for Southern, ₹ bushel. Corn continues in good demand, but at somewhat irregular prices. We have heard of sales of about 55,000 bushels at 69c.@70c. for old Western mixed, in store; 66c.@68c. for mixed Southern; 65c.@74c. for new and old yellow; and 63c.@70c. for new and old white, ₹ bushel. PROVISIONS.—Pork is moderately dealt in at reduced prices for Mess, and somewhat firmer rates for Prime. Sales have been reported of about 400 bbls., in lots, at $23 40 for old Mess, $23 60@$23 70 for new Mess, and $19 50@$19 60 for Prime, ₹ bbl. Stock in the packing yards of New-York and Brooklyn to-day comprised 28,779 hhls., against 15,003 hhls., March 1, 1857, and 22,460 hhls., April 1, 1856. Dressed Hogs bring, in lots, 9¾c.@9¾c. ₹ lb. Cut Meats are in limited demand, and are heavy at 10¾c.@11¾c. for Hams; and 9c.@9¾c. for Shoulders, ₹ lb. Bacon is salable and firm, at 10¾c.@12c. ₹ lb. Lard is in good request at buoyant prices. The transactions since our last reach about 450 bbls. and kegs, mostly take to prime, at 14¾c.@ 14¾c., and 500 kegs, at 15c.@15¾c. ₹ lb. Beef is in fair demand, at full rates. The transactions since our last consist of 425 bbls. at $10 75@ $11 50 for new Prime; $12 75@$14 for Country Mess; $16@$16 25 for repacked Western Mess; and $17@$17 25 for extra Chicago do., ₹ bbl. LAW INTELLIGENCE.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—April 1.

Before Judge Betts.

Noel Brooks, a colored man, was put on trial this morning charged with assaulting the second mate of the bark N. W. Bridge with a dangerous weapon, to wit, a jewel block, at Havana in August last. The mate testified that he sent Brooks aloft to do some work; that Brooks did not do as he was told and swore at him, whereupon he went up himself, and just as he got to him Brooks struck him on the side of the head with the block. Some slight attempt was made to show that it was an accident caused by the block slipping, but the Jury found him guilty.

John Brown and the same Noel Brooks were then tried for an endeavor to make a revolt on board the bark. No evidence was offered by the defence, and the jory found them both guilty.

The Jury were then discharged for the term.

The Court directed all the prisoners who have been convicted to be brought up on Saturday for sentence.

MORE TRICKS OF THE TRADE—PAINTS MADE OF CHARCOAL.

Nichols K. Oatley vs. Daniel Messmore.—This action was brought to recover the amount of a note (for $130,) and interest from August, 1853, made by defendant, and passed to one John C. Ball, in part consideration of a quantity of paints. The making of the note was admitted, but defendant insisted that the paints, after being shipped to St. Louis, and there opened and examined, were found to be perfectly worthless—in fact, nothing but pulverized charcoal; that, in consequence, defendant was put to great trouble, and sustained a large pecuniary loss; and further, that the plaintiff in this suit was the real owner of the article represented as paints, Ball merely acting as his agent.

The testimony was conflicting, and the Court reserved its decision.

SURROGATE'S COURT—April 1.

Before Hon. A. W. Bradford.

A CURIOUS CASE.

The will of Mrs. Margaret T. Clayton was offered to-day for probate. The testatrix was one of the passengers lost on the Lyonnais. A portion of the MS. will had been folded over and wafered. By taking in the part wafered over, the will reads so as to give the bulk of the estate to Mrs. Bassford and her daughter, two of the passengers also lost on the Lyonnais. Omitting this portion, the entire estate goes to the children of the testatrix. The guardian ad litem of the next of kin of Mrs. Bassford and daughter, to whom the bequest fells, claims that portion of the estate bequeathed to Mrs. Baseford and daughter, on the ground that the bequest has never been revoked by the testatrix. The children of the testatrix contest the will, setting up that the bequest in question was revoked. The examination of witnesses for the contestante was commenced.

Charles H. Bailey, one of the witnesses of the will, was first called: He testified that the will was duly executed on the 29th of November, 1854, the time at which it was dated, and that there were no erasures nor pastings over in the manuscript.

Flora Solomon, testified that she was on board the Lyonnais as an attendant upon Mrs. Clayton and Mrs. Bassford; both these ladies were lost; her own life was saved in consequence of the Captain ordering her from the boat in which they were, on account of its being crowded.

Catharine Schaffer testified that she lived as maid-servant for the decedent at No. 76 Christopher-street, three or four years before her decease; she was dusting in the back parlor one day when she noticed Mrs. Clayton sitting by the window with a dictionary in her hands, on which she had some paper and was cutting it; the decedent asked her if she would like to be mentioned in her will, when she replied, Yes; Mrs. Clayton told her she had altered her will in consequence of the death of a sister, who had received

MR. SEARS' NEW WORK.
PICTURES OF THE OLDEN TIME,
As shown in
THE FORTUNES OF A FAMILY OF THE PILGRIMS.
By EDMUND H. SEARS.
12mo. Price $1.
No work has a greater reputation for its criticisms than the Examiner, and that speaks of the above as follows:
"If the relish which Mr. Sears communicates in these few most ingenious pages, which none but a genius could have written to begin with, does not excite hunger, we know not the laws of appetite."
The Telegraph says:
"Few if any more meritorious or interesting books have been issued this year. It will be read with delight by those who are so fortunate as to open it."
And the Hartford Courant:
"An ingenious work, in which fiction and fact are so curiously and closely dovetailed together, that it is difficult to separate them. The real fortunes of a family are carried through three interesting tales, called 'The Exile,' 'The Adventurer,' and 'The Pilgrim.' They are very excitingly written, are true to history in their main details, and are destined to a great run among the reading public."
All critics unite in praising this book.

PARIS MANTLES.
WILLIAM BUCHANAN MACKENZIE,
Feeling assured from past experience that the LADIES OF NEW-YORK
Await with some little anxiety the production of his various styles
FOR THE COMING SEASON,
Has much pleasure in announcing that the long expected and interesting event will take place on THURSDAY, 2D APRIL,
On which occasion he will submit for the approbation of his NUMEROUS PATRONS,
A profusion of exquisite novelties, which, for tasteful conception and artistic finish, will far transcend the brightest efforts of any PREVIOUS SEASON.
His preparations for this important occasion being now completed; he begs to direct the especial attention to the subjoined feeble attempt at illustration of a few of the MOST PROMINENT CHEF-D'OEUVRES.
OF LADIES
THE "ARISBIE"
Is a superb flowing garment, in the most Lustrous Black Taffetas, with a novel application of Velvet and Lace, forming a transparent border, the effect of which is extremely elegant and striking.
Being circular in form, and having the genuine Spanish "Capuche," it is perfectly appropriate to the approaching GENIAL SEASON.
THE "PHILOMEDA"
Is one of those ravishing productions that only the genius of a
PARISIAN MODISTE
Could conceive. It is formed of the favorite Black Taffetas, with a Vandyke border, composed of "Dew-drop" Buttons on an open ground, which of itself is the most chaste and appropriate beading to the really magnificent
FALL OF GUIPURE LACE AND FRINGE
Which completes the adornment of this most elegant garment.
THE "LEUCOTHEA"
Is a light and graceful envelope, composed of a profusion of Chenille, and feather-edged Gauze trimmings on the finest Brussels Nett, the Pellerine of Taffetas, surmounted by a second Cape of Brussels Nett and Guipure Lace and Fringe. The peculiar manner in which the bias-formed extension passes over the arms in front, gives to this article a most recherche and pleasing effect.
THE "IPHIGENIA"
Is of a different character from any of the foregoing, being Circular behind, with the Mantilla for a rain front,—the shoulders are surrounded with a deep fall of Guipure fringe, the same being also applied as an elegant finish at the bottom,—the intervening flouncing formed of Brussels Nett, with alternate layers of cut-velvet and feather braids in horizontal lines, preserving the light and airy effect essential in a
SUMMER GARMENT.
THE "ANTHEIA,"
OR LONG SHAWL MANTLE,
Is designed for a somewhat later period of the season, as it but touches the points of the shoulder, falling from thence in graceful folds, and in its transparent beauty half concealing the full flounced robe over which it is intended to be worn.
THE "CHRYSEIS,"
Another of those witching transparencies so suggestive of BEAUTIFUL SPRING,
is also a combination of silk and lace, edged with the favorite Guipure and a ruche puffing. The trimmings which are most tastefully arranged are mainly composed of cut-velvet and Gauze ribbon with a minute velvet head disposed which considerably heightens the effect of the Tout-ensemble.
The above form but a trifling quota, culled at random from the best of beautiful and distingué garments which form the present collection, to which, however, must be added, the CIRCASSIAN,
NEWPORT, AND
JACKET,
And the new
LADIES' CLOTH PALETOT
Garments of extreme beauty and utility.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Metropolitan Police bill was passed to a third reading in the Assembly on Tuesday night, or rather yesterday morning, about 1 o'clock, after a protracted debate, and the most decided opposition to every section. No material amendments, however, were made. The bill providing for increasing the thickness of party walls in this City, in conformity with the present law, was passed. The bill providing for the raising of $300,000 for the purchase of market sites, and the erection of markets in this City, was ordered to a third reading. Various other matters of interest in this locality were acted upon.

The Rhode Island State Election took place yesterday, and resulted in a complete triumph for the Republicans. Elisha Dyer has been elected Governor, and all the other Republican candidates for State offices have been elected. Only a few Democrats have been returned to the Legislature. Both the Republican candidates for Congress have also been elected—Nathaniel B. Durfee in the Eastern District, and Wm. D. Beatton in the Western.

The steamboat Forest Rose was blown up on the Mississippi River yesterday, near Napoleon, and it is reported that many lives were lost.

At 7¼ last night a sound was heard in Beekman-street as grateful to citizens as the jingling of gold to a dying miser; it was the scraping of a score of hoes upon the cobble-stones of the pavement. The Italians worked like beavers, and carts, which is a still greater wonder, were on hand to remove the heaps of dirt. We learn that in all the Wards but the First and Second the contractors have had no difficulty, and the trouble in these is fast passing away. As if in honor of the Croton Aqueduct Regulation which permits street sprinkling on and after the first of April, it rained gently all the afternoon of yesterday. It laid the dust beautifully.

The relief of Broadway was again under discussion yesterday, before the Councilmen's Committee. The favorite scheme urged was,—letting it alone. Pave the parallel streets decently and oblige nine out of ten of the omnibuses to follow them, and Broadway will flow on unimpeded, they say. Indeed, it is prudent that the Broadway doctors be careful not to relieve the owners of Broadway property of too much while agonizing to relieve the street.

Three Aldermen, Steers, Harris and Drake, are missing. They compose the Committee of the Board on Ferries. They advertised that at 7 o'clock last evening, they would hold their final meeting for investigating the affairs of the Union Ferry Company, but they did not do so. This is the third consecutive time they have failed to meet after making the appointment.

At the meeting of the Board of Education last night, the annual apportionment of school moneys was reported as follows: 1. An amount equal to the State quota, which, excluding Library money, is $202,905 25. 2. An amount equal to one twentieth of one per cent. on the taxable property of the City, being $255,870. The total average attendance being 47,584, the amount per scholar is $9.64. The school officers of the Fourteenth Ward were authorized to advertise for proposals to make improvements on school building No. 32, not to exceed $5,000.

The receipts of Beef Cattle at the different sales yards for the week ending yesterday, numbered 5,195, an excess over the demand at this season. About three-fourths of this number, or 2,379, were on sale at the Washington Yards yesterday morning and the previous evening. The better quality of the stock offered prevented any material decline in price from the rates of the previous week, though the same grades went a trifle lower, and the market closed last evening with a downward tendency, and some cattle still unsold.

The Stillwell Methodists had a legacy of $6,000 left them by Mr. Samuel Stillwell, one of the leaders in their secession. The will provided that the money should not be paid till three years after the death of the testator's widow. The widow died eighteen months ago. A petition was presented yesterday to the Surrogate from parties claiming to be Trustees of the Society mentioned, for the payment of interest upon the $6,000 since the widow's death. Another party claimed that they are the trustees, and ask that the money be paid to them. Witnesses for the first party were heard yesterday.

A singular will case came up, yesterday, before the Surrogate. Mrs. Bassford and daughter, two of the lost passengers on the Lyonnais, were the principal legatees in the will of Mrs. Margaret Clayton, who also was lost in the Lyonnais. The will bears date Nov. 29, 1854. The manuscript has some erasures in it, and a portion of it is so wafered over as to make its construction doubtful. The guardian of the next of kin of Mrs. Bassford claims the bequest made to Mrs. B. and her daughter. The children of the testatrix contest the will, urging that the bequest has been revoked.

Alfred Brown and Noel Brooks, two individuals having "no rights that a white man is bound to respect," were found guilty in the United States District Court of an endeavor to make a revolt on board the bark N. W. Bridge, on which Lemuel Scates, Brooks was also found guilty of striking the mate on the head with a block.

A large seizure of liquors has recently been made by officers of the Custom-House. Mr. Redfield, the Collector, refuses to make known the parties to whom the goods were consigned, as they allege that they can show they had no connivance in the transaction. The goods seized were imported under fraudulent invoices. If the parties in question fail to show that the invoices were unintentionally incorrect they will be handed over to the United States authorities.

Examiner B. Hart, the new Surveyor, entered upon the duties of his office yesterday, having been sworn into office on Friday last by the Collector of the Port. He has made no changes thus far in his clerks, of which he has twenty-one in all. It is said that no changes will be made till the 1st of July, when the new Collector assumes his duties.

A meeting of the Captains of target companies who propose to participate in the grand parade on the 20th of April, was held last evening. The positions of each company in the battalions, the distribution of the muskets, the proper way of marching, whether by platoons or sections, and other details, furnished the topics of debate. It was concluded to leave all this to each Ward organization. The music for the occasion has nearly proved a bone of contention. At a former meeting it was resolved that each Ward organization should be limited to 15 pieces, but many of them had engaged more than the specified number—one as many as 44 pieces—while three of the Wards had been unable to procure any. This vexed question was settled by an agreement that those who had engaged large bands should divide with the less fortunate. A resolution expelling Mr. Samuel Jackson, formerly Secretary of the Committee of Arrangements, for spreading reports injurious to the organization, such as that it was formed for political purposes, &c., was unanimously adopted. So far over 200 hundred companies—composed of about 10,000 men, have reported themselves at headquarters ready for parade. Besides these, one company from Philadelphia, four from Brooklyn, two from Jersey City, and one from Newark have signified their intention of uniting in the display.

At the meeting of the New-York Academy of Medicine, last night, Dr. Francis presented a series of resolutions, prefaced by a speech of unusual eloquence, in testimony of the many virtues of Dr. Kane. Dr. Isaacs read a valuable paper on the "Anatomy of the Pleura," and a discussion on the "Contagiousness of Puerperal Fever" ensued.

April Fool Day is going out of remembrance. There was less fooling yesterday than usual—thanks to advancing civilization. An evening paper tried to get up an April fool panic about tea, which had no other effect than to send up the nervous to the tea-stores to buy up supplies before the present stock runs out, which left China long enough before the war broke out.

The Quarantine Question.

It is settled that Quarantine cannot go to Sandy Hook. The insulted dignity of New-Jersey will not permit it, and whatever may be thought of the action of that State in the matter, its refusal is absolute and decisive.

The duty, therefore, devolves upon the Commission appointed under the recent act of our Legislature, of selecting some other ground where vessels from infected ports may be quarantined during the approaching season. They have authority from the State and funds at their control, to make temporary provision for such a new location. Their first object will, of course, be to consult the health of the City of New-York and its immediate vicinity. The main objection to the present quarantine is that its proximity to New-York, Brooklyn and the densely settled parts of Long Island, subject the inhabitants of those localities, as well as those on the eastern side of Staten Island, to infection. The experience of last Summer in this respect will not speedily be forgotten.

Probably the best place now left open to the choice of the Commissioners will prove to be Prince's Bay on the southwest side of Staten Island. The water there is from twelve to twenty feet deep,—quite sufficient to accommodate the smaller class of vessels which trade with the ports likely to be infected. The island in that immediate vicinity is very sparsely settled, and there are no interests which would be injuriously affected by the location. It is not quite so convenient for shipping, it is true, as Sandy Hook would have been, but this inconvenience is one to which, as long as we have New-Jersey for a neighbor, our shipping interests must submit.

The only objection to this selection arises from the immediate proximity of Perth Amboy, South Amboy, Keyport, Elizabeth and other large New-Jersey towns to the new Quarantine. But as the members from those sections in the New-Jersey Legislature were unanimous and resolute in their opposition to the cession of Sandy Hook, we presume they and their constituents are prepared to acquiesce in this location. At all events it is the duty of the Commission to consult the safety and the health of the million of people who live in this City and its immediate vicinity.

Maritime Law and the Rights of Neutrals.

There has been no period, for many years, when the mutual relations of the European and American Continents have promised, on the whole, a more satisfactory future than the present. If we except the storm which seems to be brewing at the Court of Madrid against Mexico, the feeling on both sides of the Atlantic is cordial and trustful, and no more auspicious moment could be chosen for the perfection of those plans regarding international intercourse, which, for over half a century, have formed a favorite theme of theoretical discussion among leading American statesmen of all parties. The rapid advance of enlightenment in the principles of political economy, the explosion of all those absurdities upon which the navigation laws of the last century were based, and the general disposition which prevails to adapt legislation to the spirit of the age, render it possible to urge propositions now, which, even five years ago, would have been rejected as premature, and only exposed our diplomacy to ridicule.

Within the present year, the Danish Sound tolls, with their centuries of prestige, will have become a matter of history, and this will have been owing solely and exclusively to the perseverance and energy which have been displayed by the American Government. There now arises the necessity of procuring the embodiment, among the established rules of international law, that PRIVATE PROPERTY UPON THE OCEAN SHALL, in times of war as well as peace, BE FOREVER EXEMPTED FROM SEIZURE BY EITHER PUBLIC ARMED VESSELS, OR BY PRIVATEERS. It is the confident conviction of leading minds that if our Government shall continue to press this subject before the nations of the world, not two years will have passed away before it shall have been recognized as a principle, everywhere, that unarmed vessels are never to be molested, except when carrying goods contraband of war.

The foundation of the old navigation laws was monopoly. In time of peace, its accomplishment was sought for by excluding the manufactures, products, and shipping of other countries, by the limitation of the export trade, the isolation of colonies, and such other means as were best fitted indirectly to annihilate and restrict the commerce of neighboring nations. Times of war afforded, however, peculiar facilities for this monopolizing policy. Enemies' goods were deemed proper objects for prize or destruction, wherever they could be found; not only when conveyed in hostile ships, but even in those of nations unengaged in the war. Great powers whose vessels were excluded by their fends from some portion of the carrying trade, decreed that other nations should not derive profit where they could not, and their practice was submitted to and copied. Thus the commerce of every part of the globe became affected, or liable to be affected, by the squabbles of any two people.

The crusade against Napoleon, in the earlier years of this century, gave intensity to this iniquitous policy; but, since the peace of 1815, wiser counsels have held sway and sounder principles of political economy have been developed into a system that has taken root in the commercial intelligence of the entire world. Monopoly has been proved to be bad policy. Nations have discovered that they are subject to the same laws as individuals, and that they cannot injure others without detriment to themselves. Exclusiveness and restriction have been experimentally compared with free-trade, and national prosperity and wealth proved to have increased in exact proportion as the fetters which restrained commerce have been removed. Protection has been abandoned by those apparently most interested in its maintenance, and a revolution has been undergone upon all subjects relating to commerce, the steps of which may be traced, one by one, from the time of Mr. Huskisson, down to the opening of the coasting trade of Great Britain in 1854, and the Clarendon declaration respecting neutral ships in the Russian war, which latter afforded the first dawn of hope that the British Government might take the noble position which is open for it in relation to the establishment of a new basis for international maritime relations.

Mr. Marcy did not think it possible for the Government of the United States to abandon the right of giving letters of marque, unless the whole ground should be covered of exempting unarmed vessels altogether from seizure in time of war. However correct his view may be as a matter of policy, it ought not to be denied that privateering, under the existing relations of nations, must ever partake, more or less, of the nature of piracy. The army of a civilized nation is always supposed, in land warfare, to protect private property from robbery by its own soldiers. Unresisting towns and villages are not given over to destruction because they belong to individuals of a hostile nation; neither is property any longer seized upon indiscriminately by invaders. The reason is that the people are innocent of hostility and are protected by their peaceful demeanor. Why should not the peaceful flags of commercial vessels pass current in the same manner, and ships laden with silk, cotton, dry goods, hemp, leather, iron, woolens, &c., be reciprocally respected and allowed to pursue their way on the ocean unmolested? Would England, for instance, be weakened as a nation by the loss to a few merchants of their private property? Or would the plunder of American argosies incapacitate our Government from carrying on a war? The amount of private misery created has never, in the history of the world, deterred belligerent nations from hostilities.

Moreover, the profit derived by naval officers or privateers from the present system is always at the expense of high and noble principles. A cruel greed of gain is created, which can only be satiated by the wretchedness of persons who are unprotected and harmless; and not only a pirate's actions are legalized, but a buccaneer's inhumanity is ennobled. Let the Government of Mr. Buchanan, (backed as it will be by our national prestige, and by the sympathy of intelligent men—men of the age—all over the world) fulfill the requirements of its position, and correspond with the action of Administrations of all parties which have gone before it, and it will, doubtless, succeed in accomplishing the grand end for which the events of over fifty years have been gradually and carefully preparing the way. The time has now fully come, and to him will belong the glory of gathering the fruit which former Presidents, sometimes with his own aid, have carefully cultivated.

Street-Cleaning—Who Governs the City?

At the instigation of certain Ward Inspectors and ex-swindlemongering contractors, all of whom are at the beck of the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps, a combination of carmen and laborers has been organized, for the express purpose of interfering with Messrs. Reynolds & Smith, in the endeavors which they are making to clean the streets of the City. Mutual support, and even pecuniary aid, has been promised, provided carmen will abstain from assisting in carrying away the dirt and garbage which, since last July, has been permitted to accumulate in our thoroughfares. Moreover, a petition to the Common Council has been drawn up, and is being numerously signed by grog-shop politicians, misguided workmen, and such owners of carts as have been dependent upon Mr. Ebling and his satellites, that the contracts recently signed by the Mayor, Comptroller and Commissioner of Streets and Lamps may not be confirmed. In fact, an active rowdy war has been initiated by those who have heretofore enjoyed the privilege of being fed gratis out of the public treasury, against the peace, comfort and welfare of the community. The grave question to be decided remains: who shall triumph?

Notwithstanding the obstacles which Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Smith have had to encounter, they have already accomplished much towards fulfilling their premise, that the Wards under their control shall be thoroughly cleaned. Although they have been compelled to send outside of the City for laborers and carts, and their employes have been mobbed on two nights out of the four that they have been engaged at work, those citizens who are accustomed to passing through Wall, Washington, Beekman, Greenwich, Fulton, Nassau, and Chatham streets, and the lower part of Broadway, will acknowledge that they are already in a better condition than has been witnessed since May, 1855, when the sweeping-machines were in full vogue. The Fifteenth and Ninth Wards are filled with laborers, and over forty carts have been employed in them, since night before last. Thanks to the efficiency of the police, and the energy displayed by the sweepers themselves, all difficulty has disappeared in the Fifth, Eighth and Fourteenth Wards, and they being rapidly cleaned. The Tenth and Sixth Wards, also, present a satisfactory appearance. A thousand loads of dirt were, day before yesterday, taken from Mulberry-street alone. In the First, Second and Third Wards, where the opposition was greatest, it has now been coerced into indirect methods of activity, and the garbage will have been so effectually removed by next Tuesday, that the machines can be put in operation.

Under the circumstances; with the full force of public opinion in favor of the new contractors; with the remembrance fresh before us, that no work whatever had been done on the streets for nine months; in view of the dangers of pestilence, and disease from malaria, during the Summer months; will it be possible for any amount of outside pressure to prevent the Common Council from doing what it ought, in the premises? No opportunity has yet been afforded for effectually testing the animus of the new Corporation. It may be, and we are willing to hope that it is, totally different from the last, and that it will have a single eye to the welfare of the inhabitants of this vast Metropolis. An opportunity is presented, when proof of the character, for good or evil, of the two Boards must be given. They are called upon to decide whether they will be turned aside from the obvious course of rectitude, by a clamor which arises from the lowest moral dregs of the population, and which has its origin in the basest and most sordid passions, or whether they will simply do their duty. As to the sentiments of the entire intelligence and wisdom of all virtuous citizens, of ALL classes and belonging to ALL parties, to be regarded, or is a victory to be achieved by villainy, dishonesty, and vice in low places, in opposition to the evident dictates of law and of justice? Is the Charter to be observed, and the statutes of the Legislature to be complied with, or is plunder to be the watchword by which our City is to be misgoverned?

We shall closely watch the course which is pursued by the City authorities on the one side, and by the new contractors on the other. The latter have begun their work efficiently and well. They have the law on their side, and there is no extent of praise which will not be due to them if they continue to perform their duty. A "new broom," however, "sweeps clean," and they must recollect that it will not be sufficient to have once removed the dirt which encumbers the City; it must be kept in order at all times and seasons, and an entire revolution must be effected, when compared with the past.

The Upper Isthmus.

Fifteen millions was the sum which Mr. Buchanan, as Secretary of State, authorized Mr. Trist to offer Mexico for the right of way across Tehuantepec in 1847. Fifteen millions is the sum which Mr. Forsyth proposes to lend Mexico, without any particular security, but with some undetermined reference to territorial forfeiture in case of non-payment. Fifteen millions is stated as the sum which President Buchanan stands ready to give for the Tehuantepec transit. Here is a curious coincidence. The Washington par value for Tehuantepec is evidently $15,000,000. It requires no unusual skill at drawing an inference to assume that the possession of this particular route to the Pacific is a prime article in the Presidential creed—and that, before 1860, we shall, in all likelihood, add this to sundry other shrewd operations in land.

It must be owned, in talking of no better price for the bargain than we tendered ten years ago, and were refused, we show very slight mercantile skill. Mexico is certainly an abject mendicant; quite likely to part with any not absolutely vital member of her body politic, in order to raise ready cash. But as few men are eager to sell their bodies to the surgeons, for the largest figures, if instant death be a condition of the trade, so Mexico will not surrender Tehuantepec save with her very existence. For that reason she canceled the Garay grant, and repudiated the decrees of Salas, the dictator. For that reason she scorned the propositions of Mr. Trist; and repudiated a treaty upon the same subject which Mr. Webster subsequently caused to be negotiated. For that reason, her Congress by resolution announced that the mere discussion of a transfer of the Isthmus route should in future constitute constructive treason. Such dogged appreciation of her advantages is not to be lightly overcome. It is inveterate. Tehuantepec is in that portion of the Republic under the peculiar guardianship of Gen. Alvarez, who is too shrewd not to realize its enhanced value, and too potent to admit of its alienation without his assent.

On the other hand, the course of affairs in Central America, with the acquisition of the Honduras route by British subjects, under guarantee of their Government, renders the possession of the nearer path all-important to the Government of the United States. By the isthmus of Tehuantepec, San Francisco is 1,100 miles nearer New-York than by the isthmus of Panama; while New-Orleans is 1,700 miles nearer. Tehuantepec admits of a ship canal which Panama does not; and such a channel connecting the Gulf of Mexico with the Pacific, might be said to be as strictly within our own waters, as a Pacific Railroad would be within our own lands. Hence, doubtless the empressement of the President; and his very natural desire to remove the American capital invested in the newly-finished wagon-road from the capricious control of the Mexican Government to the more stable protection of that of the United States. It is to be lamented that so laudable a purpose is likely to be balked.

Italian Artists.—There has been a great scarcity of organ grinders in the streets during the past three days, owing, it is said, to the fact of a great number of those Orphean wanderers having been induced to exchange their customary instruments for a broom and a scraper in the service of Mr. Reynolds, the contractor for street sweeping. The change is one to be commended. A large number of Italian venders of plaster statuary have also made a similar change in their professional pursuits, and if Mr. Reynolds could but prevail upon the Chinese cigar dealers who stand about the corners of the streets, as well as the enterprising individual from the Flowery kingdom who informs the pedestrians in Broadway, daily, by means of a placard, that he is starving, to take hold of the broom and the scraper, he would be cleaning the streets in a double sense. As to the starving man in question, it individual who [illegible] to go into another business where the work would be harder and the pay less. However, a suggestion from the police that he has been starving long enough might induce him to accept of an engagement from the street-sweeping department.

Death in the Tea-Pot.—We hope that no votary of the cup that cheers but was never known to inebriate, has been frightened into abandoning her, couching or bohea, or neglecting her old or young hyson on account of the absurd stories that have been told about poisoned tea; for though there may be poison in tea, as there undoubtedly is, yet there is no more now than there always has been. Besides, even if the Hong merchants had made up their minds to kill all outside barbarians by mixing some poisonous substances with their tea, there has not been sufficient time for any of the article to reach this country since the difficulty with Commissioner Yeh in Canton occurred. It is hardly worth while to treat the subject seriously, yet as the majority of tea-drinkers are timid people, it is not improbable that the absurd rumor may have produced a certain amount of domestic confusion. The paper that set the story of poisoned tea afloat is an humble dependent and imitator of the Herald, and hopes like that paper to get itself into notice by the audacity of its inventions and attacks on private interests. But it is a hopeless experiment; as there is only one "historian" of Parker Vein, so there is not room for more than one paper like the Herald at the present time.

Card from Mr. Ebling.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Sir: Your article of April 1, on cleaning streets, implying that I seek to hinder the parties who have agreed to clean the streets for this Department, is wholly without foundation. The Inspectors of my Department have strict orders not to interfere with the work or men employed, in any manner; and any one employed in this Department will be discharged, on proof of the fact of any such interference. The following order is hereby issued: All persons in the employ of, or in any way connected with, the Department of Streets and Lamps, are hereby notified that any interference, on their part, to prevent the parties who have agreed to clean the streets of the City from performing the work, or annoying them, will be discharged immediately, on proof being forwarded of such interference. By order.

JOSEPH E. EBLING,
Commissioner of Streets and Lamps.

We are very glad to publish the above. If the promises it makes are kept, it will effectually silence the implication which the action of Mr. Ebling's subordinates would otherwise convey. We trust that obedience to his order will be imperatively required.

The Medical Monthly for April (very much improved, by the way, under its new editorship of Drs. F. H. Parker and J. H. Douglas) is out with a strong commendation of sewing machines for the creatures of the body they require in the operator. It promises to prescribe besides iron for the pale girl who is compelled to sew for a living, a sewing machine.

WE HAVE PROVED IT
To our own satisfaction that the cheapest store in this town is DAILEY & CO.'S, Nos. 631 and 633 Broadway. We bought one of the $11 tea kettles, (silver-plated at that,) and the wife says it is "charming." It remains for us to say, "Go thou," &c., &c.

LEA & PERRIN'S WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE.—At the dinner table every dish of roast meat should have one or more table spoonfuls of this Sauce in the gravy; and for game a moderate quantity should be mixed with the sauce, and the bottle placed upon the table for the use of those who require an additional quantity. JOHN DUNCAN & SONS, No. 405 Broadway, sole agents for the proprietors.

FISH! FISH! FISH! FISH! FISH!

ONLY THOSE WHO HAVE SUFFERED ALL the lingering pangs of Dyspepsia in its terrible forms, can appreciate the value of a medicine that will cure this disease. To all who would find a remedy we say, try the Compound Elixir.

A Touch of the Magnificent, after Headley.

BEAUTIFUL AND MAGNIFICENT AS THE rising of the Orient sun cometh forth the NEW-YORK LEDGER this morning. In its resplendent columns shine the corruscations of the brightest intellect, the fascinations of the most exuberant fancy, and the electric flashes of the most transcendent genius; and the eye of the rapt beholder is dazzled with the gorgeous glories of Art which its unrivaled engravings so enchantingly throw over its pages.

The thrilling and gorgeous scenes of picturesque romance; the pathetic and absorbing incidents of that "course of true love which never yet ran smooth;" the inculcations of deepest and most charitable wisdom; the sparkling play of dazzling wit; the rainbow effulgence of exquisite fancy; the beneficent teachings of moral truth; the fascinating exhibitions of artistic beauty displayed in its engravings; in short, whatever of goodness, truth, wit, wisdom, fancy and beauty the human mind can produce and the human imagination embellish, may be found in THE LEDGER in lavish abundance, THIS (Thursday) MORNING, at 4 o'clock.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., March 26, 1857.

THE ABOVE NOTICE HAVING APPEARED in this morning's Journal of Commerce and Times newspapers, we would respectfully give the public an explanation.

At the solicitation of Messrs. WALKER & Co., we entered into articles of copartnership with them on the 28th Nov., 1856, for the purpose of conducting the Provision, Fur and Distilling business, and we accepted for them large amounts previous to and after executing said copartnership articles, with the understanding that WALKER & Co. would forward us provisions, &c., to cover said acceptances—instead, however, of using our said acceptances as agreed, they had them discounted, and used the proceeds in their own business, and allowed them to be protested at maturity, thereby injuring our business and credit.

We have also been subjected to heavy expenses, advances of monies and losses in business by the non-fulfillment of the said WALKER & Co. of their part of said articles of copartnership—our only security for the adjustment of our losses, advances, expenses, protests, &c., &c., being the advertised acceptances.

A NEW TALE BY COBB.—MR. COBB'S NEW story entitled THE WILD KNIGHT; OR, THE UNKNOWN CRUSADER, is commenced in the NEW-YORK LEDGER for next week, now ready and for sale everywhere. It is one of the most brilliant and powerfully-written Tales that ever emanated from his popular pen. Mr. COBB, as we have repeatedly stated, now writes only for the LEDGER; but so great is his popularity that a Pennsylvania daily paper, and one other concern, seeing that they cannot get any of his new tales, are republishing some of his old ones, written during his boyhood and published years ago. We do not blame them; starving men very seldom stand upon ceremony; if they cannot sit down on an equality at the table, they will "grab" at the cold victuals! Such is poor human nature the world over. N. B.—The LEDGER is ready THIS MORNING. It is a great number. Illustrated with eight beautiful Engravings from original designs. Buy it, sure!

A NEW TALE BY COBB.—MR. COBB'S NEW story entitled THE WILD KNIGHT; OR, THE UNKNOWN CRUSADER, is commenced in the NEW-YORK LEDGER for next week, now ready and for sale everywhere. It is one of the most brilliant and powerfully-written Tales that ever emanated from his popular pen. Mr. COBB, as we have repeatedly stated, now writes only for the LEDGER; but so great is his popularity that a Pennsylvania daily paper, and one other concern, seeing that they cannot get any of his new tales, are republishing some of his old ones, written during his boyhood and published years ago. We do not blame them; starving men very seldom stand upon ceremony; if they cannot sit down on an equality at the table, they will "grab" at the cold victuals! Such is poor human nature the world over. N. B.—The LEDGER is ready THIS MORNING. It is a great number. Illustrated with eight beautiful Engravings from original designs. Buy it, sure!

ANOTHER GREAT STORY OF REAL LIFE, called
OR RICH MEN'S DAUGHTERS," which must command the

GREAT QUESTION OF THE DAY;
that of
THE RELATIONS OF RICHES WITH POVERTY.

THE TWENTY MILLIONS OF AMERICA who are INTERESTED IN THE STRUCTURE OF OUR SOCIETY, will not fail to
READ THIS GREAT REVELATION!

SOMETHING OF THE SCOPE OF THIS GREAT STORY
LESSONS IT TEACHES
TO POVERTY AND WEALTH IN AMERICA, may be judged by the following
EXTRACTS FROM THE AUTHOR'S INTRODUCTION:

Late occurrences in this city have called the attention of the public very closely to the subject of what are called "unfortunate marriages." Opinions have been divided on the question of the actual "misfortune" existing in the cases referred to—the marriage of parties separated by early associations and by fortune from each other. There are those who believe that marriages formed under these incongruities seldom or never are productive of happiness. There are others who, while they think the experiment something of a hazardous one, yet believe that many of the happiest marriages in the world have been formed between those of different ranks in life (if ranks indeed there be—especially in Republican America.) They hold—these latter—of whom the writer of the following story is one—that the blending of the fresh and vigorous blood of honest labor, with the somewhat tainted current flowing in the veins of the sons and daughters of our aristocracy—can scarcely be productive of evil to the present or the future.

In the story which follows the question is considered at some length, and what are believed to be the faults and vices of society are handled with a faithful and yet a kindly hand. It is easy to realize, before one word of the tale has gone before the public, that the incidents will be marked as gross exaggeration; and yet, with one or two exceptions, occurring near the close of the story, every one has been furnished by revelations, of real life within the past ten years, in the City of New-York and its immediate neighborhood. It is not claimed that precisely such a succession of events have occurred in any one instance; and yet, scarcely one of the several instances of such deprecated marriages has occurred among us, in which the feeling which would have produced precisely these results has not been indulged in.

The writer believes that a gross error is resting upon minds otherwise tolerably clear in their perceptions, as to the affinity which exists between the human heart in what are called the "higher walks of life" and in humbler and less pretentious society. Whether late occurrences may not rather precipitate and strengthen the antagonism which has in past time been productive of so much misery, is not certain. At all events, the readers of this story may be sure that the revelations of real life contained in it are made without antagonistic feelings towards one or another class of society, and only in reprobation of the improprieties which have grown like fungi upon them—with a hope that something may be done towards their removal.

It may be necessary to say, in conclusion, that the knowledge of many of the facts here embodied has been arrived at through intimate connection with certain legal departments, and also through official familiarity with the internal and the outside working of more than one of the lunatic asylums of our country.

In addition to these TWO GREAT STORIES,

Marine Matters.

The Cunard Mail steamer Africa, Captain SHANNON, left yesterday for Liverpool, with 111 passengers, and $309,192 50. Among her passengers we notice Monsieur BOULIEAU, the new French Consul at Calcutta, late Secretary of Legation at Washington.

The Hamburg steamer Hammonia, Captain HEYDEMAN, left yesterday for Hamburg, with 72 cabin passengers and 40 in the steerage.

On and after Monday next, the steamers for Stonington will leave this City at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, instead of 5 o'clock.

THE STEAMSHIP GREAT EASTERN.—The London Artizan, for March, says it is intended to launch this mammoth iron ship in June or July next, but as the best tides will be in August, it may be deferred till then.

The steamboat White Bluff, from Cincinnati for Arkansas River, was run into by a tow boat, and sunk at Cairo on Friday night, 26th instant. The second clerk and one of the firemen were drowned.

The schooner Maria Jewett, of Brookhaven, which arrived here yesterday from Naples, Feb. 6, experienced heavy weather during the latter part of the passage, and on March 14, in a gale, lost overboard from the bowsprit, while stowing the jib, DAVID PLACE, of Long Island, and CHARLES WILLIAMS, of Sweden, who were drowned.

The Nantucket Inquirer learns, from Capt. GIFFORD, that on the 16th of February, part of a vessel passed the Light Boat, consisting of a piece of the deck, one end of windlass and bitts standing, apparently belonging to a lumber vessel of 100 tons. During the past year 845 vessels passed the Light Boat, four of these were saved from going on to the South Shoal by the signal set in such cases, "You are standing in danger."

The United States ship John Adams, J. C. P. DE KRAFFT, Esq., commanding, sailed from Valparaiso, Feb. 11, on a cruise along the Coast of Peru, touching at Callao and other ports; also at the Chincha Islands. The John Adams has been in commission twenty-nine months, and has been actively employed in affording protection to American interests in all parts of the Pacific. The service of a large majority of her crew will expire in the course of the coming Autumn.

The subscription for the relief of the widows and orphans of those lost in the schooner S. S. Bird is now in the hands of Messrs. POILLON & LECOUNT, No. 65 Wall-street, who are receiving subscriptions. The sum raised, thus far, is a little over $2,000. The immediate necessities of the beneficiaries will be relieved by a subscription of about an equal sum by the Insurance Companies.

There were in this port yesterday 636 vessels—including 83 steamers, 119 ships, 85 barks, 104 brigs, and 295 schooners. Seamen continue in demand, and readily obtain the rates of remuneration mentioned in our columns a few days ago.

Captain L. SAULE, of the bark Oregon, arrived this day from Havre, reports, March 25, in lat. 41° 45', lon. 66° 30', during a dense fog, had three balls of fire pass over the vessel, making a noise similar to shots from a cannon. The last one burst at about the mast head, casting sparks all about the ship. Every person on deck at the time was knocked down, but without injury.

The Tragedy at Moravia.

From the Auburn Advertiser.

By a gentleman from Moravia we learn a few additional particulars in regard to this case. The young woman, Miss SHAW, is still living, and can converse with her friends, though her recovery is regarded by her physician as doubtful. She still persists in the opinion that she was shot by accident, and it is now supposed that she was not privy to the plot of WOOD.

Wood, it seems, has been trying to persuade her to marry him, and she had put him off from time to time—but had recently, in their private conversations, promised to do so and go West. She has a husband living, who forsook her several years since, and for five years she has lived at WILLIAM CLARK'S.

WOOD was jealous of CLARK, and in the letter left for him, to which we alluded yesterday, states that he had meditated killing CLARK himself; but he had restrained, through regard for his wife. MR. CLARK says WOOD has seemed to be out of his head, somewhat, for several days. The probability seems to be, that he attempted to kill Miss SHAW in a fit of insanity—a very comprehensive term—induced by thwarted affection and jealousy, and then kill himself. The Coroner's verdict has not transpired in this case; but it will of course be suicide. The young woman is said to be a person of good sense, and respected by those who know her. WOOD'S uncle, to whom one of the letters was addressed, who resides a few miles distant, has taken charge of his body for burial. Altogether it is a sad and shocking affair. When will these horrors cease? We learn, in addition, that WOOD'S letter to his uncle states definitely his intention to kill Miss SHAW, and also himself.

A horrible murder was committed on the 30th ult. in Chartiers township, Washington Co., Penn. A man named SAMUEL WHITE had lately purchased a farm from MR. ALLISON, of the above county, and had $1,000 deposited in some bank in Washington, Penn. A payment was soon to have been made, and it was supposed that MR. WHITE had a large sum of money in his possession at his house, to be used for this purpose. MR. WHITE was found murdered in his bed, with his head entirely severed from his body. An axe was found in the room covered with blood.

TO THE CITIZENS OF NEW-YORK:
London Cordial Gin,
Medicated Schnapps,
London Club-House Gin,
Schiedam Schnapps.

CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.

After several years experimenting in the manufacture of gin, I fortunately succeeded, in the year 1846, in making a discovery in its manufacture by which it was deprived of its acrid and inflammatory properties, and rendered perfectly pure.

My manufactory is at Schiedam, Holland. After several months reflection what title to give it, I introduced it to the American public under the title of "WOLFE'S SCHIEDAM AROMATIC SCHNAPPS." Schiedam is the name of the place in Holland where the gin is manufactured; "aromatic" derives its name from the Italian juniper berry with which it is flavored, and the word "Schnappe" is the German for drink—cognac dram—Wolfe's Schiedam aromatic drink. No sooner had my schnapps been introduced to the American public, and received with approbation, than the liquor-mixers of New-York, Boston, and Philadelphia started in pursuit, with their mixed and poisonous stuff, under various names—Scheidam gin, Scheidam schnapps, London Club-House gin, London cordial gin, medicated schnapps, &c.—and in several instances my labels have been so perfectly imitated, with only the addition of a few letters to plead a technical avoidance of the law, and so carefully prepared, as to impose on careless purchasers. I understand a large quantity has been purchased by the merchants of the Southern and Western States, on account of the cheapness of the article. A merchant who participates indirectly in the fraud, by selling the spurious article, is as much an offender as the principal who planned the imposition.

I hope every respectable citizen who values the health of the community in which he lives, will aid me in ferreting out and exposing the unscrupulous merchant who, for the sake of a few cents, will put in jeopardy the lives of the community in which he lives. Such men should be nailed to the pillory of popular execration.

J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR.

We copy the following from the editorial columns of the Boston Daily Ledger of Feb. 19, 1857. Mr. BARNARD, the gentleman alluded to, is a prominent citizen of Boston:

"J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR.—In the multitude of curatives that are almost daily offered to the public, it is very difficult to make a selection of any one that will prove valuable for all the purposes for which it is recommended. But, in our opinion, one specific has been discovered for complaints of the throat and lungs, that seems to be of inestimable worth. It is J. R. STAFFORD'S Olive Tar. From a pamphlet setting forth its many claims on those afflicted with the diseases above named, we learn that this remedy is not to be taken internally, after the ordinary methods, but it is used by Inhalation and Application. In this subtle way it performs its soothing and healing offices on the THROAT, LUNGS, NERVES, MUSCLES, JOINTS and SKIN. Olive Tar, it is claimed, contains an Electro-Magnetic power, which is capable of restoring to the system its lost VITALITY; and this is performed alike by the inhalation of its odor, and the outward application of its fluid. Several of our Physicians often employ it for Special Inhalation, and its curative properties they well understand. We know of many cures it has performed in cases of bronchial difficulties, in Coughs, Colds, and complaints of a similar character; and are able to give it our full recommendation.

We are informed by our fellow-citizen, JOHN M. BARNARD, Esq., that during a fit of sickness last Winter he had occasion to make use of the "Olive Tar," and found it even more efficacious than he had ventured to expect. He caused about three tablespoons full to be placed in a saucer over a basin of boiling water, heated by a night lamp, and found that its odor was not only a real DISINFECTANT of the sick room, but a most pleasant soother of the irritation of his throat and lungs. He improved immediately in his health, and now uses the Olive Tar, as occasion may require, in the reservoir of his furnace, satisfied that its volatile odor is of great service in rendering the atmosphere of his house both sweet and healthy at all times."

The above assertions are also fully verified by testimonials from the following well known persons:

WILLIAM B. TOWNSEND, Esq., Staten Island.

And of many others equally prominent.

J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR is sold at 50 cents a bottle, by the Stafford Olive Tar Company, No. 16 State-street, (east side Battery,) New-York, and by all druggists.

RHEUMATIC, NEURALGIC, and all other pains cease, when J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR is applied, because Olive Tar contains Electro Magnetism, which it transmits to the body, increasing its vitality.

These assertions are verified by testimonials from JOSEPH L. LORD, Esq., No. 11 Wall-street, New-York, ROBERT B. LONG ISLAND.

Then and Now.

In 1843, about 35 feet by 100 feet, at the corner of Court and Montague streets, Brooklyn, was purchased by Mr. BURRELL for $3,440. He has expended on it about $9,000 for buildings, which sum, and interest, he has received back in the shape of rent. Recently the property has been sold to the Mechanics' Bank, for $35,000.

Fires in Brooklyn.

Between 9 and 10 o'clock, Tuesday night, a small frame house on Fifteenth-street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues, owned and occupied by Mr. MCMAHON, was destroyed by fire. Loss, $600; insured for $300.

About the same time, a small stable on Gold street, near Myrtle-avenue, occupied by different parties, was destroyed by fire. A frame house adjoining, owned by ROSWELL GRAVES, and occupied by several colored families, was damaged to the extent of $400.

The boy named SAMUEL BARROW was arrested by officer SKIDMORE, of the Fourth District Police, upon suspicion of causing this fire, and, when taken to the Station-house, he confessed that he had set it on fire. He was committed to answer.

IMPROVEMENTS AT THE WALLABOUT.—A Committee of the Brooklyn Common Council, and two Commissioners appointed by Government, are trying to make some arrangement of the conflicting interests in the Wallabout. Brooklyn desires to run a street from the foot of Clinton-avenue in direct line to Williamsburg; to arrange for a sewer to pass through government ground, and for various other improvements.

☞ An aged woman named MARGARET BYRON, residing in Second-street, near Union-avenue, was found dead on the stoop of a house in Fourth-street, near South Fourth-street, on Tuesday evening. An inquest was held by Coroner SNELL, when a verdict was rendered of death from old age and general debility.

RESCUED FROM DROWNING.—Officer MCLAUGHLIN, of the Second District Police, Brooklyn, on Tuesday night rescued a boy from the water at the foot of Dock-street, where he had accidentally fallen. This officer has rescued several persons from drowning within a month past.

WEDNESDAY, April 1—P. M.

The following grossly-libelous paragraph in the New-York Herald of this morning, while illustrating the desperate nature of the game now being played by certain unprincipled cliques in Wall-street, against the Railway property of the country, was not without its momentary effect upon the Stock Exchange, and particularly prejudicial to the security involved in the statement, until the authorized contradiction appeared:

From the New-York Herald.

Having occasion to look over the Michigan Southern Railroad transfer books a few days since, in order to correct a slight mistake in my account in the stock, I noticed frequent and large transfers of the stock from one MR. GEORGE BRISBANE. I was induced, from the frequent occurrence of this gentleman's name, to compare the transfers to him and from him, since the opening of the books; and I discovered, to my astonishment, the following results: Mr. GEORGE BRISBANE, on the opening of the books, had, in his name, 2,625 shares of stock. Since the opening he has transferred away 5,100 shares, and no stock has been transferred to him. By this, it would appear that Mr. BRISBANE has transferred 2,475 share of stock more than he appears to have owned. I noticed, also, that on the dividend books the original entry of stock to Mr. BRISBANE has been carefully erased, and another amount substituted. It is quite clear that either Mr. BRISBANE is in collusion with the clerks of the office, to manufacture certificates of stock to which he has no right; or, he has obtained this large amount of stock from higher sources. I think it due to the public that an explanation should be had at once. A BONDHOLDER.

MARCH 31, 1857.

Of course the Herald, with its present reputation for veracity and honest dealing, could afford to indorse this or any other slanderous missile as from "a most reliable source," without damage to its own standing, and such indorsement is accordingly made, with the usual flourish about "astounding developments;" but how reliable, the following official and every way responsible notice will show:

OFFICE OF MICHIGAN SOUTHERN AND NORTHERN INDIANA RAILROAD CO.,
NEW-YORK, Wednesday, April 1, 1857.

An anonymous attack is made in the Herald of this morning, charging an over-issue of stock by the office of the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad Company, and sale of it by GEORGE BRISBANE.

The charge of any unauthorized issue of stock by the officers of this company, is utterly unfounded.

The charge of an "erasure upon the dividend books in the original entry of stock to Mr. BRISBANE," and that "another amount has been substituted," is utterly untrue; the dividend books show for themselves, and can be examined by any stockholder.

The Company have authorized loans to be made for its use, and some of its stock to be used as a collateral. Some loans were made of GEORGE BRISBANE, Messrs. TRAVERS & JEROME, and other brokers, with pledges of stock as collateral, with the usual privilege of sale in case of default. There has not been any default—every note has been paid at maturity; and yet it appears from an examination of the books, that these gentlemen have been selling this stock in the market without authority.

By order of the Executive Committee,
J. M. HOPKINS, Secretary.

In Wall-street, where all the parties to the recent onslaught upon this and other railway stocks are well known, and their peculiar mode of warfare through the Herald understood, the statement put forth, undoubtedly by one of their number, is regarded in the light of a triple imposition upon the public; first in the wording, which would convey the idea to the world that "one GEORGE BRISBANE" is an obscure individual, not likely to be privy to the writing of this missile, nor the Free-Love Club in William-street, interested in the gambling purpose it was designed to subserve; secondly, in the signature which, in mere affectation, purports to be that of an injured bondholder; and lastly, in the attempt to impeach the company or their clerks of fraud, while that element is strongly developed in the conduct of a very different party. The real wrong was to the company. Their credit was wickedly compromised, and for a purpose, and their stockholders injured by the sale of securities pledged for money borrowed, and not to be otherwise employed or sold in the market, except in case of default, which default never occurred. There is not the slightest pretence that the stock in question was not properly or legitimately created. It was part of the authorized capital of the concern, unsold; and that it was to remain unsold, except in a contingency which never occurred, the following form of the money obligation executed to the parties who did sell, in violation of faith, abundantly proves:

NEW-YORK, ——, 185—

—— promise to pay to —— or order, —— dollars, for value received, with interest at the rate of — per cent. per annum, having deposited herewith as collateral security, with authority to sell the same at the Broker's Board, or at public or private sale, or otherwise, at —— option on the non-performance of this promise, and without notice. [THE STOCKS HERE NAMED.]

In connection with this matter we have also received the following card:

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The name of our firm having been dragged into the controversy in regard to the issue of the stock of the Michigan Southern Railroad Company as security for a loan made them by Mr. GEO. BRISBANE, we have simply to state that our entire connection with the affair was to assist Mr. BRISBANE in raising the money loaned to the Company, and we have made no use of the stock hypothecated with us, not strictly in accordance with the terms of the contract. The publicity given to the matter was not at our suggestion, and was, in our opinion, entirely uncalled for.

APRIL 1, 1857. TRAVERS & JEROME.

The sales of nearly all Stocks at the early session of the Broker's Board were more or less influenced by the Herald rumor against the Southern Michigan, (uncontradicted as it then was, officially,) and besides the decline of 2 ₱ cent. on that stock, Cleveland and Toledo fell off 1 ₱ cent., and other Road shares were ¼@⅝ ₱ cent. weaker than on Tuesday. In the afternoon the reaction was general, and the closing rates were, on Southern Michigan, 71@70¾ against 71¾ yesterday; Toledo 72; Erie 51¾; New-York Central, 88⅝, and the general market steady in tone.

The Money Market worked easy to-day, particularly on demand loan, and large sums were paid into the Street by the Importers for Exchange, sold yesterday for the steamer. Discounts are without alteration. The Sub-Treasury received $209,305; paid $164,433, and had at the close $15,516,298.

The Transfer Books of the La Crosse and Milwaukee Company will close on 4th inst., until 17th inst., for the annual election of Directors at Milwaukee, on 10th.

Mr. C. O. MORRIS, formerly with WINSLOW, LANIER & Co., as their Cashier, has associated with Messrs. L. D. & F. WHITE in the Domestic Exchange business, and for the collection and negotiation of paper, sale of Land Warrants, &c., at No. 25 Wall-street.

On inquiry at the office of the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad Company, we learn that about $450,000 of the income bonds of this Company, due this day, have been presented and paid in cash, or exchanged for the Sinking Fund bonds of the Company. This leaves about $50,000 yet to be paid, as the entire issue was only half a million.

The Cleveland (Ohio) Herald says, the Senate, in Executive Session, confirmed the appointment of SAMUEL T. BULL, of New-York, to be Transfer Agent in New-York City—yeas 26, nays 1. The Appointment was made by the Fund Commissioners.

From Wright's Weekly Circular.

CROP—Opinions are confirmed, and are decidedly more general in favor of a total below 3,000,000 bales than at any previous time this season. The deficiency in receipts, the reports of the quantity still to be received, and the examination of the question in all its bearings, confirm and strengthen this result, while the freedom with which Cotton has been bought for export in all the Southern markets at gradually advancing rates, proves how general its adoption has become.

RECEIPTS at the ports each week become smaller than the one immediately preceding, and have now got down to a very moderate aggregate. This fact, in spite of high prices, free navigation, and every inducement to bring the residue of the crop to the ports, establishes almost beyond contradiction the opinions expressed in this circular since the season commenced, and clearly point to an early exhaustion of the crop. During the week under review only 53,000 bales have reached the ports, against 97,000 last year, and 72,000 bales in the corresponding week in 1853. The total deficit in receipts now amounts to 246,000 bales, as compared with last year, and 192,000 bales as compared with 1853. By telegraph from New-Orleans and Mobile, we have the receipts for a week later, from which it is clear that for my next table, a week hence, we shall be very near 300,000 bales below last year, and about 200,000 bales as compared with 1853.

Beeves are sold by the ostimated dead weight of the four quarters; the so-called "fifth quarter" (hide and tallow) is not reckoned in here as it is in Boston and some other cities. When cattle are weighed or estimated alive, the dead weight is reckoned at a certain number of pounds to the 100 lbs. of live weight, as agreed upon. The general rule in this market for medium cattle is 56 lbs. to the 100; 44 lbs. being allowed for the "fifth quarter" and offal.

The average prices to-day, as compared with last week, are a trifle lower—that is for stock of the same grades.

The steamship Texas, JOHN S. CROWELL, Commander, from San Juan del Norte and Aspinwall, vid Key West, with passengers, to Messrs. CHARLES MORGAN & SONS, arrived last night. The Texas left San Juan on the 20th ult., and reached Aspinwall next day.

The steamship Orizaba, Capt. BLETHEN, left San Francisco on the 5th ult., vid Manzilla and San Juan del Sur, and arrived at Panama on the 22d. The Texas received the Orizaba's passengers on the 23d, and sailed at 3 P. M. Sunday, touching at Key West on the 26th.

The news from Rivas, Nicaragua, head-quarters of Gen. WALKER, is up to the 15th. Gen. WALKER and army were in good health, and had plenty of provisions and ammunition.

On the 16th, Gen. WALKER with 400 men made an attack on St. George, occupied by about 2,000 of the enemy. After driving the enemy and gaining the plaza, he burned a part of the town most important to the allied army, when he learned that about 1,200 of the enemy under Gen. CHAMORRA had marched by another road to make an attack on Rivas; whereupon Gen. WALKER marched for that place and met the enemy in full retreat at the forks of three roads, hotly pursued by Gen. HENNINGSEN and his command, who had driven them out of Rivas, upon their attack, with great slaughter.

On either side of the road where the allied forces were met by General WALKER was an impenetrable growth of cactus, making it impossible for them to escape, and placing them between the deadly fire of General WALKER in their front, and General HENNINGSEN in their rear—in consequence of which the allies were completely panic-struck, and, throwing down their arms, stood paralyzed, meeting their fate with little or no resistance. Nearly all their officers were killed, and very few of their troops escaped being killed or wounded.

The Allies, by their own account, lost 327 killed and over 300 wounded. Gen. WALKER estimates their loss at about 1,100—600 killed and 500 wounded.

Gen. WALKER's loss was 2 killed and 21 wounded. The slaughter was so great that Gen. WALKER was unable to properly bury the dead, and was compelled to order the bodies burned to prevent putrefaction and insure the health of the city of Rivas, which order was being carried out.

The sloop-of-war St. Mary was at San Juan del Sur when the Orizaba left.

It is reported, and generally believed, that Gen. CANAS, the commander-in-chief of the allies, is under arrest for having made certain overtures to Gen. WALKER; also, that Gen. CHILLON had raised a body of men in Leon, and was about to march to join WALKER; and that President RIVAS had been assassinated. The last report is said to be confirmed by a letter received at Greytown by the wife of his son, RAMON RIVAS.

"SPENCER," VANDERBILT's agent, has left the country, and was to have sailed on the Illinois. It is reported that General MORA, becoming suspicious of him, had written to his brother, President MORA, of Costa Rica, relating thereto, and President MORA replied that "the man who would betray his own countrymen would betray any one, and to watch his movements with the utmost scrutiny."

Colonel LOCKRIDGE, on the San Juan River, had received another strong reinforcement of Texians, with a large amount of provisions and ammunition, and with the steamer J. N. Scott, recently retaken, (which had been thoroughly repaired,) proceeded up the river.

The command of Colonel L. now garrison the only two communications by water to Costa Rica on the San Juan River, viz.: at Hipp's Point, mouth of the Serapiqui River, 210 men, under the command of Colonel F. B. ANDERSON; and the San Carlos Island, at the mouth of the San Carlos River, 168 men, under the command of General C. R. WHEAT; the balance 192, in the advance near Machuca Rapids, under the immediate command of Colonel LOCKRIDGE.

On the 18th, Col. L. reconnoitered the enemy's position at Castillo, and from prisoners taken received the important information that WALKER had gained a great victory, and the allies had fallen back on Massaya or Granada, compelling propositions of peace. The Costa Ricans were not willing to join the Conference, but had sent "VANDERBILT's agent, SPENCER," out of the country, and have opened the Transit to the English Government.

Important documents seized by Col. LOCKRIDGE, proving the above facts, have been sent to Washington, United States, and to the President of Nicaragua, at Rivas. The Costa Ricans have only 350 men at San Carlos under Gen. MORA.

Col. LOCKRIDGE has 500 men, with 7 pieces of artillery, plenty of small arms, ammunitions and provisions, and is now more confident of his success than ever.

The Royal Mail steamer New Granada, arrived from Callao, touching at intermediate ports, on the 21st ult. On her way up, while stopping at Huanchoca, on the 14th, she was boarded by the Peruvian steamer Loa, [illegible] in the hands of VIVANCO, the Revolutionist, and there from forcibly took various arms and equipments, with $32,000 in specie, and also ships' stores and provisions in act of perfect piracy.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times

Bloody Battle Near Rivas—Walker Victorious.

PANAMA, Sunday, March 22, 1857.

The Orizaba, J. H. BLETHEN, Commander, arrived at about 8 o'clock to-day, having left San Juan del Sur on the 19th. She brings 90 passengers for New-York. The Orizaba landed 21 men only for WALKER, at San Juan. Major ROGERS, with 70 men, came down from Rivas, to receive this reinforcement, and their cursing, a passenger tells me, at the small number disposing it, was perfectly awful.

The report this time from Rivas, is, that on the 16th inst. WALKER, with a force of 400 men, went down to St. George to attack the enemy in position—that he got into the Plaza, and was chopping them up like mince meat, when he heard firing of heavy guns at Rivas. He immediately returned upon his steps, and about half-way between the two places met the enemy returning from an unsuccessful attack on HENNINGSEN, who had been left "with a large body of men in garrison" at Rivas. WALKER opened his mortars upon them in the narrow road in front, while HENNINGSEN did the same with his four-pounders in the rear, killing, as they confess, 327, and wounding 300 more. WALKER lost two killed and twenty-one wounded.

Following up this story I finally got a more moderate one—one derived from an officer of the sloop-of-war St. Mary's by a very truthful-appearing passenger. He says that FERNANDEZ CHAMORRO lost about 260 men killed and wounded, and WALKER about 40 to 50. I presume, now, if you deduct 83 per cent. from this moderate account, you will be somewhere in the neighborhood of the truth. At least this is my experience of Walker stories from San Juan. I presume there is but little reason to doubt that a fight did really take place, although the big fight brought down by the Sierra Nevada on the 5th of March, in which WALKER literally mowed his enemy down like grass, proves never to have taken place.

There is a report that on or about the 10th instant, Col. CAVGEZ, who I wrote you was at San Juan with 30 Rangers, and who intended to cut his way back to Rivas with them and the 75 or 80 men brought down by the Sierra Nevada, started on his march. He met a large Costa Rican force about five miles out on the Transit road, where a fight took place in which he lost 40 men killed and badly wounded, but succeeded in gaining Rivas. I cannot learn the loss of his enemy.

WALKER is reported to have "plenty of provisions and munitions of war." I hear from men who talked with some of the people of the St. Mary's, who had been lately into his camp, that he is reduced to beef and plaintains; and some days, when the Rangers cannot get out of the city, to plaintains alone. He is reported to have 400 fighting men, which is perhaps not more than 50 or 60 over his real number.

BOSQUET, with his 1,000 Costa Ricans, had not arrived at San Juan on the 19th. He is probably there by this time. This is all I can gather. But you will perceive that WALKER cannot lost much longer unless he gets reinforcements. Of course he cannot get them from the Atlantic with the river closed, and California has shut down on him, as the few men brought by the Orizaba fully evidences. There was a report, fully believed by WALKER's men, that Hon. PIERRE SOULE was on his way out with 1,200 men, to cross this Isthmus, with plenty of munitions and provisions, and that the Orizaba was to wait here to take them up.

Capt. FAYSSOUX, of WALKER's two-gun schooner at San Juan, came passenger on the Orizaba for his health, having suffered much from fever and rheumatism.

The St. Mary's would sail in a few days for Panama. Capt. DAVIS and officers were all well. F. W. R.

Latest Nicaragua News.

From the Aspinwall Courier, March 23.

The steamer Texas, Capt. CROWELL, arrived at this port this afternoon, from New-Orleans vid San Juan del Norte, where she landed one hundred and thirty men under the command of Major CRUPPER, for the reinforcement of the force of Col. LOCKRIDGE, WALKER's representative on the San Juan River. This reinforcement is composed chiefly of Texans, and a very large portion of them did service throughout the war between the United States and Mexico. General HORNSBY is with the men, but not in command.

Since our last advices from Greytown, nothing has been done by the fillibusters excepting the repair of the steamer Scott, which vessel left Punta Arenas yesterday morning in excellent condition, with the recruits and a quantity of provisions and ammunition.

She was to carry the troops to Fort Slatter at the mouth of the river St. Carlos—thence to convey the force required to open the river above to Machuca rapids; thence the force would go around the rapids, as it probably could not pass over and cut a road across to Castillo. The present plan is to proceed immediately to San Carlos, after taking Castillo, and to invest it, by landing below and attacking it on the north side.

The force under LOCKRIDGE is now considerably more than four hundred, one hundred and twenty of which will remain at Serapiqui, and seventy-five at Fort Slatter, at the mouth of the St. Carlos River. These stations are to be permanently garrisoned.

The only item of news of any importance known at San Juan, from the interior, was the death of Ex-President RIVAS by assassination at Leon. The news was received by the wife of RAMON RIVAS, the son of the deceased.

The above items we published in an extra on Saturday afternoon last; since we have learned that Gen. HORNSBY submitted the men he had brought out to the command of Col. LOCKRIDGE, because special authority had been received by Col. L. from WALKER, to retain command on the San Juan River. We understand, too, that there had been an attempt made (in which GEN. H. was not at all concerned) to supersede LOCKRIDGE, which attempt failed on account of the prompt and manly resistance of L.

San Juan (March 19) Correspondence of the Aspinwal Courier.

Nothing of importance has occurred on the river since the retreat of Col. TITUS and his men from Castillo. The Walker force is stationed at Serapiqui and on the island at the month of the river San Carlos. The Costa Ricans are at Castillo, their pickets extending down near Machuca rapids. Col. LOCKRIDGE has been here several days with the river steamer Rescue awaiting the arrival of the Texas from New-Orleans by which he expected to recive large reinforcements. The Texas arrived last night bringing 140 men and also provisions. They went up the river this morning.

It appears that the Costa Rican force that drove Colonel TITUS from Castillo consisted of only fifty men, while the force under TITUS numbered about two hundred; the Costa Ricans boast greatly about the affair. There is no reliable news from WALKER. The United States ship Saratoga left this morning for Havana.

The river steamer Scott, taken at Castillo, is nearly repaired, and will be in running order in a few days. The river is very low. Y.

Statement of a Passenger by the Texas.

NO RELIABLE INFORMATION FROM WALKER—COMMUNICATION WITH RIVAS STILL CUT OFF.

Among the passengers by the Texas is Mr. EDWIN AVERY, of Ohio, returning from a seven-years' cruise in California. He made himself well acquainted with the position of affairs at San Juan Del Sur, and also at Panama, and has given us the following statement:

The Orizaba, on the way down, first stopped at Manzanilla, about 300 miles above Acapulco, where a coaling depôt has been established by the Morgan Line of steamers. They here learned that ten of the Walker recruits, by the Sierra Nevada, deserted at that place. The Orizaba had 22 recruits for WALKER; they arrived at the San Juan del Sur on the 17th, and left on the 18th of March. They found everything in a very stagnant condition here, the town resembling the deserted California diggins. The contrast in this respect was very striking to Mr. AVERY, as he lived in the country in 1851 and 1852, at which time San Juan was a thriving town.

The United States ship St. Mary's was lying off the port, and the steamer was visited by her officers and men, from whom he gathered considerable information as to the state of things in that region. This was by no means flattering to the success of WALKER. Major TORRET told him the 75 recruits from the Sierra Nevada got into a drunken fight the same day on which they landed, and two of them were shot in quelling the disturbance. These facts were stated to the 22 new comers by the Orizaba, by Mr. CHATFIELD, who explained to them the dangers to which they were exposed, with the Costa Ricans all around them, by whom they were liable to be attacked any moment.

Mr. AVERY had a long conversation with JOHN L. PRIEST, the Consul at San Juan, who, in answer to a variety of questions, as to the position of WALKER, and his own opinion of his situation, stated that there was absolutely no reliable information from Rivas, the communication being still closed. There were the usual rumors of battles, in which WALKER was said to have killed 500 or so of the Costa Ricans, but it had become an old story, and nobody placed any confidence in the reports. His relations to WALKER were of such a nature he did not like to speak in this way, but truth compelled him to admit that WALKER's position was a critical one. For three weeks they had received no information from him. Upon the same night of their arrival, however, it was rumored that Col. WATERS came down from Rivas, with an escort of 60 men, with dispatches for the Orizaba, but what their nature was he did not learn.

A SEARCH FOR DESERTERS.

There was a general ransacking on board the steamer for deserters, on the day she left San Juan. Quite a number of the Fillibusters were on board, and openly expressed a wish to leave; and as it was suspected they might stow away, a search was had, and several were sent ashore, with threats that they would be shot when they reached their quarters.

CAPTAIN FAYSSOUX LEAVES.

None of WALKER's men, except Capt. FAYSSOUX, came down on the steamer, and he left, as was understood, on account of a severe attack of rheumatism. He is represented as a man small in stature, but of a wiry make, possessing much intelligence, but very taciturn as to WALKER's affairs:—he talked but little upon the general subject, and that with the officers of the steamer. He wears huge black whiskers and mustaches. He stopped at Panama.

It being understood that MORGAN's steamers were unfriendly to taking away the deserters, there was less attempt to get on board of her; but the agent of the coastwise steamer at Panama says that deserters from WALKER are found at all the places where they touch for freight and coal.

DESERTERS AT PANAMA AND ASPINWALL.

At Panama, and also at Aspinwall, there were many straggling deserters in a destitute condition, and without means to pay their passage home.

AFFAIRS ON THE ATLANTIC SIDE.

The Texas touched at Punta Arenas on her way down, and brought about a dozen of LOCKRIDGE's and ANDERSON's force to Panama. Among them were two officers, Major HALL, Commissary-General in the army, (a son of Ex-Mayor HALL, of Brooklyn,) and Capt. FARNSWORTH, both of whom had quarreled with LOCKRIDGE and left. Several other important persons in connection with the operations on the river were among the passengers,

LOCKRIDGE and ANDERSON were at Punta Arenas fitting out another expedition to ascend the river. Their forces still held Serapiqui, but had not made any progress upwards. They gave out that they were intending to take San Carlos soon.

Mr. AVERY has lived near two years in the country; he never had any faith in WALKER's success, and from all the information, from all quarters, he can gather, considers his case a hopeless one. For his own part, he would not take the whole country as a gift. There is not a tree, plant or shrub that has not a pricker in it, nor an insect that has not a sting in his tail. It is no place for white men eny how.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE MASSACRE AT PANAMA—TROUBLE FEARED.

It was commonly reported at Panama, that it was the intention of the natives to celebrate the Anniversary of the Massacre of the 15th of April, and fears were entertained that, in case this scheme should be carried out, there would be a renewal of the bloody scenes of that day. The French Consul has openly criticized the conduct of Americans in connection with that affair, casting the blame upon the California passengers, and exculpating the natives. This would, it was thought, not assist a peaceable termination of the affair.

The sloop-of war Decatur, and frigate Independence, were lying in the Bay of Panama, and an American man-of-war at Aspinwall,

News From New-Granada and the South Pacific.

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND THE NEW-GRANADIAN GOVERNMENT—THE RAILROAD, ETC.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times:

PANAMA, Sunday, March 22, 1857.

PANAMA.

The people here, both natives and foreigners, are in a feverish state, awaiting the next mail from Bogota. Some of the white scoundrels here, who helped on the April massacre, are growing bold enough to brag of their exploits, seeing that there is but little or no danger of the United States insisting upon their punishment. Indeed, I would not be much surprised if the Government at Washington allowed our Minister and Commissioner to dilly-dally about the matter, until another massacre actually forced it to do something. Nothing would tend so greatly to secure the safety of the Isthmus transit as for the United States to demand that the instigators and operators in the 15th of April murders be brought to trial and punished.

The railroad is in fine order now. The stone abutments on nearly all the streams are finished, and the iron bridges are being laid down. I passed over the road two days since and noted many improvements within the past two months. The trains now make the time regularly in three hours or less.

The ship William Sturges, with 1,000 tons coals for the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, arrived here to-day, 120 days from New-York.

The Texas arrived at Colon yesterday from San Juan del Norte, but as yet we have no news by her. I send you the South Pacific news.

PERU.

THE REVOLUTION UNSUCCESSFUL—ROBBERY OF THE MAIL STEAMER—LOAN TO COSTA RICA VOTED, ETC.

The British steam packet New-Granada, with dates from Valparaiso to the 1st instant, and Lima and Callao dates to the 12th, arrived at Panama on the 21st. She brings nothing to change my opinion that the revolution of VIVANCO in Peru will be unsuccessful. On the contrary, an event has occurred which will bring it to a speedy close.

The New-Granada took on board at Callao $32,000 in specie, and 1,000 stand of arms, on account of the Peruvian Government, for Paita. When she arrived at Huanchaco she found two of the revolutionary steamers—the Loa, of 4 guns, and the Tumbes, 2 guns—off the port. They followed her to Lambayeque, boarded her with an armed force, and took violent possession of both money and arms! This act, of course, throws the whole revolutionary fleet into the hands of the British men-of-war.

This fleet consists of the fine new steam frigate Apurimac, 44; steamers Loa, 4; Tumbes, 2; Izchaca, 1; brigs Almirante Guisse, 6; Vigilante, 1; and two or three transports. For the three former vessels CASTILLA, it will be recollected, had offered a reward of $240,000, and would make the sum up to half a million for all of them.

The British line-of-battle-ship Monarch, 84, Admiral BRUCE, was overtaken by the New-Granada, on the 8th, about two days' sail south of Callao, and the British steam corvette Pearl, 22 guns, was at Callao, taking in supplies for China, whither the Tribune, 33, had already gone. These two vessels will be amply sufficient to take the fleet of VIVANCO, and this will end the revolution, which it was no doubt intended to do. It is not to be supposed, for a moment, that VIVANCO's officers were so foolish as to believe they could commit such a piratical act, with impunity, upon a British vessel. And if the officers of the Loa and Tumbes, despairing of the success of the revolution, had intended to rob simply for their own benefit, and then run their vessels into some foreign port and abandon them, they would not have contented themselves with $32,000, when they might have robbed two or three hundred thousand dollars more, in silver bars. It follows, then, that the whole thing was made up between CASTILLA and the officers of the two vessels, with, perhaps, the connivance of the British Chargé at Lima, in order to bring the British fleet down upon the Apurimac and her consorts.

One or two interior provinces had risen against CASTILLA since previous dates; but on the other hand the revolutionists in Moguegua, Puno and Cuzco, had laid down their arms.

The National Convention had voted to loan Costa Rica $100,000 at 4½ per cent.

The United States sloop-of-war John Adams arrived at Callao, March 3.

BOLIVIA.

There is nothing of interest from this Republic. A new election law, somewhat extending the right of suffrage, had been promulgated. The country was tranquil.

CHILI.

BUSINESS—LOAN FOR RAILROAD PURPOSES—MISCELLANEOUS.

Business had improved in Valparaiso. Buyers from the north and south of the Republic, as well as from the Argentine Provinces, Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia, had made and were making large purchases. The market was well supplied. The merchandise in Government stores was estimated at $25,000,000.

It is reported that the President will convoke Congress in order to get a law authorizing him to borrow $4,000,000 to complete the Valparaiso and Santiago railroad. The work on the Southern railroad progresses rapidly. Six vessels had sailed from Europe with materials for it. A European Company had been formed for the continuation of the Copiapo railroad from Pabellon as far as the rich mineral district of Chanarcillo. An exclusive privilege had been granted to SANTA MARIA & NYE for six years, for a towing steamer for the port of Valparaiso. The sweet sorgo has been introduced into Chili. Near Quillota is a plantation of 4,000 plants, in thriving condition. They have grown to the height of twelve feet, and are about one inch in thickness. The proprietor will distil brandy from the first crop, and make sugar from the next. Government has granted $6,840 to build an iron bridge across the Estero, in front of the high road to Quillota. Iron mining is attracting attention in Chili.

The Esmeralda, a steam war-vessel of 22 guns, had gone north, perhaps to Callao, "in order, it is reported, to observe the fillibustering projects of Gen. CASTILLA, and manifest the disapprobation of Chili in respect to them." It is more probable, in my mind, that she goes to the Chinchas to protect Chilian vessels in loading guano, which they are buying of VIVANCO at less than Government rates. The Guayaquil commercial bark Rosario was burnt in the harbor of Valparaiso, with a valuable cargo. The President had returned to Santiago from Valparaiso.

Flour in large lots, of domestic growth, was selling at $9 @ 200 lbs.; 500 barrels Richmond brought $10 25, and 1,885 barrels Baltimore, El Dorado and Spring Garden brands, $10. Lard $22@$23 in tins, and $19 in barrels. Carolina Rice, 1,600 quintals old crop, $7 52½; 2,500 new crop is held at $9. Salt Beef, $16. Pork, $24. In American Pine Lumber, 45,000 feet sold on board at $45; 6,000 feet grooved, $58—duty, $15.

RIVER PLATE PROVINCES.

From the River Plate Provinces there is nothing important. The Buenos Ayres Western Railroad was to be inaugerated with great pomp on the 3d of February. Some heavy failures had taken place in Buenos Ayres and Montevideo, in consequence of the stringency of the money market. Mr. WINTER had failed in the latter place for thirty-five millions of dollars; Mr. GARAY for twelve millions. But it must be borne in mind that a gold doubloon in Montevideo represents 336 paper dollars. The Indians in Buenos Ayres had become peaceable.

A Santiago, Chili, paper has a long article on the "egoisme" of the United States in persisting on the name in official documents of United States of America. It says that a late treaty with Paraguay was amended by that Government styling our country the United States of the North, in which Mr. MARCY did not concur, so that the treaty is likely to fall to the ground!

The Belgian screw steamer Constitution, of 2,200 tons and 400 horse power, E. POUGIN, Commander, from Antwerp on the 12th and Southampton on the 17th of March, arrived at this port yesterday afternoon. The news from Europe is three days later.

The Constitution experienced heavy gales from the Southwest on leaving the Channel. During the remainder of the voyage winds were from South to Northwest; weather moderate. March 27, passed a large Iceberg in lat. 45° 5', long. 46° W. According to thermometrical observations, must have passed large bergs or floes to the southward during the night previous, and to the northward on the night following.

The Constitution brought 80 cabin and 488 steerage passengers.

The steamship Asia, from New-York, and the Indian, from Portland, both arrived at Liverpool on 16th March.

The Paris papers publish the following telegraphic dispatch, dated Copenhagen, March 15:

"The treaty relating to the Sound Dues was signed yesterday, by all the powers interested."

It is said that, after the departure of PERUK-KHAN from Paris, the Persian Government will be represented in France by an Envoy Extraordinary, Minister Plenipotentiary. A similar representative will be appointed to the Court of St. James.

The Earl of AMHERST died on the 13th March.

The cause of the putting back to Liverpool of the steamship Circassian was a succession of terrific gales which she experienced off the coast of Ireland, which blew the sails to ribbands from the bowsprit. She is said not to have sustained any material damage, and was expected to resume her voyage on the 17th or 19th March, after replacing her bowsprit and sails.

A Madrid letter of the 9th March says: The projected expedition against Mexico assumes an aspect of some importance. Considerable preparations are making. General PEZUELA is spoken of for the chief command. The choice of the Government is said to lie between him and General LERSUNDI, the present Minister of Marine.

The Paris correspondence of the London Times, dated 13th ult., contains the following:

"Dispatches have been received, this morning, from the French Minister at Berlin; they, doubtless, relate to the Neufchatel question, which has the disadvantage of wearing out every one's patience except, perhaps, that of the King of Prussia. It is said that M. ROUHERRE is expected, on Monday, to take part in the negotiations. If it be true, as a Berlin paper affirms, that the Paris Conference has not the right to solve the question, it might as well dissolve itself at once. The new instructions are said to be to the effect that the recognition of the rights of sovereignty is the express condition of His Majesty's renunciation of that sovereignty. The Emperor, I presume, now sees cause to regret his extreme condescendence to the King, and, perhaps, but for the esteem in which M. DE HATZFELD is personally held at the Court of the Tuileries, his disappointment would be manifested more strongly."

The Dublin journals of the 16th are filled with accounts of the effects of a severe storm which, commencing on Friday night, (13th,) only subsided on Sunday evening.

ATTEMPT TO POISON THE EUROPEANS AT HONG KONG—APPREHENSIONS OF AN ATTACK—MOVEMENTS OF U. S. SHIPS OF WAR—POSITION OF ADMIRAL SEYMOUR—CONFLICT WITH JUNKS.

Hong Kong (Jan. 30) Correspondence of the London Times.

As we were writing our last advices, on the 15th inst., there was a report that an attempt had been made to poison a large portion of the community, arsenic having been mixed with the bread at one of the principal bakeries of the place. This proved to be the case, and several hundred people suffered from eating the bread, but we are happy to add we have heard of no fatal consequences, though many are still suffering from the effects. We believe it is agreed among the medical men that the consequences were not fatal owing to the large quantity of arsenic used, which acted generally as a violent emetic. The head man of the bakery, known as ALLUM, left per steamer for Macao early in the morning of the day the occurrence took place. There was some delay on the part of Government in sending after him, but a foreign gentleman, a sufferer from the atrocious attempt, chartered a steamer, and succeeded in capturing ALLUM before he got on shore at Macao. He was brought back here, and his trial, and that of several of the men that were employed on the premises, comes on at the Sessions now sitting. The man, from the first, has asserted his innocence, but it is a significant fact that the Chinese steward, who was on board the small river steamer Thistle, when she was captured, and the foreigners murdered, and whose evidence was most conflicting at the inquest, was the person employed to see to the delivering of the bread that morning.

After this act of the Chinese, there was a strong feeling in favor of martial law being established; and the advisability of such a course was recommended to Sir J. BOWRING by those on whom we have to depend for the security of the place, and who have not an over strong force at their disposal. His Excellency was disinclined to have any interference with his authority.

The Chinese New-Year's day, the 26th inst., passed over quietly here, but apprehensions are entertained that some mischief is intended against the place.

We hear of a large number of boats and junks being collected in the neighborhood for the purpose of an attack. The force in the harbor is no doubt sufficient to repel any Chinese fleet; but we have a very small number of men to meet an attack on land. One regiment is not sufficient for the service of this place in an emergency like the present.

The community is on the alert, and, with the precautionary measures that are in force, it is to be hoped any meditated attack will be prevented.

An application made to the Governor-General of India for a regiment to be sent out here, we understand, has been refused.

The French ships are anchored at the head of the Bay. Hor Majesty's ship Calcutta is at the west. The United States ship Levant is also in the harbor. Small steamers chartered by the Government move about the harbor at night.

In consequence of a report brought in by the American ship Lily, that a number of junks and snake boats were off Lintin, and had attempted to intercept her, the United States steamer San Jacinto had gone out to look after them.

The want of a steamer to cruise constantly in the neighborhood is now much felt, there being none available for the service at present.

Commissioner YEH has addressed Dr. PARKER, the United States Minister, asking why he has not ordered American subjects and American ships of war away from Hongkong, to be clear of the present troubles. We have not heard of Dr. PARKER's reply.

There was a report from Shanghae that an Imperial Commissioner from Pekin was expected to come down here shortly to arrange matters at Canton. This is premature. A Tartar General, with about 40 attendants, came down from Shanghae in the American steamer Antelope, and went on at once to Canton vid Macao, passing through this place unawares to the authorities.

At Canton Admiral Sir MICHAEL SEYMOUR, owing to the demands made upon him for the security of this place, has been obliged to withdraw the forces from the Garden, the Dutch Folly, and Birds' Nest Fort, and occupy the foreign ground. He has taken up a position in the Teetotum Fort in the Macao passage. It is to be hoped he will be able to maintain this post and keep open the river, which the Chinese are making great efforts to block up. They have now a very large fleet of war junks and boats congregated on the river, and which are daily increasing.

Before the Dutch Folly was evacuated, the city was heavily bombarded from it.

On the forces leaving the Garden, the Ranch and boat-houses were at once set fire to by the Chinese.

On the 12th inst., as Her Majesty's steamer Sampson was on her way up the river, she fell in with a large fleet of junks, which she engaged for some time, but could not follow them up the creeks. The steamer was hulled by numerous shot, and the Chinese pilot, who was in the British service throughout the last war, was killed.

The junks which engaged the Sampson were seen the other day up the creeks when the Encounter was coming down, but although the steamer anchored off the place they would not come out. The want of boats of light draught of water is a great drawback. Admiral SEYMOUR is at present here, waiting the arrival of the mail. It is reported that the Viceroys, under whose jurisdiction are the four Consular ports to the northward, have received dispatches from Pekin to the effect that they are not to interfere with the quarrel at Canton, and so far quietness prevails along the coast.

Shanghae dates are to the 19th inst. In imports transactions were limited. Gray shirtings, 6¾ catties sold at 1.6.8 taels Canton sycee. Tea—The market was excited. A few settlements reported at an advance of 2 to 3 taels. The settlements of silk had been 2,000 bales, at an advance of $10 @ picul. The total settlements reached 7,000 bales. Exchange on England, 6-8, against Canton sycee $112; and on India, 206 rupees.

From Foo-chow our dates are to the 20th inst.

Teas were arriving slowly, and extreme prices were being paid. Several chops of congou had been taken at 14 taels, the quality of which was not better than that of teas bought in October last for 8 taels. The settlements were 14,000 chests congou @ 9.23 taels, and 1,600 half-chests of Colongs at 9½@12½ taels. Two vessels had left for England, and 8 were on the berth. The American ship Golden Racer, laden with timber for Shanghae, struck on a rock at the entrance of the Min, and became a total wreck; the crew were saved. Some attempt to introduce the Mexican dollar into current use was made by the authorities, but we have yet to see with what result.

Amoy dates are to the 23d inst. Sales of cotton yarn had been made to the extent of about 500 bales, at $25 90@$26 10. Some 500 bales Bengal cotton sold at $9 40@$10 @ picul.

Hero little or no business has been done since the departure of last mail. Exchange on England, 4s. 8¾d.@4s. 9d.; on India, 215r.@216r. Freights are low at all the ports, and tonnage abundant. The principal demand for vessels is for emigration to the Colonies and California. Some 170 Chinese convicts, who had but a short term of punishment to undergo, and a few idle and suspicious characters, who could get no security for their conduct, were sent down to Hanian in the Phœbe Dunbar. There was nothing elicited from the men taken up on suspicion of being emissaries from Canton, and they were mostly called upon to find security for their appearance when required.

Permission has, we hear, been received from home to proceed with a strand road opposite the town. Sir JOHN BOWRING has given notice that the work is to commence at once.

BURNING OF THE SUBURBS OF CANTON.

From the Overland Friend of China of Jan. 17.

On Monday morning, at daylight, armed bodies left the ships for the purpose of setting fire to the western suburbs of Canton—a measure which, if before carried out, might have tended to show the Chinese we are now determined to give them their deserts, and have checked that course of obstinacy they appear bent on pursuing. The Encounter's people landed at the Shameen Fort; the Barracouta's at Howqua's Puck-houses; the Niger's and the Folly's took the hongs between the remains of the old fire and Factory Creek, while the shore party walked into Carpenter-square and directs in that direction. The whole thing was so unexpected that the Chinese found the place in a blaze before they could realize it. Unfortunately, some of the Fifty-ninth's party went too far back, and unexpectedly found themselves assailed by stones and firearms from the city wall. Three of our men being knocked down, the braves rushed on them, and in an instant cut their heads off. Fortunately, though wounded in two places and faint, the third made a run for it, and succeeded in escaping to the rest of the party, five of whom, including an officer, were also wounded—one or two badly. The fire rose rapidly, and extended back fully a quarter of a mile, thence scattered occasionally by shot and shell from the ships and Folly. Nor did the city escape; an extensive blaze about the Yamun following some of the Folly's carcasses.

There is some rumor of deserting both the Dutch Folly and the Gardens—a circumstance to be regretted if it does take place. Preliminary to it, if it is to be so, the Admiral has taken up his quarters in Bird's Nest Fort, on Honan, and will content himself in keeping open the Blenheim Reach and Macao Passage of the river. Whampoa is given up entirely. The Barracouta towed the Jonge Juan, Sybille and Alligator, thence on Tuesday, leaving the American Bethel, HUNT & Co.'s chop, TAYLOR, KEY's & Co.'s, and Dr. RYDER's chops, together with much other property, to fall into the hands of whoever likes to take possession of it. Why this should be has yet to be explained.

The close of the Persian War—British Army at Bushire.

Bombay (Feb. 16,) Correspondence of London Times.

All was well with the force at Bushire up to the 23d of January, the date of the latest letters that have reached us. Secure within their intrenchments, but somewhat weary of inaction, the troops only desired that the oft-repeated rumors of an impending attack upon their lines might prove true. The general health of the army was good still, with the exception of the 2d Europeans, who continued weakly. The climate was variable, but close, the heat alternating with cold hard winds, accompanied by clouds of dust. A little rain had fallen, and was gratefully welcomed. Supplies were plentiful, and the temper of the people from whom they were obtained is described as favorable to the invaders. The fear, however, that we may not be able to insure them a continued and lasting protection, prevents an open declaration in our favor. General OUTRAM has not yet arrived, but was anxiously expected.

* Here, the intelligence brought by the last mail from England of the easy and satisfactory settlement of the difficulties with Russia has given rise to the general impression that the Persian quarrel will soon be brought to a close by the submission of the enemy.

ALLIANCE BETWEEN FRANCE AND ENGLAND ON THE CHINA QUESTION.

The following article, from the Pays, the Government paper, corroborates what has been said relative to the arrangement concluded in Paris between the British and French Governments to act together in the Chinese seas:

"The Chinese affair, examined in a proper point of view, presents two phases perfectly distinct—the Past and the Future. The first belongs to history; the second involves the interests of various powers, whose commerce at present is seriously damaged, and who perceive the necessity for putting an end to the present state of things. It is to do so that an honorable understanding has lately been come to between France and England. The latter power sends numerous reinforcements to Admiral SEYMOUR, who will have an important maritime force under his command. France, on her part, has maintained the squadron of Admiral GUERIN, in the Chinese seas, with a view to future operations; and this squadron is to unite with the naval division commanded by Rear Admiral RIGAULT DE GENOUILLY. Thus our marine will be on a respectable footing. The two Admirals will have at their disposal steam frigates, corvettes, and gun boats, so valuable for an attack on the coast and for ascending rivers. The maritime force of the two nations so employed will necessarily bring the Chinese authorities to terms which will put an end to the war, and improve the former state of affairs. At the same time that the British Government is sending military reinforcements to China, it sends special Commissioners charged with opening fresh negotiations, which will have the greater chance of success, as the Chinese will see that, from the imposing forces brought against them, it will not be for their advantage to continue the war.

M. DE BOURBOULON, French Chargé d'Affaires to the Court of China, left by the Indian mail, which sailed from Marseilles on the 12th inst. He carries with him instructions to Admiral GUERIN and RIGAULT DE GENOUILLY, who command the French fleets in the Chinese Seas, to combine in future their operations with those of the British forces, conformably to the arrangement concluded in Paris between Lord COWLEY and the French Government.

BRITISH PREPARATIONS FOR WAR WITH CHINA.

The London Globe says: "The force about to be concentrated at Hongkong will consist of two brigades of infantry; composed of the 5th Fusileers, the 59th Regiment, now at Hongkong, the 23d Fusileers, the 82d, 90th and 93d Regiments, which will proceed as soon as the shipping arrangements are completed. This force will be further reinforced by four companies of artillery, 1,000 Marines, and 100 men of the Royal Engineers; while, in the shape of auxiliary corps, it will be accompanied by one battalion of the military train, and 200 men of the Medical Staff Corps.

"The Commander-in-Chief will be Major-General ASHBURNHAM, C. B., who had a command in the Sutlej campaign."

Trinity Church Affairs.

ADDRESS OF JUDGE PARKER—CONCLUDED.

And here, I hope it may not be thought out of place, Mr. Chairman, to call the attention of the Committee to the following expression in your report on the supreme evidence, occurring on page 4 of the legislative document. You there say, "It must therefore be an oversight, that among the names contained in these lists," believed to be accurate, "there are those of persons who have removed from the City, and also of others who have long been dead—some of them for years!" This is based on the testimony of Mr. WOLFE, as it appears on page 113 and 114 of the same document; but that evidence will by no means justify either the expression or the insinuation of the report. Mr. WOLFE said, "On the list of corporators who are communicants and not pew holders, I do not know that any of them have deceased; on the list of corporators as pew-holders, there are some names of deceased persons, and of persons residing out of the City." He does not say, as you state in the report, that they have "long been dead—some of them for years!" He said nothing that could imply a censure. His evidence was not inconsistent with the idea that her death or removal occurred immediately before his examination as a witness. Again, the report conveys the idea that the remark was applicable to all the lists, whereas the witness expressly stated, that in the list of communicants, he did not know of any of them having deceased.

But I think a little reflection will satisfy the Committee of the great injustice of imputing blame to the officers of Trinity Church, because some names were found in her list of pew-holders, of persons who were dead or had removed from the City. Suppose a pew-holder to die; does not his family continue to occupy the pew—his widow, perhaps, and his children? Pray, in whose name should the pew be registered, before the son grows up to take the place of the father? The widow cannot, by law, be a corporator. And what injury could be done to any person, if the pew continued for a short time to stand in the name of the late owner, even pending the settlement of the estate? Surely, there can be no danger of an unlawful vote being received from the person whose name remains thus on the list of pew holders?

It may happen, also, that a parishioner may pass part of his time in the country, occasionally coming to the City and occupying his pew; and are the officers of the church blameable, in such case, for keeping his name on the list of corporators, when it may well be doubted whether he resides in the City or not? With regard to the list of communicants, there can be no difficulty in making it strictly accurate, and Dr. Haight testifies that he makes the returns to the Bishop annually; but with regard to the list of pew-holders there may well be much difficulty. But I will spend no more time on this topic. It seems to me the charge made is utterly unworthy of having been formally placed upon the files of the Senate.

The act of 1814 was passed for the purpose of defining and explaining more clearly who were the corporators of Trinity Church, and of putting at rest the doubts which had arisen in consequence of the claim made by two or three members of other churches to vote at the election of 1813. This is apparent from the preamble of the act, which recites that Trinity Church asked that further legislative provisions may be made, "for the purpose of removing all doubts respecting their Charter rights, occasioned by the formation of other religious societies in the said City of New-York." It is clear that the Legislature did not suppose it was taking away the right of any corporator. At that time, the office of Attorney-General of this State was filled by that eminent jurist and good man, Abraham Van Vechten, and the matter was referred to him by the Assembly for his opinion. He reported as follows: "That he has examined a printed copy of the charter granted in the year 1697, to the rector and inhabitants of the City of New-York, as then established by law, and the acts altering the said charter, together with the bill referred to in the resolution entitled, 'an act to alter the name of the Corporation of Trinity Church in the City of New-York, and for other purposes,' and is of opinion that the purpose of the said bill will not defeat or vary any existing vested rights under the said charter and acts."

This, gentlemen, was high authority. It was that of the constitutional officer of the Government, whose duty it was to give opinions in such cases. This opinion was given with all the acts before him; at a time when he had certainly a much better opportunity of judging them than we have now, at least with reference to the contemporaneous construction practically given to those acts by the parties interested. This opinion was formed and expressed with all the advantages which a period of time forty-three years earlier afforded, and was concurred in by the Legislature.

Gentlemen: The Legislature of 1813 that passed that act, was one of the ablest that ever assembled within this capitol. Among its members were Daniel Cady, Elisha Williams, J. Rutsen Van Rensselaer, Josiah Ogden Hoffman, Nathan Sanford, Morgan Lewis, Erastus Root, and Martin Van Buren, the most able and distinguished men of the day—men not likely to fall into the error of invading, by their legislation, the vested rights of any citizen; and there were several others in that Legislature whom I ought, perhaps to have named in the same list. Six of these distinguished men, whose portraits now grace these walls, and who are looking down this day upon our doings, were concerned in the passage of the act of 1814, either as members of the Legislature or of the Council of Revision. The bill did not pass the Legislature in silence: it was discussed and examined. When it came before the Council of Revision objections in writing were made by Chancellor Lansing, which, on further examination, were abandoned and finally voted against by their author. Those were honest days, Mr. Chairman, when a public officer, who had been misled by an erroneous impression, might well be expected to acknowledge his error and correct it. I hope, Sir, all that honesty has not yet, in the oppressive language of Rev. Jesse Pound, "died out." For this honest and frank correction of an opinion by Chancellor Lansing, his memory has been recently defamed by an editor of a newspaper in the City of New-York, who has disgraced himself before the public by imputing to the venerable Chancellor that this change of opinion was obtained by corrupt means. Shame upon such licentiousness of the press; shame upon the man who will thus assail the memory of the honored dead—and the greater be the shame if the slanderer be the editor of a newspaper called "religious." A cause must be desperate that requires a resort to such disreputable means.

We suppose, then, that the act of 1814 changed no chartered rights. But, if it did, the change was made with the consent of the corporation and on its application. The Vestry, in its corporate capacity, is the authorized and legal representative of the corporators. The Vestry have full power to manage and control the affairs of the corporation. It was chosen for that purpose. The corporator as an individual has no power of management. He has surrendered all power to the Vestry, and given into its keeping his legal rights. The will of that Vestry, expressed under its corporate seal, is conclusive of the will of all whom the Vestry represents. How else can the Legislature deal with the corporators, except through the corporation acting under its corporate seal? As well might a stockholder in a monied corporation question the vote given on his own authorized proxy, as a corporator deny the validity of the act of the Vestry which he has chosen to represent him. All contracts must be made with the corporation, as such, not with the individual members of it. In the dealings of a corporation, corporators are not known individually. They are merged in the body corporate. The very principle of their organization is, that the majority control and regulate its affairs, and the officers chosen are its agents.

In the Bank of Augusta vs. Earle, 13 Peters, 587, Ch. J. Taney says, "whenever a corporation makes a contract, it is the contract of the legal entity—of the artificial being created by its charter; and not the contract of the individual member." In the Lincoln and Ken. Bank vs. Richardson, 1 Greenleaf Rep., 79, it was held in Maine, that the stockholders of a bank are bound by every act which a nounts to an acceptance of the terms of the charter on the part of the directors. See also Willcock on Corporations, 202.

The assent of a corporation may be shown by the acts of its officers or by long acquiescence. (Ang. and Ames on Corp. 4 ed. § 82; U. S. vs. Dandridge, 12 Wheaton R., 70, 71.) Now, in this case, there is no question of the assent of the corporation. The act of 1814 was petitioned for under the corporate seal of the church. There was the consent of the Legislature and the consent of the corporate body, making a complete contract between them. Having established this proposition, I pass to another point.

A charter is a contract between the Legislature and the corporation, made by the assent of both parties; and when such charter is granted and accepted, the Legislature has no power to interfere with the vested rights of the corporation, because such interference would be a violation of the Constitution of the United States, art. 1, s. 10, which declares that no State shall make a law impairing the obligation of contracts.

This rule was settled in the case of Dartmouth College vs. Woodward, 4 Wheaton R., 518, to which all subsequent decisions have conformed. The law has never since been questioned. The case I have last cited, was that of a charter from the British Crown to the trustees of Dartmouth College, in New Hampshire, in 1769, and it was held to be a contract within the meaning of that clause of the Constitution to which I have referred, and that it could not be altered by the Legislature without its consent. It was held also that it was not dissolved by the revolution. The charter of Trinity Church stands on precisely the same footing. It was granted by the British Government; was not dissolved by the Revolution, but was, in fact, recognized and confirmed by this State, (Comp. 1,777, sec. 36,) and it is not in the power of this Legislature to alter it, in any material respect except by the consent of the Corporation.

If, then, a material amendment of a charter can only be made by the consent of the Corporation, when such amendment is made as was done in this case by the act of 1814 by the consent of both the Legislature and the Corporation, it is a new or modified contract, and cannot be changed back without the consent of the Corporation. (1 Kent's Com. 416. 458; 3 Burr, 1656; R. vs. Passmore, 3 Term R. 240; 4 Wheat, 707.) As this seems to be settled, (says Mr. Justice Story) at the common law, than the doctrine that the crown cannot force on a private corporation a new charter, or compel the members to give up their own franchises, or admit new members into the Corporation."

The only exception to these propositions is when a right to "repeal, alter or modify" is reserved in the act of incorporation; and such a clause has been inserted in all the special charters in this State since the decision on the Dartmouth College case, in 1819. (See 2 Kent Com. 7 ed., note b.)

The rule of law I have been discussing, as settled by the Dartmouth College case, is applicable to private not to public or municipal corporations. (4 Wheaton 518.) It will not be denied but that Trinity Church is a private corporation. "Every corporation is private, as distinguished from public, unless the whole interest belongs to the Government, or it is vested with political or municipal power." This is the definition given in Rundle vs. Del. and R. Canal, 1 Wallace C. C. R., 275; see also 2 Kent, 306, 7th edition, note 1. I concede, that in regard to public or municipal corporations, such as cities, towns and villages, the Legislature has full power to repeal or amend, without having made any reservation of power in the charter, and without the consent of the corporation; but that power does not extend to private corporations, such as colleges, churches, academies, &c.; all these come within the law as adjudged in the Dartmouth College case.

We claim then, that the act of 1814 was a contract between the Legislature and the corporation of Trinity Church, putting at rest a disputed question, and passed on the application of Trinity corporation; and that there is no power in this Legislature to repeal it or to change any material part of it.

Forty-three years have elapsed since the passing of the act of 1814. For thirty two years there was an entire acquiescence on the part of all the members of the Episcopal churches in the City of New-York. This is clearly proved by the testimony of Mr. Verplanck and Dr. Berrian, who speak from actual knowledge, having been present at the vestry elections. During all that long period of time, no such persons offered to vote at the vestry elections of Trinity Church. In 1846, after some such person had applied to vote at such an election, and been refused, certain persons, members of other Episcopal churches, applied to the Legislature to repeal the act of 1814, and the application was reported against by a Committee of the Senate, and refused. Nothing daunted by that, they renewed their application in 1847, and it was unanimously reported against by a very intelligent Committee of the Assembly, consisting of seven members, and the report was unanimously concurred in by the Assembly. A very able and conclusive report was then made against the petition. And then it slept ten years longer, until this movement was initiated, not openly, before, by memorial, and surprising the whole world of their object, but secretly, ally getting some one to throw in a resolution just at the close of the session, to take testimony in secret—hearsay evidence—evidence based on mere suspicion—much of it given by witnesses who have no personal knowledge of the facts; vague and very erroneous opinions of the law, sworn to by witnesses and made evidence: and a copy of the testimony refused to be given to the officers of Trinity, till it should first have been reported to the Senate and made public to the whole world. It is in such a proceeding, originated and carried on in this manner, that the attempt is again made, despairing of success by other means, to repeal the second section of the act of 1814. If refused here, as I trust it will be, in common honesty, then 10 years more may perhaps elapse before some new scheme shall be devised by these few persevering clergymen and laymen to accomplish their purpose. All these applications have been made by the same persons, and the testimony of Mr. JOHN R. LIVINGSTON fully identifies them as the same persons, also, who were the principal witnesses before this committee at its secret sessions in New-York.

The lapse of forty-three years is conclusive against any supposed individual claim of a corporator. It is a lapse of time twice that which is required to bar a claim to real property; seven times that which would bar an action on contract; four times as long as would bar any equity action, and longer than is required even against a claim of real property by the State. Now, after a lapse of near half a century, contrary to all sound principles, an attempt is made to open and renew a controversy long since disposed of, and apparently abandoned.

If the Courts, even in mere temporal matters, regard the statutes of limitation as statutes of repose—as salutary means of terminating strife and contention, how much more reason is there for the presumption afforded by lapse of time, when their just application will secure peace to a large and respectable body of the Christian Church—will save funds consecrated to pious uses from being spent in litigation and strife, and will calm the troubled waters of church controversy.

It was held in the "Winchelsea cases," (4 Burr 1962,) that twenty years unimpeached possession of a corporate franchise should be regarded as conclusive evidence of right. Twenty years was thus adopted as a legal limitation, beyond which, even as to a private corporation, the right should be regarded as established. This rule of the common law, thus declared by Lord MANSFIELD, has not, I believe, been questioned. If, in the case of a private corporation, the right will be regarded as settled after a lapse of twenty years, can it be supposed that an individual corporator will be permitted to allege a right disposed of and acquiesced in forty-three years before?

In this respect the act of 1784, under which the right to vote is claimed, and the act of 1814, stand on the same footing. Both were amendments of a charter passed by the Legislature, the former with the implied, and the latter with the expressed assent of the corporation. Now, if individual corporators are at liberty to go back to the act of 1814, on the ground that that act cut off their rights, may not the individual communicants of Trinity parish go back with the same right to 1784, and complain that that act infringed upon their rights as corporators, by admitting as votere a new and much more numerous class, viz.: the pew-holders, who before that and under the original charter had no such right?

If an individual may go back forty-three years to assert such a right, it cannot change the question if twenty-eight more years be added. The true answer in both cases undoubtedly is, that in neither case can the individual corporator have any right. The consent given by the corporation—by the officers who represent him—being conclusively against his claim.

But if any persons were deprived of a right by the act of 1814, which we deny, who were they? Certainly they were only the persons then in existence, and then members of other Episcopal churches in New-York, and only that portion of those who did not assent to the action of the Legislature. Their number must have been very small at that time; the churches generally approved of the application, and some of them joined in it. No such persons have ever appeared here and asked to regain a lost right. I doubt if any of them are in existence. A person who was of age in 1812 must be an old man now; and in the changes by removal and otherwise constantly taking place in the City of New-York, the chances of one such person still remaining there are very small.

The movers of this prosecution are new men, they belong to a later class; some of them have been residents of the City of New-York but a short time; they are men, also, who never could have any interest prior to the act of 1814; and there is no pretence, certainly no proof, that they were affected by its provisions. It is plain, I think, that no one has a right to complain, unless it is a party himself aggrieved; and I think it is equally plain that, as to all others, all having no rights when an act was passed, the act can never be questioned.

Two or three of the clergymen who are agitating this matter most pertinaciously—who were witnesses before the Committee at its ex parte and secret session in the City of New-York—most of whom are proved to have been heretofore applicants to the Legislature on this subject, and who, I am told, were most zealously conspicuous at the meeting held in the City of New-York a few evenings ago, are now in charge of churches which have been endowed most liberally from the means of Trinity Church—churches which released long ago all further claims upon its bounty, and one of which at least, and I think more, coöperated with Trinity Church in the application upon which the act of 1814 was passed.* I have before me a letter addressed, on the 12th April, 1812, by the rector, wardens and vestry of St. Mark's Church, to the vestry of Trinity Church, from which I make the following extract: "We have learned with regret that some of our Episcopal brethren assert the claim of a general right in all the Episcopal Churches in this island to vote at your elections for church wardens and vestrymen. Whatever color may be given to this claim by any ambiguous word to be found in your charter, we sincerely take pleasure in declaring, that the congregation of St. Marks, which we represent, have no desire to assert the claim, and that we will at any time hereafter cheerfully unite with your respectable body in an application to the Legislature, if the measure shall be thought expedient, to explain the charter and confine the right of voting to the congregations of the churches under your immediate government." Justly may we exclaim, "Heu pietas—heu prisca fides!"

I have shown that to authorize members of the Episcopal Church corporations, not members of the congregation of Trinity Church or its chapels, to vote for the officers of Trinity Church, would be subversive of the letter and spirit of the act "regulating Religious societies," and would render members of other distinct corporations members of two distinct religious corporations at the same time, would deprive the congregation of Trinity Church of the power of choosing their own rector and officers, and of managing their own internal affairs, and would subject them to the government of an overpowering multitude, strangers to the congregation and interests of Trinity Church. Why, gentlemen of the committee, if it were practicable to change this law and do this great wrong, to break in upon the established usages of the church and say all may come in and vote here, the multitude that would assemble, numbered by thousands, would rush to the Easter elections of Trinity Church, each in the eager hope of securing the choice of a vestry, who would give the larger portion to the particular church to which he belonged—fifty different and conflicting interests, representing that number of churches, would struggle for the mastery. It would be strange indeed if disgraceful scenes of discord and strife, and perhaps of violence, were not the fruits of such an organization. Such would, I think, be the inevitable and melancholy results of the mistaken efforts of those who ought to have been engaged in preaching "peace on earth and good will to man," instead of calling out and encouraging the worst passions of our nature.

Trust, neither this Committee nor the honorable body which it represents, will lend its sanction to a scheme so mischievous. But it will fall far short of its duty and subject itself to just criticism hereafter, if it fails to meet this question firmly, if it neglects to rebuke, in a conservative spirit, and in strong terms,

* St. George, St. Mark and Grace Church have all shared liberally in the bounty of Trinity Church, the agitators who, mistaking their duty, have urged on this nefarious scheme of wrong and plunder.

Do not understand me, gentlemen, as speaking disrespectfully of these men as individuals; many of them are gentlemen of the highest respectability, and of great moral worth, and I doubt not they are "all, all honorable men." I believe if they could look at this question with its train of consequences, from a different and more disinterested point of view, they would be quite surprised at the new aspect it would assume.

Mr. Chairman, I have been aware of some of the extraordinary measures which have been resorted to for the purpose of prejudicing the public mind in advance on the question involved in this investigation, but I had not been informed of the slanders which had been circulated out of doors for the same purpose, till I learned it during the examination. Mr. Verplanck was asked by a member of this Committee on request, (but by whom the request was made we were not informed,) whether Trinity Church has recently had any persons employed as counsel or otherwise, now belonging or attached to the judicial, executive, or legislative department of the State Government. He answered promptly and unqualifiedly, that no such person had been employed, and that from his position on committees of a legal and executive character, he must have known it if any such person had been employed, now or for some time past. Sir, I was greatly obliged to the Committee for putting such a question, and enabling me to put down conclusively and forever the slanders referred to. Such dishonorable means, when exposed, cannot fail to recoil upon those who employ them. I will not, Sir, retaliate. But we are not to forget that those who are urging on this prosecution are generally men of large wealth and great influence. They have the means of exerting undue influence, even more ample than Trinity Corporation itself. They have already succeeded in enlisting in their interests men of prominent political rank, newspapers of influence, and men whom I meet in almost every part of the Capitol, watching the progress and caring for the result of this investigation. One of these prosecutors is at the head of a large business corporation, scattering its loans on mortgage in every part of the State. While we challenge for ourselves and all our acts the severest scrutiny, we shall, if occasion calls for it, demand that others be subjected to the same test. Trinity Church will resort to none except the ordinary and legitimate means of defence, but she will rely implicitly upon her own integrity, upon the laws of the country, and the conservative spirit in which they should be administered, to protect her from being wronged.

The third section of the act of 1814, which authorizes Trinity Church to make grants of land to other religious corporations, has been made the subject of criticism. Under our general statute for the incorporation of religious societies, no religious corporation could sell in fee any real estate without an order of the Chancellor (2 Kent's Com., 7th ed.) The enactment of the section in question was certainly a great convenience even if it was not indispensably necessary, under an ancient rule of the common law.

The sixth section of the act of 1814 provides that when a church shall have exhibited the account and inventory as specified in the ninth section of the act entitled "An act to provide for the Incorporation of Religious Societies," it shall not be necessary for such church again to exhibit an account and inventory, unless such church shall have acquired lands within this State subsequent to the exhibition of such account or inventory.

Trinity Church had exhibited such account and inventory, and has since doing so acquired no additional lands in this State. It is clear, therefore, that the Senate had no right to call for the returns which had led to this investigation. The Senate certainly could not, by resolution, overrule a valid and binding act of the Legislature, and Trinity Church had a perfect right to decline to answer and could not justly be censured for doing so. But she has not declined to answer; entertaining a profound respect for the Senate and an abiding confidence in its justice, Trinity Church has answered fully.

The attempt which has been made to criticise her report, as not having complied technically with every requirement of the resolutions of the Senate, is equally unworthy and unavailing. Trinity Church was not called upon to state her opinion of the value of each lot; but she was asked what was "the estimated value of each lot," and she answered fully and fairly. The value of the lots had then been recently estimated by the sworn assessors of the City, and nothing could be fairer than to return this estimate, stating expressly, as she did, by whom it was made. The value was a matter about which persons might well differ in opinion; it was a matter about which two of the gentlemen employed by the prosecutors here to appraise the lots, did, in fact, among themselves differ $870,000. Mr. Verplanck's testimony shows that no other return of the "estimated value" could have been made than that which was made. If the vestry had attempted to appraise it themselves, perhaps no two of the twenty-two members would have agreed in opinion. It is undoubtedly true, that a large portion of these lots are constantly rising in value, and are now more valuable than when appraised by the assessors. But all this is liable to change, and Mr. Verplanck informs us that in some parts of the City of New-York, and particularly about and near Hanover-square, real property has depreciated nearly one half within a few years. The same vicissitudes may occur to the property of Trinity Church, when the tide of business, always fluctuating, shall move in the direction of some other part of the City.

While on this subject, Mr. Chairman, let me call your attention to the error of calculation in your ex parte report, testified to by Mr. Skidmore, by which you erroneously add more than $1,400,000 to the value of the property of Trinity Church. While you have increased largely the estimate of valuation of the whole property, you have deducted for the leases upon the former valuation. It should not be forgotten that the present value of eleven and a quarter years' interest in real estate, at 6 per cent., is equal to about two thirds of the whole value of the property.

But, I ask, what has all this evidence to do with the question of the repeal of the act of 1814? Can that question be at all affected by the wisdom of the policy of Trinity Church, or the amount of her grants, or the objects to which grants have been made? May not Trinity Church do what she will with her own? Certainly, neither the State nor an individual has the power to question that right, or to despoil her of a dollar of her property, because the policy which has governed her may be deemed unwise.

But Trinity shrinks from no investigation. She has gone into it fully and openly—not in secret. Her defence does not rest upon hearsay, like the charges, but upon positive proof. She calls the members of her vestry—those who must know best; who alone could know the representations made by each applicant for her bounty, and disproves, by the most conclusive evidence, every insinuation of partiality and partisanship. It is proved beyond controversy, that no grant was ever made or denied with reference to the "High Church" or "Low Church" predilections of the applicants. Trinity Church has shown the extent of her bounties, and the too liberal devotion of her means to purposes of religion, education and charity. While Trinity Church has aided all but two of the fifty Churches in the City of New-York, there are more than two hundred Churches scattered over this great State that have been relieved and fostered by her. She is indeed the Alma Mater of them all. Though the property belongs to Trinity alone, and she is a trustee in no legal sense, she has been able, under Providence, to accomplish more good than has ever been done by any other private corporation on this side of the Atlantic, and probably in the world; and if not despoiled of her means by the cupidity which corporate wealth is apt to incite, she will go on in her high mission with increased ability and usefulness.

With a present income of less than $100,000 per annum, Trinity Church expends the whole and more in doing good—not in extravagant salaries to her ministers—no, Sir; the proof shows that the clergy of Trinity do not receive but about one-half of the salary that is paid by other churches to some of her Reverend persecutors. And yet these faithful ministers of Trinity may safely challenge comparison with any others in the world in the extent and value of their labors. While the wealthy citizens have moved up town, the poor have been left, scattered through the lower part of the City. With these poor are Trinity and her chapels filled, and among them are the faithful ministers of Trinity laboring for good. They give them instruction and advice; they pray with them; they baptize their children and bury their dead. Where else on earth can you find a body of men whose duties are more faithfully or more successfully discharged?

Mr. Chairman, if her wealth is to be divided, it will, of course, aid the other churches in the City of New-York, your own among the rest—but she becomes at once powerless to do good beyond the limits of the City; not another dollar could ever afterwards be given to the country churches. Divided among fifty churches in the City, there would be no more property for each than it would desire for its own purposes. The fable would then be realized of cutting down the tree to enjoy the fruit.

Those who serve in the vestry of Trinity to dispense this charity are men of the highest standing in the community in which they live. For 160 years the affairs of Trinity Church have been administered by a long line of eminent men with integrity and liberality. The purity of their motives has never been questioned, it is conceded, even in your ex parte report, founded on suspicion and hearsay evidence. I am told that Mr. Jay, an opponent of the views and policy of Trinity Church, admitted, in a pamphlet published last year, that no great trust was ever administered for so long a time with such unsullied purity. Assailed though the church has been at different times by rapacious claimants, it has manfully resisted them, and faithfully protected the fund, till by the increase of the City it has become a large estate.

Mr. Chairman, has not such a party when accused a claim not only upon your justice and forbearance, but on your respect? Does not the community owe it its thanks for all the good which it has accomplished?

Gentlemen the case is now before you. The evidence is to be printed. Thank God, there is a spirit abroad that demands it, and that will secure for it an impartial consideration. We are ready to abide by the result. The verdict that the public shall render cannot fail to be a triumph to those men who, with no interested motives, and with no desire except to accomplish the greatest practicable amount of good, have given their time and their services gratuitously in the vestry of Trinity Church for the benefit of mankind.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

United States Court of Claims.

CLAIM TO THE PROCEEDS OF A SLAVER CAPTURED IN 1848 UNDER THE ACT OF MAY 10, 1800.

O. H. Bemyman vs. the United States.—(On trial upon petition and proofs)—Statement of facts, &c. On Jan. 24, 1848, the claimant then commanding the United States schooner Ouachita, captured the barque Laurens, with over $18,000 on board in specie, alleged to be then engaged in the slave trade, contrary to the laws of the United States. She was brought into the port of New-York and there libeled by the District Attorney for this cause. On July 2, 1849, a decree of forfeiture was obtained. By the act of May 10, 1800, Sec. 4, (2 Stat. at large, 70,) any vessel employed in the slave trade may be seized by any of the commissioned vessels of the United States, and together with her tackle, &c., and the goods and effects other than slaves found on board, "shall be forfeited, and may be proceeded against in any of the district or circuit courts, and shall be condemned for the use of the officers and crew making the seizure, and be divided in the proportion directed in the case of prize." The act of April 23, 1800, Sec. 6 (2 Stat. at large, 52) provides how prize shall be divided. When the capture is of equal or superior force to the vessel or vessels making the capture, it shall "be the sole property of the captors," but when of inferior force, "shall be divided equally between the United States and the officers and men making the capture." By section 8 of the Act of March 3, 1849, (9 Stat. at large, 378,) it is provided that all prize money, arising from captures by United States vessels, received by the Marshal, who makes sale of such prizes, shall within sixty days after the sale be deposited, less charges, &c., in the treasury of the United States, and such parts thereof as may belong to the officers and crews of the vessels of the navy shall be paid to them under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy."

On Jan. 8, 1851, Williams and others, of the crew of the Ouachita, praying for a decree of distribution, Smith Barker, Esq., was appointed, by the Court, Commissioner to ascertain the amount subject to distribution, &c. On May 16, 1851, he reported that the proceeds of the prize should be equally divided between the United States and the captors, as the Laurens was of force inferior to the capturing vessel; that so far as their (the captors') rights and interests were concerned, the fund should, of course, (including $18,992 in specie which the Marshal had failed to pay into the Treasury, but converted to his own use,) be considered as in the Treasury of the United States; that he, the Commissioner, regarded "the fund as subject to distribution in precisely the manner, as though the attorney of the libelants had enforced a compliance by the Marshal, with the rule of this Court, in the month of March, 1849, and that money was now in the registry of this Court;" and that the sum subject to distribution was $20,664 69. The report of Mr. Barker was duly confirmed by decree of the District Court, May 16, 1851.

The defalcation of the Marshal (Moore) was set up on the part of the Government, as a defence to the claim. While that matter was in litigation the Secretary of the Navy declined the payment of the money without an appropriation by Congress. Only $4,720 07, realized by the sale of the Laurens, made by Talmadge, the successor of Moore, was ever paid into Court.

By the Court—GILCHRIST, C. J.—Held: The object of sec. 8 of the Act of March 3, 1849, (9 Stat., 378,) was to provide that the Marshal who should make sale of the prize should deposit the net proceeds, after paying all charges, in the Treasury. 2. The decree of the District Court is conclusive, being unreversed, as to all matters within the jurisdiction of that Court. 3. It was within the jurisdiction of the District Court to adjudge that the bark Laurens was lawful prize, and to condemn her as such; and to adjudge, as the question came properly before the Court, that the proceeds of the prize were, in law, in the Treasury of the United States, and were subject to distribution. 4. Also, it was competent for the Court to determine that the sum of $1,000, paid to the counsel, was properly charged upon the fund. 5. It was not within the jurisdiction of the District Court to decree a distribution of the proceeds of the prize, if it was intended to include anything beyond the money in the registry, as sec. 8 of the act of March 3, 1849, expressly provides that such part of the proceeds as may belong to the officers and crew of the vessels of the navy, "shall be paid to them under the discretion of the Secretary of the Navy." 6. That act of March 3, 1849, was in force at the time the decree in the District Court was made, and as by it the money is to be paid under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy, the provision excludes the idea that it is to be paid according to the decree of the District Court. 7. By the act of May 10, 1800, the whole property of the prize subject to distribution belonged to the captors, to be divided among them in the proportion directed in the case of prize, as pointed out by section 6 of the act of April 23, 1800. 8. Whether that sum is comprehended in the decree of the District Court or not, the same result must follow. If it was not included in the decree, then the money remains in the Treasury, and is subject to distribution according to law. 9. The decree being so far final, it necessarily follows that the money is in the Treasury, for it has been so adjudged, and all parties are concluded by that judgment. 10. The judgment cannot be regarded as conclusive when it makes for the United States, and not conclusive where it makes against them. 11. The claimant here, and the persons whom he represents, are entitled by law to recover of the United States the sum of $20,664 69, to be divided among them in the proportion directed in the case of prize.—Abstract of Opinion.

CLAIM FOR CANNON, SHOT AND SHELL FURNISHED THE UNITED STATES IN 1776 AND 1780—"FINAL SETTLEMENT CERTIFICATE"—UNITED STATES STATUTES OF LIMITATION.

Carson, Administrator of Grubb vs. The United States.—On demurrer.—The following are the facts: On April 19, 1776, Curtis Grubb, of Pennsylvania, made a contract with Stephen Hopkins and others, a Committee of Congress, for making certain cannon. On August 3, 1780, Curtis and Peter Grubb made a contract with Daniel Jay, the Agent of the Board of War of the United States, for casting a quantity of shot and shell. The Messrs. Grubb made and delivered large quantities of shot and shell under their agreements, and upon a settlement of their accounts received what was called a "final settlement certificate," numbered 265, and dated January 5, 1784, for $4,180 56, with interest from January 1, 1783. The Messrs. Grubb are both dead, and the records of the Treasury show that this certificate is still outstanding and unpaid.

Is the claim barred by an omission to present it within the time specified by the various Acts of Congress in the nature of Statutes of Limitation pertaining to this subject?

Those statutes are: 1. Act of Feb. 12, 1793, 1 Stat. at large, 301, Sec. 1, bars all claims upon the United States, "for services or supplies, or for other cause, matter or thing, furnished or done," previous to March 4, 1789, "whether founded upon certificates or other written documents, from public officers or otherwise," not presented at the Treasury before May 1, 1794. A proviso, however, excepts certificates of final settlement, &c. 2. Act of April 21, 1794, 1 Stat. at large, 353, has no application here. 3. Act of March 3, 1795, 1 Stat. at large, 437, provides that final settlement certificates shall, before Jan. 1, 1797, be presented at the office of the Auditor of the Treasury, for the purpose of being exchanged for other certificates of equivalent value and tenor, or, at the option of the holders, to be registered at said office and returned; such certificates, if not so presented, to be forever barred. 4. Act of June 12, 1798, suspended the operation of said act of 1795 for one year, so far as related to final settlement certificates, &c. 5. Act of April 18, 1818, suspended the operation of said acts of 1796 and 1798 for two years. 6. Act of May 7, 1822, suspended them for two years further. 7. Act of July 11, 1832, revised said act of May 7, 1822, for four years, and until July 4, 1837.

It was not alleged that the certificate in question, No. 265, was presented at the Treasury, as required by said act of March 3, 1795. It was contended, on the argument, by the claimant, that this certificate is a transcript from the Treasury records and is there a registered debt as appears by the books of the Treasury, and that nothing which is on those books is barred by any of the acts.

Held by the Court—SCARBURGH, J.—The claimant, on the facts presented, has no cause of action against the United States. Held: A "final settlement certificate" not presented at the Treasury, as required by act of March 3, 1795, and the acts extending it, is precluded from settlement and allowance. Held: There is no statute which bars the certificates issued by the Secretary of the Treasury commonly called "Registered Certificates." Held: The certificate might have been converted into a registered certificate or debt by virtue of the act of March 3, 1795, sec. 14. As it was not presented at the office of the Auditor of the Treasury to be registered, it retains its character as a final settlement certificate, and is not a part of the registered debt. Held: The certificate is not evidence of a debt against the United States. SUPREME COURT—Special Term—April 2.

Before Hon. Justice Davies.

THE TRIAL OF MRS. CUNNINGHAM AND ECKEL TAKEN TO THE OYER AND TERMINER.

Yesterday the counsel for Mrs. Cunningham made a motion to have the place of trial taken from the Court of General Sessions into the Court of Oyer and Terminer. Mr. Clinton first read the following petition:

In the matter of the application of Emma Augusta Burdell to remove an indictment for alleged murder pending against her from the Court of General Sessions in and for the City and County of New-York, to the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for said City and County.

To Hon. Henry E Davies, one of the Justices of the Supreme Court of the State of New-York:

The petition of Emma Augusta Burdell, of the City of New-York, respectfully showeth:

That on the 21st day of February last, your petitioner, under the name of Emma Augusta Cunningham, was indicted in the Court of General Sessions of the Peace, in and for the City and County of New-York, for the alleged murder of one Harvey Burdell, on or about the 30th day of January last.

That the said indictment was found and filed in the said Court on or about the said first mentioned day; that your petitioner has not, as yet, been arraigned thereon, nor pleaded thereto; and that she is now confined in the City Prison of the City of New-York, awaiting trial thereon; and that no proceedings have been had thereon. That the said murder is, (as your petitioner believes,) charged to have been committed at the house No. 31 Bond-street, in the City of New-York; that your petitioner is entirely innocent of the charge contained in the said indictment.

And your petitioner further shows, that she is advised by her counsel, Henry L. Clinton and Gilbert Dean, Esqrs., and believes to be true, that the questions of law as well as fact will arise upon the trial of said indictment, that she is advised by her said counsel that it is eminently proper that said indictment should be tried in the highest Court of Criminal Jurisdiction in this City and County, and that her interests require that the prosecution of the said indictment should be removed from the said Court of General Sessions, to the Court of Oyer and Terminer for the City and county of New York.

And your petitioner further shows, that this application is made in good faith, without any desire or intent to obstruct or impede the due course of justice, and under the advice of your petitioner's said counsel, to whom your petitioner has fully and fairly stated the facts of the case, as far as she knows or has been able to learn, and to whom she has committed all her rights.

And your petitioner further shows that the next Court of Oyer and Terminer, in and for said City and County, (as your petitioner is informed and believes,) site on the first Monday of April next, which is the day of sitting also of the said Court of General Sessions, and that the removal of the said indictment now asked for, cannot, as she is advised and believes, produce any injurious delay, or in any way tend to prevent a due prosecution of the said indictment.

Wherefore your petitioner prays your Honor to grant an order removing the said indictment from the said Court of General Sessions to the Court of Oyer and Terminer, and granting such further or other relief as to your honor may seem meet.

And your petitioner will ever pray, &c.

State of New-York—City and County of New-York, ss.—Emma Augusta Burdell, the petitioner above named, being duly sworn, saith, that she has heard, read the foregoing petition, and knows the contents thereof, and that the same is true of her own knowledge, except as to the matters therein stated upon her information and belief, and that as to those matters she believes it to be true.

EMMA A. BURDELL.

Sworn before me April 1, Wm. H. Duesenberry, Commissioner of Deeds.

Mr. Clinton referred the Court to 2 R. S. 731 and 732, where it was provided that any person indicted, may apply to certain officers for the removal of the trial to the Court of Oyer and Terminer, and provides the form and manner of the application. He considered the order contained in the statute imperative on the officer before whom the application was made, unless it were shown, either that the application was not made in due season, or it should, to the Judge, seem manifestly inexpedient, by reason of its preventing a speedy and fair trial. The counsel referred to 3 Barb. 144, where it was held that the officer was required to grant the motion, unless for the reasons above stated. As both Courts sit at the same time there need be no delay in the trial, and it was admitted that this motion was made in due season.

Mr. Sedgwick, the Assistant District-Attorney, stated that, as far as the District Attorney personally was concerned, it made no difference in which court the case was tried; but he objected on other grounds. He thought that the removal was in the discretion of his Honor, who, if he thought it inexpedient, was not bound to issue the order. The only ground of expediency set forth in the petition was, that important questions of law, as well as of fact, were to be adjudicated upon. In answer to this, he stated that the statute gave the Court of Sessions the same power in questions of law and fact as are possessed by the Oyer and Terminer.

The change would cause great delay, as a very large panel of jurors would have to be drawn. The Court would have no other case to try except that of Mr. Eckel, (if he were to be allowed to be tried there,) and therefore the Court, after meeting, would have to adjourn and discharge the jurors until the third Monday, involving much trouble which might be saved by having the case tried in the Court of Sessions.

His Honor remarked that he thought he had no discretion in the matter, but he should be pleased if the District-Attorney could prove that he had, for he should like to be relieved from bringing the case into that Court. (Judge DAVIES will hold the Oyer and Terminer.)

Ex-Judge Dean stated that it was not even necessary to notify the District-Attorney of this motion, but they had done so out of cour

NORDHOFF'S STORIES OF THE ISLAND WORLD.

Stories of the Island World. By CHARLES NORDHOFF, author of "Man-of-War Life," "The Merchant Vessel," "Whaling and Fishing," &c. 16mo, muslin, 75 cents.

"Mr. Nordhoff is a young writer who has already attained a worthy reputation by his cordial and sincere narratives of maritime experiences. He has seen every variety of sea-life, from the artistic organization of a man-of-war to the rough-and-tumble arrangements of a Nantucket whaler; and without assuming any of the airs of authorship, has given a straightforward account of his adventures in several little volumes, which in their frank, confiding naturalness, are not without something of the secret charm which so bewilders all classes of readers in the perusal of works like Robinson Crusoe. Mr. Nordhoff has the rare gift of investing every-day realities with an atmosphere of humane sympathy which is more effective than the most dazzling colors of romance. His volumes have been reprinted in England, and welcomed with a more appreciative recognition than is usually accorded to American productions. The present work consists of historical and descriptive sketches of some of the principal islands in various seas, drawn from personal observation and from the most authentic sources, and presented in a style of modest simplicity and beauty. In its copiousness of illustration, variety of instruction, and ease of expression, it is adapted not only to youthful readers, for whom it seems to have been principally intended, but to all curious lovers of lively and faithful description."

GIESELER'S ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY. A Text Book of Church History. By Dr. JOHN C. L. GIESELER. Translated from the Fourth Revised German Edition. By Samuel Davidson, LL.D., and Rev John Wm. Stanley Hull, M.A. A new American Edition, Revised and Edited by Henry B Smith, Professor in the Union Theological Seminary, New-York. Vols I. and II. 8vo, sheep, extra, $4 50.

In this new edition of Gieseler's Church History, a thorough revision of the translation has been made, with additional reference to the English and later German works. The alterations are numerous, giving more exactly the sense of the original, and correcting frequent mistranslations.

D. APPLETON & CO.,
Nos. 346 and 348 Broadway,
HAVE JUST PUBLISHED
SMILES AND FROWNS.
A NOVEL.
BY A. A. WENTZ.
1 vol. 12mo. Cloth. $1.
From the Chicago Tribune.

The style is simple and effective; the plot natural, and of a deep abiding, and yet present interest; the sentiments sensible, and the principles inculcated generous without pretence, and pure without cant. The smiles of life are in the book, and the sunshine which creates them. The frowns are there, too, and the causes which produce and keep them alive. We predict for this novel a wide success. It cannot fail to be generally read, and wherever read it will do good.

From the New York Evening Post.

This work is from the pen of a lady hitherto but little known in the world of letters, but whose delicate perception and just appreciation of the true and the beautiful in human character, are obviously of no ordinary kind. Although a book which will be classed among works of light fiction, it has a noble purpose, and inculcates some admirable lessons in a forcible and pleasing manner. By a series of incidents, well conceived and naturally and gracefully woven together, it discloses the abounding wealth of the human heart, when animated and swayed by religious principle, and lays bare some of the sources of life's sweetest joys, as well as its darkest sorrows. sources of which multitudes, even in this enlightened age, are profoundly ignorant. Its teaches, also, what so many need to know—but do not yet—the blessed ministry of suffering and of sorrow, and impresses the reader with the conviction that nothing is permitted to befall us here on earth which is not intended to promote our best interests.

JUST PUBLISHED.
A STORY OF LIFE'S PHASES.
12mo. 382 pages. Price $1.

For purity of style and sentiment, elevation of purpose, and dramatic power and effect, this book has rarely been excelled.

The Atlas speaks of it as "a fascinating story of life and home scenes, drawn with an artistic skill and beauty, and in a style of purity and chasteness of diction equalled by few, and surpassed by none."

The Journal commends it as "a remarkably well written book."

The Chronicle and Telegraph announces the "Golden Legacy" as "from the pen of a lady who shows rare talent for such a work," and adds that "it is quite equal to anything of the kind which they (the Appletons) have ever published."

The New-York Independent says, "The writer of this work bids fair to take rank among the very best of her class, combining fine sentiments with sound principles, clothed in a pure English style, free from mannerism, and dictated by the most worthy aims."

RURAL LIFE.—TWO MODES OF PLANTING and Managing Fruit Trees, Illustrated with Engravings; A Trip over the Alleghanies; Summer Resorts; Scenery on the Western Shore; Pittsburgh and her Citizens. In this week's LIFE ILLUSTRATED. Only 4 cents.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

By the arrival, last night, of the steamship Texas, from Aspinwall and San Juan del Norte, we have important rumors from Nicaragua. Two weeks' later intelligence from WALKER'S headquarters at Rivas, is stated to have been received. On the 16th of March the General, with 400 men, attacked the enemy at St. George, but learning that another force, under CHAMORRA, was at the same time making a counter attack on Rivas, he returned thither, and on the way encountered them in full retreat, and hotly pursued by HENNINGSEN. Being surrounded, the enemy were panic struck. The men met their fate with scarcely any resistance, and were slaughtered in great numbers. They themselves admit to have lost 327 killed and 300 wounded. Gen. WALKER was well supplied with arms, ammunition and provisions. A rumor prevailed that EX-President RIVAS had been assassinated. No particulars are given. There had been no fresh engagements on the San Juan River. The men under Col. LOCKRIDGE'S command were still stationed at Serapiqui and on the island at the mouth of the River San Carlos. Col. LOCKRIDGE had received large reinforcements, and his hopes of forcing his way up the river and joining WALKER were greater than ever.

The Belgian screw steamer Constitution, from Southampton on the 17th of March, arrived at this port yesterday. The news is three days later. It is announced that the Sound Dues Treaty has been signed by the Representatives of the European Powers interested. Spanish preparations against Mexico were being continued on a large scale.

Details of the China news up to Jan. 30 are received. The Hong Kong correspondent of the London Times gives particulars of the attempt of the Chinese to poison the Europeans by mixing arsenic with the bread. Though several hundred people suffered severely from the effects of the poison, none actually died. There were apprehensions that the Chinese would attack Hong Kong, and, owing to the demands made upon him for the security of the Island, Admiral SEYMOUR had been obliged to withdraw his forces from the place they have hitherto occupied in the vicinity of Canton. The Chinese had collected a very large fleet of war junks, and were making great efforts to block up the river. This manœuvre is one that the British are most anxious to prevent. Particulars are given elsewhere of the destruction of the western suburbs of Canton.

From New Granada we have no further intelligence respecting the dispute between our Commissioner and the Government of that Republic. News from Bogota was looked for on the Isthmus with some anxiety.

From Peru we learn that the Revolution continued to lose ground. The British mail steamer New-Granada, en route to Panama, had been met by two of VIVANCO'S revolutionary war vessels, and had been robbed of a large quantity of arms and specie. This act of piracy will throw the revolutionary fleet into the hands of the British men of war, and will probably be the means of terminating the struggle in favor of President CASTILLA.

In the State Senate yesterday, the concurrent resolutions condemning the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Dred Scott case were called up, and passed after some opposition, by 22 against 6. The bill to organize the Senatorial Districts, after a rearrangement of the composition of the Second and Third Districts, (Brooklyn,) was passed. In Assembly, the Metropolitan Police bill came up for a third reading, and after several ineffectual efforts at amendment, it was finally passed, by 76 against 32. Various other important matters were acted upon in both Houses.

The Republican members of the Legislature held a caucus last night, and nominated HENRY H. VAN DYCK as candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction on the first ballot, he receiving 58 votes, and VICTOR M. RICE 33.

A great excitement was occasioned at Niagara Falls, on Tuesday, by the perilous situation of an elderly man named TAYLOR, of Herkimer County, who fell into the Rapids below the Suspension Bridge, and was rescued only after strenuous exertions. The case is similar to that of the man AVERY, who was caught in the Rapids above the American Fall three or four years ago; he, however, was carried over and killed, while Mr. TAYLOR escaped.

We have a rumor from St. Louis that one hundred and fifty fillibusters are about leaving that city for New-Orleans, to join an expedition being fitted out in the latter city for the invasion of Costa Rica—thus relieving WALKER by directing the attention of his enemies in another direction.

A heavy gale on Lake Michigan on the 1st inst. did a great deal of damage among the shipping. A dispatch from Chicago states that six vessels were wrecked along the shore in that vicinity, and fifteen lives were reported lost.

In the Supreme Court yesterday, the place of trial of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM and Mr. ECKEL was changed from the Court of General Sessions to the Court of Oyer and Terminer. The trial will take place on the 3d Monday in April, as before provided.

Several witnesses were examined yesterday regarding the formalities of the Execution of JOSIAH S. SUTHERLAND'S will which is contested on the alleged ground of undue influence exerted over the testator and of his testamentary incapacity.

The will of the late Deacon WM. COLGATE was offered for probate before the Surrogate yesterday. The bequests are all of a private character.

All the shares of the Central Park Fund Stock were awarded yesterday, at the Comptroller's office. The stock comprises 8,000 shares, at $100 a share, redeemable July 1, 1887. Most of it is taken at par.

The manufacture of hoop skirts is shortly to be entered upon on a large scale at Sing Sing prison, under State contract. The requisite machinery for the purpose is being made in this City, and as soon as completed will be transferred to the prisons. Hoop skirts are becoming as much a staple as hats and shoes.

A lecture on "The uses of Iron in War," was delivered last night before the Geographical Society of this City, by A. S. HEWITT, Esq. The construction of guns so large that no force could withstand their missiles, and the perfection of sea-coast defences, were among the points urged by the lecturer on the attention of his audience.

Slavery in Kansas.

There is nothing so sensitive to public opinion as property of whatever kind. If the breath of insecurity but once pass across it, its value begins to diminish under our eyes. A man soon ceases to enjoy in the present possessions which are not guaranteed to him in the future. There is probably no sort of property more easily affected in this way than property in negroes. It labors under the singular disadvantage of being sentient and intelligent. It reasons, doubts, questions, disputes its own lawfulness, and actually aids the robber in stealing itself. All property is based on the common and general recognition of its legitimacy; but slave property is doubly dependent upon it, because it is less than any other under the control of the owners.

The Slave States are fully alive to this fact. They know perfectly well that the existence in any one of them of a party, however small, which disputed the claims of slave owners would be fatal to the institution itself, or at all events would enormously diminish the value of the negroes. The mere discussion of the subject is, therefore, prohibited throughout the whole length and breadth of the Slave Territory. As soon as a man may rise up in any of the Southern States and denounce property in negroes as unlawful, with impunity, the extinction of the system in that State at least is, we may be sure, not very far distant. What is occurring in Missouri to-day is a proof of the truth of this.

We consequently cannot help thinking that it will not be necessary to take many legal precautions to prevent Slavery taking root in the soil of Kansas. The slaveholder is timid, agitated, and alarmed enough about the safety of his property where he dwells in the midst of brethren bound by honor, and still more strongly by self-interest, to secure him in its peaceful enjoyment, and under the shadow of laws to which every man in the State is an assenting party. He is always in alarm, and sleeps like a worn-out sentinel a troubled and uneasy sleep, his sword under his pillow and his rifle cocked. No better proof of the terrible nature of the forebodings by which "Southern gentlemen" are haunted could be afforded than the ferocity of the punishments by which they seek to maintain order amongst their serfs. The precautions as well as the triumphs of fear are invariably marked by cruelty and blood.

If such is the case where there is nothing to dread, except the feeble and isolated efforts of a degraded, brutalized race to escape from the lash of their masters, and where not simply are the latter united heart and hand against them, but the whole State organization is so framed as to rivet their chains, what probability is there, that Slave-owners will bring their property in immediate contact with men who not simply deny its legality, but deny it with all the energy derived from white blood, and from a Northern education? As far as any chance of negro Slavery existing hereafter, de facto, in Kansas is concerned, the Free-Soil settlers have only to meet twice a year in Convention and make Abolitionist speeches to render it all but impossible. The mere discussion of the question in any one spot would cause the flight of every Slave-owner within one hundred miles round to warmer air and sunnier skies.

The course proposed by Governor ROBINSON for the adoption of the Free-Soil settlers in Kansas, therefore, whatever effect it may have in hastening the admission of the Territory as a Free State into the Union, is not necessary to render the introduction of Slavery anything beyond an empty threat. All the bogus legislators that this Union could produce could not sustain the peculiar institution for two years, in the presence of a free press and a protesting and vigorous minority. Every Free-Soiler has the consolation of knowing that his very presence is a blow struck at the heart of the abuse, and that the feeblest voice which talks of liberty in the hearing of slaves, is a sound as terrible to the owner as the trumpet of a liberating army.

WHAT SHALL BE DONE FOR VIRGINIA?—A Virginia paper gives the alarm to the slave-holding interest of the Old Dominion, asserting that the drainage of slaves is so great that in a very few years the institution must cease to exist. It is a rarity, the alarmist says, for a day to go by without at least one hundred negroes passing southward through Petersburg. On the other hand, the Northern Press is constantly recording the escape of slaves northward. The facilities furnished by what are known as underground railroads were never so actively employed. Virginia is the chief sufferer by these stampedes; and as data are not wanting to compute the exodus, it must be owned the occasion fully justifies the agitation of the journalist referred to. At least two thousand slaves escaped last year from Virginia to the Free States and to Canada. If we are to place any reliance upon the estimated involuntary emigration southward along the great mail route, thirty thousand were during the same period sold in the Southern markets. The annual mortality, according to the census returns of 1850, is 9,000. The same returns gave the entire slave population of the State at 472,528. Agreeably to the natural laws of increase, it ought to be 520,000 in 1860. What will it be if we deduct an annual depletion of 41,000? Exactly 110,000. The account standing thus:

Normal increase in ten years	47,472—520,000
Mortality in ten years	90,000
Emigration in ten years, voluntary and involuntary	320,000—410,000
Slave population in 1860	110,000

In other words: from constituting one-third of the entire population, as it did in 1850, it will constitute one-tenth; and so cease to serve, supposing it ever did serve, as an adequate resource for labor. There is evidently cause of serious alarm in such calculations. If they err in over-estimating the drain, the error is readily corrected by reading 1865 or 1870 for the year assumed. The self-elimination of Slavery in Virginia is indeed but a question of time; that time by no possibility exceeding a score of years. Forty counties on the western slope of the Alleghanies are already so far freed from slaves as to stand ready for emancipation.

As it is clearly out of the question to prevent this result, common sense suggests some sort of preparation for it. To replace the paltering, ineffectual labor of Africans, with the sturdy, productive nerve of white men; to replace exhausted capital with the freely offered means of immigrants, farmers, and settlers of every description; to reanimate the lands worn out by unsparing planting; and to bring under cultivation the vast tracts as yet virgin of axe and plow, should be the grand aim of every patriotic Virginian. To neglect all these, in the insane eagerness to clasp more closely, and hold more firmly negro Slavery, which will not stay, is an infatuation equaled only by that of the hopeless opium or arsenic eater.

Cruelty to Sailors.

Public attention has lately been directed, in an especial manner, to the cruelties which are habitually practised on sailors upon board American ships, and particularly on board packet-ships running between New-York and certain European ports. The records of our United States Commissioners' Court, and of the Police Courts at Liverpool and Havre, lead us to believe that some of our finest ships are officered by men whose delight and duty seems to attain its highest development in practising the most inhuman tortures upon their victims of the forecastle. Sailors have not only been forced to draw nails from the deck with their teeth, to lick up the dust on the cabin floor, to fight with infuriated bull-dogs; but they have been brutally mauled with handspikes, have been beaten to death, and have been forced to jump into the sea in order to escape a horrible and lingering torment at the hand of their persecutors. The reports of a man "missing"—"killed by a fall"—or "lost overboard," which are written in the ship's log-book, often conceal one of these murders or suicides, for which the officers of the ship are personally responsible.

But we are not eager to pass sentence upon the actors of these inhumanities, without considering all the circumstances of their position. While their savage barbarities, which disgrace civilized nature, are beyond any justification, we must allow that these officers are the creatures of a system which has been forced upon them by their superiors, which has degraded the standard of our seamanship, and made our forecastles but little better than a den of iniquity; a system which offers a premium for these cruelties, inasmuch as it makes a strong provocation for them in the worthlessness of the men it furnishes for our crews. It is the outrageous system of IMPRESSMENT—now carried on by landlords and shipping agents, who kidnap men in our streets, force them away from their families and occupations, and bind them, unwillingly, to a service of which they are ignorant and for which they are totally unfitted—that underlies all these cruelties, and will continue to nourish them, so long as it is encouraged or tolerated by our merchants and ship-owners.

The officers of our merchant ships universally complain that the severest discipline at sea is necessary to control the "insolence and insubordination" which has become rife in the forecastle. But, granting this fact, and granting what these officers claim—that inhumanity must be the principle of this discipline—how has it happened that the only characteristics of an American seaman, nowadays, are insolence and insubordination? What has debased our seamanship so utterly, that men of worth and ability are not to be found in the profession? What has occasioned this universal lamentation over the incompetency of American crews? Nothing but these official cruelties, which have driven all good seamen ashore, compelling them to seek the employment of landsmen. We may not expect to find humane officers in charge of our ships, until we have good seamen to man them; but we shall never have good seamen to man them, until the occupation of that landshark—the shipping-master—is gone.

Very few persons, except those familiar with marine affairs, have any idea of the enormous villanies which are practised by these landsharks, in New-York and other large seaports, to procure a crew for a ship. The ship, being loaded, hauls into the stream to get ready for sea, and the mate applies to the Shipping-master or sailors' landlord for his complement of men. If the ship is bound for Liverpool, the wages offered are (at the present time) $20 a month, and $20 advanced. The land-shark immediately advertises, in English and German, for "young men to work as deck laborers at fixed wages." Young men, who, perhaps, have never been at sea, eagerly accept the engagement offered, are conveyed on board the ship just as she is ready to get underway, and are surprised to find themselves impressed into sea service before the mast. If the shipping-master keeps a Water-street boarding-house, as is generally the case, he selects his victims from his boarders, drugs them with rum and opium, rows them off to the ship, hoists them aboard in a sling, and stows them away, insensible, in the forecastle. The next morning the ship is at sea, and the poor fellows are aroused from their stupor by a gruff voice at the companion-way ordering them on deck to work. A man is walking along South-street with a box of carpenter's tools on his shoulder, or a pack of glass at his back. The land-shark, who is prowling for a crew, and wants one more man, hails the stranger with an "Hollo, my good fellow, do you want a job?"—and engaging him to make some repairs on board a ship lying in the stream, takes him off in his skiff. On the way, the unsuspecting mechanic is rendered insensible by drugged liquor, or tobacco, furnished by his guide. His tools are thrown into the river, he is hoisted on board the ship, and awakes from his delirium, the next morning, far away from land. It has been reported that men, who have been drugged and decoyed on board ship, in this manner, were found dead when the officer went to rouse them out of their bunks to work. Of course, these victims of the kidnapper get very little of the "advance" wages which the owner furnishes for the crew. That is the plunder of the land-shark, who generally shares it with his coadjutor—the mate of the ship.

It is to be expected that a crew, composed mainly of cooks, coopers, carpenters, clerks, tailors, shoemakers, and street-loafers—kidnapped from the shore—will show "insolence and insubordination." The officers of the ship might expect it, for they know that these men are not sailors, and that, however debased their characters, it is but natural for them to rebel against the despotism to which they are enslaved. But this "insolence and insubordination," about which captains and mates are forever complaining to those who expose their inhumanities to the public, is just what these official bullies want; for, having secured these men and got their ship to sea, the first duty of the deck is to "haze" them, to degrade them and torture them so excellently that they will gladly desert the ship at Liverpool. That is the secret of those cruelties on shipboard, whose recital so frequently shocks the community.

There is always, at Liverpool, a large number of disengaged sailors, looking out for a good chance to ship, or to get to this side of the Atlantic. As the supply of this class of men exceeds the demand for them, they are obliged to pay a premium of £1 for the opportunity which they are seeking. This sum is deducted from their advance by the Liverpool shipping-master, who divides it with the mate of the ship employing him. A direct pecuniary gain, therefore, results to the officers in the desertion of their men, for they receive a bounty of about $2 50 for every deserter; and the more cruel their discipline the greater will be the aggregate of their fees. Moreover, as no fires for cooking are allowed on board ships lying in the Liverpool docks, the crews must be boarded on shore, at the expense of the ship, so long as she remains in port. The owners, therefore, as well as the officers, make money out of these desertions, and are equally interested in any discipline at sea which will induce them! Is this the reason why the ship-owners of New-York still encourage the occupation of these villainous land-sharks? For, until their occupation is destroyed, the character of our seamen can never be improved; nor will there be any end to these barbarous cruelties upon the sea.

Trading in Gallantry.

There are few things for which the men of this country are more remarkable than their courtesy to women; and courtesy to women was certainly always looked upon as an abstraction, graceful, pleasant, invaluable, doing honor alike to the giver and receiver, but still an abstraction, till the railroad companies conceived the idea of treating it as a commodity, and trading in it. The "unbought grace of life," the "cheap defence of nations," which expires the moment that it is touched by aught that is mean or sordid, is looked upon by these redoubtable bodies as an incorporeal hereditament, capable of being bought and sold, leased or released, and, in short, trafficked in just as a house or a farm.

The Companies know perfectly that when they fill one of the Avenue cars with as many men as can find seats in it, they have no right whatever, either in law or morals, to put in one more. But they know also, that nine-tenths of these men, upon seeing women in a painful and embarrassing position, will relieve them from it at once by any reasonable sacrifice it may be in their power to make. They seize upon this generosity, at once, to speculate in it. They pick up as many ladies as offer themselves along the way, and place them standing, in a jolting conveyance, bolt upright, between two lines of strange gentlemen, and force them to pay five cents each for the chance of somebody giving his seat to them. Of all the forms of extortion known to modern trickery and chicane, this, we think, is about the meanest and most contemptible.

There has been a good deal of grumbling of late amongst the gentlemen at being expected to surrender their own accommodations to those of the fairer sex whom necessity drives into using the cars. The result has been, naturally enough, to render the ladies somewhat reluctant in accepting any politeness of this sort. No blame is to be imputed to either side. It is quite impossible to expect that matters could be otherwise. A monopoly of the principal means of locomotion along the great arteries of traffic has been granted to certain trading associations, upon condition that they supply sufficient comfortable accommodation for the public. They have deliberately broken through their agreement, provide half seats enough, and supply the other half of their passengers with liberty to swing by one arm from a leather strap overhead, in a pestiferous atmosphere, and packed as close together as sheep in a pen. They admit delicate women to their horrible dens, and extort payment from them for being allowed to trespass on the civility of strangers, to secure rest for their weary limbs. It is all nonsense to say that people need not go into cars already full unless they choose. This is not a question of buyer and seller in market overt. It is a question between contractor and employer. When the public agreed to allow no one else to use the rails, the Company agreed to find seats for all who traveled.

The abuse has been long carried on, and would always have been intolerable if we were not the most patient and long-suffering people in the world. It is in every way disgusting and disagreeable, injurious to the health, and offensive to the taste. One of the last things we should think of, would be to recommend anything that might seem churlish or discourteous, but we cannot avoid saying that when a railroad company makes five cents by every act of politeness which a man offers to a woman in a public conveyance, politeness becomes highly objectionable. It is now in our opinion, a grave question: Whether we do not owe it to public manners and decency to allow every lady who enters a car already full to stand until she reaches her destination? The sight of the misery and inconvenience thus occasioned may possibly rouse us into high-handed resistance to a nuisance which disgraces the City. We would also cordially recommend all patriotic individuals, who are allowed to enter a car in which there is no vacant seat, without receiving information from the conductor to that effect, to stop it, and get out again slowly. We must have some better means of moving from our place of business to our homes than suspension by a piece of leather from the roof of a long box charged with carbonic acid gas, and already nearly filled with human bodies in a state of powerful compression.

RETURNING TO DUST!—Our theory about street-sprinkling has broken down. We supposed that the shopkeepers on Broadway were anxious to sprinkle the streets, and were prevented only by the rule of the Croton Aqueduct Board, which forbids the use of Croton water for such a purpose until after the first of April. That eventful day came and the streets were sprinkled,—but no by the watering-carts. A providential shower suppressed the dust for a day.

But yesterday there was no rain, and the dust nuisance was worse than ever. Broadway was a perfect Sahara. Clouds of sand were swept along that great thoroughfare,—whirled in small spiral columns along the sidewalks, and whisked into every cranny and every drawer, of every shop upon the street.

On the whole we are inclined to think that the people of the City actually like the dust. If not, why don't they put it down? Why don't they sprinkle the streets? It must make the sugar weigh more,—and promote, in other unknown ways, the profits of trade,—else we are sure the nuisance would be abated.

COMPARATIVE STATISTICS.—Anything may be proved by statistics, and falsehoods may be manufactured to any extent out of facts. Even EBLING will prove by his figures that the streets have been regularly swept, and the department of which he is, unhappily, the chief, has been economically managed. The South Carolina papers are proving by the aid of the Census returns, that slave labor is more profitable than free labor. The process is very simple, and very satisfactory, to one side, at least. They simply take the agricultural products of Massachusetts and compare them with the agricultural products of South Carolina, and the result shows a difference of nearly ten millions in favor of slave labor. But then, Massachusetts is not an agricultural State, while South Carolina is nothing else. Rice and cotton, the two great staples of the Slave State, are not grown in this Free State at all. But this little circumstance is not taken into the estimate.

It must be confessed that some of our Northern papers have a similar method of proving the superiority of free labor to slave labor, by comparing the progress in population and wealth of some of the new Free States with the old Slave States. Thus, Virginia is compared with Ohio, one being an old State whose soil has been exhausted, while the other is in the first stage of development. The difficulty of these comparisons is, that the conditions of no two States are the same, and the arguments based upon statistical reports must necessarily be fallacious. But of all the arguments that have yet been put forth to prove the superiority of Slavery to Freedom we must give the palm to that of the Charleston Mercury for its absurdity, in instituting a comparison between Massachusetts and South Carolina.

What a very different result would be shown by taking the census returns of the manufactured products of the two States. In cotton and rice South Carolina is certainly ahead of Massachusetts, and the argument of statistics is decidedly in favor of Slave labor; but, in calico, sheetings and shoes, South Carolina is nowhere, and Massachusetts is a thousand miles ahead, while free labor has all the figures in its favor.

BRICK, MARBLE AND IRON.—The growth of New-York has borne a very close resemblance to the composite image seen by Nebuchadnezzar, with its feet of clay, legs of iron, and body of brass and gold. Twenty years ago the whole City was almost entirely built of clay, then came granite and free-stone, and now have followed marble and iron; we are not sure that in time the literal fulfillment of a head of gold will not follow. Such a consummation of splendor is not more improbable than the prophecy of iron would have been at the commencement of the present century.

We believe that the first attempt to use iron in the place of stone and brick for architectural purposes, was about twenty-five years ago, when some cast-iron arches and pilasters were used in a block of stores on the corner of Exchange-place and William-street. The experiment was not satisfactory, for when the buildings were burned down the iron pilasters and arches were replaced by granite pillars and lintels. Marble was equally rare as a building material, notwithstanding there were extensive quarries of it so near at hand as Westchester. But it was the fashion to build of granite, and great boulders of that gloomy stone were imported at enormous cost, from Maine and Massachusetts, to furnish the façades of our public and private edifices, while the elegant and beautiful marble of our own quarries was neglected. But the day of granite has passed and the era of marble and iron has come. The advantages of marble and its durability and light and cheerful color; while iron is recommended by its cheapness, the economy of space which it admits of, are the great facility of its use; while it can be made by paint to look as beautiful as the finest marble.

New-York has outgrown the period of clay, though its feet are literally in the mud, thanks to EBLING; but it is rapidly becoming a city of marble, iron, and plate-glass. When the present cobble-stone system shall be superceded by the iron pavement, and our nightmare of a Commissioner of Streets and Lamps shall have given place to a better man,—for we have not the least apprehension of having a worse one,—the Commercial Metropolis of the New World will be very nearly a fulfillment of the Vision of Nebuchanezzar.

THE ODDS OF THE HISPANO-MEXICAN WAR.—If Spain knew the value of peace and quietness there would be no war with Mexico. The project may imply nothing more than the defence of Cuba against Yankee fillibusterism. But it implies on the other hand the reëxcitement of the old cupidity, and the capital mask of a Mexican quarrel behind which the assailants may fight with effective security. To this latter contingency the Cubans themselves look eagerly. Letters from different quarters of the island exhibit a general expectancy of this, if of no more immediate result of the Spanish movement, and the usual unreliable willingness to aid when the opportunity may be offered. What troops will be enlisted; what flotillas equipped; what volumes of Mexican sympathy unbosomed, in every town, and seaport, and key of the Southern States; what privateers will put to sea from New-York, and New-Bedford, and Boston; what legions of Anglo-Saxon faces will scowl at the Spaniard when he encounters the Mexican columns on their own soil, are matters of easy prophecy, and almost of calculation. Besides them is the chronic inability of the Spanish Treasury to sustain any unusual military establishment; and the resulting certainty, that unless immediately successful, the enterprise will crumble to pieces of its own inherent weakness; and we have sound reasons for believing that Spain risks everything and can gain nothing by the war. Six months of active operations will decide the question.

THE LOCATION OF QUARANTINE.—We understand that a majority of the Commissioners appointed to select a new location for the Quarantine establishment, have recommended Prince's Bay on the South side of Staten Island, in the immediate vicinity of Seguin's Point. One of the members prefers the western extremity of Coney Island as being more convenient for vessels entering port. Governor KING is expected in town to-day to make personal inspection of the location selected, and if it is approved by him and the Lieutenant-Governor and Comptroller, their confirmation of the report of the Commissioners will be final.

As we stated yesterday, we are strongly inclined to favor this selection. It is not, however, entirely free from objections—the chief of which are its distance from the main channel to the City, the shoalness of the water in its vicinity, and the frequent occurrence of winds, which would render it difficult of access. If vessels could be examined at Coney Island, or elsewhere, upon their direct route to the City, and then only those which prove to be infected sent for quarantine to Prince's Bay, all interests would be properly consulted. The large vessels which come from European ports, and which are usually free from infectious diseases, would suffer no serious inconvenience, while the smaller craft from the West India and Southern ports, by which infectious fevers are usually imported, could be very well accommodated at the Prince's Bay location. As the whole arrangement is experimental, and, probably, temporary, it would be well to try, at the outset, some such compromise of interests as is here suggested.

LAMENTABLE IGNORANCE.—The Boston Atlas says: "At present such is our benighted state, if asked to name the persons of note who dwell in New-York, we should find it difficult to make a list that might not be reckoned on our fingers—and nine out of the ten would prove to be New-Englanders by birth. The three or four New-York authors who have any real reputation are from New-England,—the three or four New-York newspapers that are good for anything are edited by New-Englanders," &c. "As for persons of note in New-York, other than authors and editors, we know of none." Taking pity on the ignorance of our Boston cotemporary, we were going to make out a list of New-York notorieties, beginning alphabetically with BRANCH. But BRANCH, we remember, is a New-Englander, so we give up to Boston. WASHINGTON IRVING, and the rest of New-York nobodies, are hardly worth alluding to. The Atlas abuses Dr. HAWKS heartily under the impression that he is the pride and boast of New-York; but that eminent person happens to be a North-Carolinian. The Atlas ought to consult the pages of DUYCKINCK'S Cyclopedia of American Literature, and that useful little work entitled Men of the Time, to find out who is who. It labors under the amiable delusion now that Boston is the centre of the moral universe.

CUSTOM-HOUSE OFFICERS MEASURED BY A MEASURER.—A gentleman by the name of SOUTHWORTH, who recently held the office of measurer in the service of Uncle Sam, which he resigned from a conviction that the Custom-House "is a plague-spot to the City of New-York," says, in a letter to the Evening Post, that he "never could perceive why it was that any party, in its hour of success, deemed itself called upon to collect from the immediate, remote and questionable quarters of the Union, the very worst men to become the recipients of the spoils of victory." As Mr. SOUTHWORTH confesses that he was solicited to accept the promotion of a measurer on the incoming of General PIERCE, he must be allowed to speak from personal experience on the subject.

Concerts.

Mr. OLE BULL gives his third concert to-night at Dodworth's Saloon, assisted by Miss GILLES, Signor GIANNONI, Signor GASPARONI, Mr. G. W. MORGAN and Mr. FRANZ ROTH. It is the last but one of Mr. BULL'S farewell series.

Personal.

Rev. DANIEL WALDO, the venerable Chaplain of the House of Representatives, now 94 years old, has revisited his home in Connecticut. Last week he preached two sermons in Sharon, walked half a mile from the parsonage to the meeting-house, and went through the exercises without apparent fatigue. Mr. WALDO was a soldier in the Revolution, and once fell into the hands of that abominable set of fellows who were known as the "Cow-Boys."

Certainly no man was ever more badly pestered than Mr. BUCHANAN. The Washington Star of Wednesday says: "We presume that when the President caused the doors of his office to be thrown open to-day for the admission of the throng of gentlemen who were waiting to see him, at least one hundred entered the chamber."

There are now in Washington twenty great men from the State of Maine. Not a man of them weighs less than 200 pounds, and the biggest is up to 325. The average of the twenty is 234½ lbs. So says the Evening Star.

Rev. Mr. OUCKEN writes to the American Bible Union from London, acknowledging the receipt of funds from that Association, and states that the latest edition of five thousand copies of the School Bible is exhausted.

A new Phrenologist has made a public appearance in Connecticut, who claims to have examined the heads of WEBSTER, CLAY and THALBERG.

Obituary.

Hon. SAMSON W. HARRIS, of Alabama, a member of the House of Representatives during the late and two previous Congresses, died at his lodgings, on Pennsylvania-avenue, in Washington, yesterday morning, of inflammation of the throat and lungs. His family were with him at the time of his decease. Mr. HARRIS was a gentleman of fine abilities, highly esteemed and deservedly popular. He was about 45 years of age. His remains will be taken to Alabama, with an escort under Mr. GLOSSBRENNER, the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives.

The Trade Sale of Books.

The sale of invoices of books was commenced at the Publishers' Association Trade Sale, yesterday. The attendance was even larger than last year, and the bidding spirited and gratifying to sellers. At the lunch, so soon as the solids were settled, the health of the retiring member of the firm was drank. Mr. DELISSER replied, alluding to a rumor started by "an unscrupulous and malicious person," to the damage of his character. The company applauded the language, and a letter from the firm, giving assurances that Mr. D.'s retiring was from motives entirely personal as also most honorable. He gave, in conclusion, the health of the members remaining. Other remarks followed, all of a complimentary character to all concerned—and then the selling was resumed.

How to Avoid Quarantine.

One method of evading the Quarantine regulations during the prevalence of yellow fever, last Summer, was for the owners of vessels from the West Indies, and other Southern ports, to anticipate their arrival by orders sent out by our pilot boats, directing the captains to keep on to New-Haven, Bridgeport, or so forth. Upon the receipt of these orders they proceed to the place indicated, where the cargo of molasses or sugar is discharged, and the vessel comes directly to New-York, and the cargo follows in coastwise vessels in a few days.

CURIOUS.—The public house in Cambridge, Mass., formerly known as the Craigie House, but more latterly as the Lechmere, is now called, by common consent, the Pekin house.

Trial of Rev. Mr. Kalloch for Adultery.

BOSTON, Thursday, April 2.

The trial of Mr. KALLOCH was resumed in Cambridge this morning. The defendant occupied a seat beside his counsel. He exhibited a confident mien, and shook hands with many of his friends.

A plan of the room occupied by Mr. KALLOCH and his female companion at the Leehmere House was exhibited to the Jury. Three witnesses were then examined for the prosecution, but their testimony was merely relative to the defendant's presence at the Hotel, and in the Lecture Room, and threw no new light upon the criminal charge.

The Prosecuting-Attorney then inquired of defendant's counsel if they intended to hold him to prove that on the 5th of January last, Mr. KALLOCH was a married man, having a lawful wife other than the woman in his company at the Cragie House.

Mr. DANA for defendant, conceded the fact, remarking, "Mr. KALLOCH requests me to say, that he is proud to say that he is a married man, and that there is Mrs. KALLOCH;" also, "that she would be here after these foul and false datails are done with which are unfitting a lady to hear, and will be found sitting along side her husband."

The fact that the woman with Mr. KALLOCH on the night in question was not his wife, was also admitted. With the admission of these two facts the prosecution rested the case. About sixty witnesses were then sworn for the defence, mostly in regard to character. The driver of the carriage which conveyed the defendant and woman to the Hotel was examined as to time, &c.

Mrs. HARRIET HASTY, a visitor at defendant's house, testified that a woman, whom she did not know, arrived at the house on the afternoon of Jan. 5. Defendant was absent at the time, but came in shortly after the woman did. She left in a carriage with defendant, to attend the lecture. Understood her name to be SMITH.

Deacon MERRILL, of the Old Cambridge Baptist Church detailed the statements made by Mr. BAILEY, Landlord of the hotel, at an interview he had with him on the alleged criminality of Mr. KALLOCH. The witness acted as an agent of the Trustees of the Tremont Temple. The interview was to elicit facts. Mr. BAILEY required much urging to speak at all on the matter, and the statements he made did not so fully implicate Mr. KALLOCH as the testimony he (MERRILL) gave on the stand.

The Court adjourned without finishing with Deacon MERRILL.

Mrs. KALLOCH, a very handsome and lady-like person, was in the Court room a part of the afternoon, and occupied a seat near her husband.

STATE AFFAIRS.

Passage of the Police Bill—Emigration to Virginia—the Charter Bill—Passage of the Dred Scott Resolutions—Nomination for Superintendent of Public Instruction—The Marriage Bill, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

ALBANY, Thursday, April 2, 1857.

The Police bill, considered in Committee of the Whole on Monday night, and ordered to a third reading, came up for its final passage this morning. A few sections having been read, a motion was made to recommit, with instructions to strike out the countiee of Westchester and Richmond.

This was voted down, and then a motion was mad to strike ont the County of Kings. This was also voted down, and the bill being read through, was passed by the following vote:

AYES—Messrs. Abbott, Adams, Ames, H. Baker, Baldwin, Barbydt, Beckwith, Bell, Berry, Bishop, Brooks, Cady, Cameron, Carpenter, Clapp, Clark, Cox, Crowley, Dickinson, Foot, Gould, Granger, Hastings, Harpending, Hawes, Hogeboom, Hollis, Holstead, Hutchinson, Ingraham, Irving, B. R. Johnson, Ketcham, King, Lacey, Leavenworth, Lewis, Littlefield, Loveland, Lacker, McPherson, Meade, S. J. Mott, B Owen, J. J. Owen, Paul, Peacock, Peck, Pomeroy, Preodergast, Puffer, Purdy, Rawson, Rees, Richmond, Rhoades, Roberts, Schutt, Sherman, S. Smith, W. M. Smith, Somerville, Speaker, Squire, Staples, Strait, Tallett, Thatcher, Tiffany, Tift, Van Allen, Van Vaulkenburgh, Varnum, Wakeman, Wooster—75.

NAYS—Messrs. Allen, Boies, Bonck, Campbell, Claton, Crowe, Dimmick, J. D. Dixon, Evers, Funk, Glover, Grant, Hantord, Jones, Kivlen, McFarlan, Merserean, Mooney, G. Mott, Mulligan, Jas. J Reilly, John J. Reilly, Roe, Scott, Sluyter, Stickney, Sutherland, Thompson, F. Townsend, Westervelt, Whiting, Woods—32.

The special reading of bills is still in order in the Assembly, and will probably continue to be until tomorrow evening, by which time it is presumed the stock on hand will be exhausted.

The only bill of note passed, beside the charter bill, was that incorporating the Emigrant Aid Society, intended to operate in the purchase and sale of Virginia land, and under the operation of which, it is anticipated, that Slavery will gradually be ousted out in the Old Dominion.

It is worthy of mention that Messrs. ALLEN, BONCK, BRADFORD, (a native of Virginia,) CROWE, DIMMICK, J. D. DIXON, FUNK, GLOVER, MULLIGAN, JOHN J. REILLY, SLUYTER, SUTHERLAND, WESTERVELT and WOODS, all members of the Democratic Party, voted in the affirmative on this bill.

The Senate held no session last evening, the Senators desiring to attend the Governor's weekly levee, which was not held in consequence of the death of one of the nephews of the Governor.

The Charter bill was reported to the Senate this morning, materially amended. Whether these amendments are judicious appears to very doubtful. At this period of the session, unless they are essentially necessary to perfect the measure, it seems hardly advisable to send the bill back to the Assembly, endangering its passage by delay.

The Dred Scott resolutions were discussed at much length in the Senate—almost entirely by the opponents of the propositions embodied in the resolutions. Mr. BROOKS had the pleasure of endeavoring to place the Republicans in a false position by offering amendments, which, it was very evident, did not hardly receive his own sanction, and for the passage of which I hardly think he would have willingly voted.

The caucus for the nomination of candidates to be supported by the Republicans for Superintendent of Public Instruction, and also for Regent of the University, takes place this evening. For the former place, I have the names of but two persons mentioned, Mr. H. H. VAN DYCK and Mr. V. M. RICE, the present incumbent. For the latter place, until to day, the known aspirants were only Messrs. TOWNSEND and LINCKLAEN. To day, I hear the name of Mr. MOSES H. GRINNELL, as one that will likely be presented to the caucus.

Mr. VARNUM's bill to make certain the marriage record, has been substituted in the Assembly, in place of the Senate bill. The bill has, however, been much simplified in the Committee, and the details more readily adapted to secure the practical objects of the bill. Few who have written on this subject, appear to comprehend that by existing statutes clergymen are required to make all the inquiries which the bill before the Assembly call for—the only difference being that now they have no power to administer oaths, which power is now conferred by this bill. The other feature, that of requiring a register of marriages, is already in force in the City of New-York. This it is proposed to extend over the State at large. This, it seems to me is very desirable, if far no other object but to secure evidence of marriage, in settling and arranging estates, dower rights, &c., A publication is required,—after the marriage, it is true,—but this will prevent a long concealment of marriages, which frequently causes unpleasant results and litigation. Had this law been in existence, and strictly enforced, there would not now be any doubt as to whether Dr. BUEDELL was married to Mrs. CUNNINGHAM. The requirement of a license, previous to marriage, which the Clergy propose, finds little favor in the Legislature. It is onerous to people in the country,—easily evaded—and imposes responsibility on officials which would generally be better assumed by clergymen. This is, in a measure, obviated by the requirement that parties shall sign their names in the registry before marriage.

It looks now as though the New-York appointments might be sent up to the Senate next week. In the meantime there are said to be several gentleman in town who, it is supposed, are slightly interested.

There is a long array of the merchant princes stretching through the dining-room of Congress Hall to-day. Some are here to attack and some to defend Trinity, and come to urge the importance of the passage of the bill defining the water-line of the Harbor of New York. I think the two last "somes" will be successful—at least they should. LEO.

NEW-YORK LEGISLATURE.

SENATE....ALBANY, Thursday, April 2.

The concurrent resolutions with regard to the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court in the case of DRED SCOTT were then called up.

Mr. BROOKS opposed the preamble on the ground that there was no proof of its charges, but expressed himself willing to vote for the resolution directing the appointment of a Committee.

Mr. VAN DYCK was then declared unanimously nominated.

Dr. PARSA, of Utica, was nominated for Regent of the University.

Suicide of a New-York Clerk at Philadelphia.

From the Philadelphia Journal, Thursday.

A passenger upon the 11 o'clock train of cars from New-York, on the Philadelphia and Trenton Railroad yesterday, caused much trouble to those having charge and to his fellow-passengers. From the time of leaving New-York his conduct was most strange, and when near Cornwall Station, he suddenly attempted to throw himself from the car window, but was unsuccessful.

Upon reaching the steamboat on the Delaware he was closely watched, but seemed quiet. When three miles above this city, however, he sprang to the side of the boat, (the Trenton,) and seizing the railing attempted to jump overboard. Again he was arrested by the bystanders and his suicidal design prevented. On his arrival in Philadelphia the individual expressed his intention of proceeding to a city hotel. He was undoubtedly insane, proclaimed himself from the South, was a good looking man and well dressed.

At a late hour last evening, a man committed suicide at the Girard House. In this city, and every circumstance points out the individual as being the same one who made the attempts upon the ears and boat. The circumstances of the consummation are as follows:

After a large portion of the guests had retired to rest, some of the servants of the establishment heard a noise in the room occupied by J. ALFRED HALSEY, a young man who had shortly before retired, after having spent the evening with some friends. They entered the apartment and found HALSEY in a dying condition, while a bottle, labeled strychnine, was on a table near by. He had swallowed a large dose, and did not long survive.

The deceased was somewhat over 30 years of age, and arrived in this city, from New-York, yesterday. There can exist no doubt but that he is the same one whose career on the trip we have traced as so singular. In New-York he was in the employ of Messrs. BROWN & Co., Cortlandt-street, as clerk. His parents reside in Petersburg, Va., his father being a wholesale clothier in that place.

The Washington Epidemic.

From the Lancaster Express.

From all the symptoms of the case, in connection with other facts, we have no doubt that the disease which led to Mr. LANE's death had its origin in the "National epidemic," and that was the effect of poison. On this point the Philadelphia Times says an eminent physician of that city, who has had several persons under his care, seeking relief from the effects of the mysterious sickness contracted at the Federal Capital, maintains the theory that it resulted from a premeditated attempt to poison the inmates of the National Hotel. He bases his opinion upon the fact that none but those who dined at the public table were attacked; and, as to the story of the rat-poisoned water it is refuted, because the tank is only used for washing, while the drinking water is brought through pipes from a distance. The sickness originally broke out during Mr. BUCHANAN's first visit to the hotel; it ceased when he left for Wheatland, and upon his return, after a fortnight's absence, it became again more violent than ever. The President elect was warned, by anonymous letters, not to eat or drink in that house, and under the advice of friends, although he returned to the hotel from a feeling of regard for its worthy proprietors, he never broke bread nor emptied a glass in it, until he took up his residence in the Presidential mansion. Occasional visitors, who did not board there, but used the bar, were not afflicted, while nearly all the occupants of the dining-room were more or less prostrated. It is a revolting idea that such depravity could find a place in a human breast as thus to imperil life, without regard to who would be the victims; but the medical gentleman who has laid down this theory has examined the whole ouoject most carefully, and his deduction seems almost irresistible.

A BRUTAL AFFAIR.—An Italian, named JOHN CANNON, was charged at the Police Court, yesterday, with having abused his wife. The testimony showed that the woman had been confined only three days, when CANNON came home drunk. He went to his whisky jar for more liquor, when he discovered the contents had been spilled by the children. He furiously laid the blame of the occurrence on his wife, and seizing a club, attempted to strike her as she lay in bed. She managed to escape to a neighbor's, but he followed and beat her there with the club. He was fined $50, and sent to the dungeon for ten days on bread and water.—Cincinnati Commercial.

RATS, ROACHES, BUGS, &c.
NEW-YORK, April 12, 1856.—Mr. HENRY R. COSTAR, No. 388 Broadway—Dear Sir: Having a great many rats around my stable and shop, I thought I would try your RAT EXTERMINATOR, and bought one of your boxes, and my man fixed it according to your directions. The next morning he found over 150 dead rats. I have bought others' rat poison, and found them humbugs, and take pleasure in pronouncing them no humbug, and that it will do more than you say it will in your advertisements. I have also tried it on steamboats, and satisfied them that it is the greatest thing of the age. Respectfully yours, &c.

NEW-YORK CITY.

The Old Brick Church.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

How old, if you please, Sir, is the "Old Brick Church?" HILL.

The following inscription on a black slab over the front door answers HILL's question.

A
Erected
In the year of our Lord
1767.

Rev. Dr. ROGERS was the first pastor of the Church. The petition of the Presbyterian churchmen, says Valentine's Manual, for a grant of the angular piece of ground, to the northeastward of the vineyard and opposite the old windmill spot, was allowed, and a perpetual lease given at $40 per annum, in 1766. Upon this ground the Brick Church in Beekman-street was erected. Mr. BEEKMAN's farm was in this neighborhood, and his orchard adjoined the Swamp, over which Ferry-street now passes. The Brick Church, in the Revolution, was first used as a prison; but soon it and other churches were converted into hospitals. At the Peace, in 1783, there was no Presbyterian Church fit to preach in, so that Dr. ROGERS delivered his famous Thanksgiving sermon in St. Paul's Chapel.

The fine old steeple was very nearly 200 feet high. At the time of the fire, which went by the name of "the Great Fire," until the terrible conflagration of 1835 earned that name, (may it keep it for a century,) a sailor made himself immortal—all but his name—by climbing to the top of the Brick Church steeple, and, in some bold way now forgotten, doing noble service in aid of the firemen.

The following notice appeared in both the New-York Mercury and the New-York Gazette of Jan. 4, 1768; if any of our readers took those papers at that time, they have forgotten it, and so will pardon its republication:

"On Friday last, being the first Day of this Year, the Presbyterians of this city, in Communion with the established Church of SCOTLAND, opened their BRICK CHURCH, lately erected on the GRASS: The Rev. Mr. ROGERS conducted the Worship, and preached from these Words of the prophet Haggai: "I will fill this house with my Glory, saith the Lord of Hosts." There was a very crowded Audience: and by the Solemnity of the Occasion, and the Address of the Preacher, the whole Assembly seemed to be impressed with a mixture of Seriousness, Gratitude, and Joy, more easily conceived than expressed, and highly becoming the Dedication of a House to the Worship of Almighty God.

Divine service is constantly performed there, as in the Old Church: and all that incline to take Pews in the Brick Church, are desired to attend there at Ten o'clock this morning."

The Central Park Fund Stock.

The shares of the Central Park Fund Stock were awarded yesterday at the Comptroller's office. The following are the parties to whom the awards were made.

	Shares.
Bowery Savings Bank	6,200	$620,000
Thomas Mallett, Jr.	600	60,000
Ward & Co. for Gonzalo Alfonzo, of Havana	400	40,000
Ochricha & Co.	350	35,000
Edwin Martin	100	10,000
Thomas S. Gibbs	60	6,000
Wm. C. Bowere	50	5,000
H. & W. F. Meyer	50	5,000
Patrick Brophy	40	4,000
Sundry persons	15	15,000
Total	8,000	800,000

The above were all the shares announced as issued. Bids were received, however, covering a much larger amount of stock. The majority of the shares awarded were taken at par, though for some as high as one per cent. The stock will be issued as soon as the parties to whom the same has been awarded have deposited with the City Chamberlain the amounts of their respective awards. The sock is $100 a share, and the City pays six per cent. interest thereon, payable quarterly. The principal is redeemable Aug. 1, 1867.

Dust and no Cretes.

ESLING—for that the contractors can make so little impression as yet on the streets with their best efforts, is his fault—would hardly sleep well nights if he could enjoy a realizing vision of the thousands of throats to which, with his Barcan dust, he has given the bronchitis since the second morning of April came blowing in. One, two, three years hence the consumptives will be coughing their lives away whose ruin was breathed in with yesterday's dust. Whatever man has a wife, and that wife went well dressed into Broadway yesterday, is ESLING's creditor by scores of dollars' worth of good clothes ruined. Whoever has a pair of eyes, and exposed them anywhere in town yesterday, was very much the worse for ESLING's existence. But ours are a forgiving people, and they will turn joyfully away from ESLING's sins, seeing that the rankest of them were committed now more than a week ago, and seek earnestly to knew whose fault it was that Broadway wasn't sprinkled yesterday. If there is any Croton left in your old pipes, let us see it used on Broadway. Lay the dust, save our clothes, which come next to our families in our affections, and give peace to our pumice-polished eyes.

How to Relieve Broadway.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

DEAR SIR: The great necessity which exists for some speedy and effectual means of relief to Broadway has drawn forth many suggestions, but the most practical, which has as yet come under my eye, is that of the extension of Centre-street to the junction of the Third and Fourth avenues. The great arguments in favor of this project are, first the cheapness, it only requiring two blocks to be cut through; and, second, that it would afford the most direct route to those persons living in the vicinity of Lexington and the Fourth avenues to their places of business below Chambers-street and east of Broadway. It will be seen by a reference to the map that Centre-street is but a continuation of Nassau, and that at its proposed termination, near Astor-place, is concentrated all the travel of the Third, Fourth, Madison and Lexington avenues. Should this street be opened and the railroad removed, it would immediately become one of the most important thoroughfares of the City. As it is now, terminating nowhere, it seems to be of but little use, except for the accommodation of the Harlem Railroad, which could be just as well accommodated elsewhere.

TUESDAY, March 31, 1857. MERCHANT,

Accommodation for Staten Islanders.

The People's Steam Ferry bill which has passed the Assembly, and is now before the Senate, obliges the Company that it chartere to run their boats from 6 A. M. to 10 P. M. The present monopoly avoids all danger of night-collisions by laying up at dark,—which may be very safe, but it is, also, very annoying to Staten Islanders who do not like to go to bed at 7 o'clock, nor to wait until near noon, before they get to town in the morning. With Quarantine removed, and a rival ferry line, Staten Island will loom up, as a Summer home.

Attempt at Suicide.

A woman named MARGARET WARK was found lying insensible on the sidewalk in Sixth-avenue, about 4 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon. She was taken to a drug store near by, when it was ascertained that she had taken laudanum for the purpose of destroying herself, because, as she said, her husband had ill treated her. A Ninth-Ward policeman conveyed her to the New-York Hospital. She will recover.

Marine Hospital Physician.

Dr. DANIEL G. RISELL, the new physician to the Marine Hospital, in place of Dr. HARRIS, has been looking up his new charge during the past week. He assumes the command on the 1st of May. He intends making no change in his staff of assistants, unless experience with them shall show the necessity of removals.

☞ Within one hour last evening, twelve bills and $36 of counterfeit money were tendered by strangers at our business-office counter, showing pretty clearly that there is a good deal of bogus money about. A word to the wise, &c.

☞ There is a revival progressing in Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER's Church, and several persons have been hopefully converted. Prayer meetings are held at about 8½ o'clock every morning in the Lecture Room, which are quite largely attended.

☞ One of the Wall-street ferry boats ran into a lighter yesterday, and ripped up her planking badly. To the passengers it looked as if the lightermen were alone to blame.

☞ Surprise prayer-meetings are in vogue in parts of Maine this Spring.

☞ A man named JOHN BARNEY committed suicide about 9 o'clock last evening, at No. 302 West Twenty-sixth-street, by cutting his throat with a razor.

The Uses of Iron in War.

At the regular meeting of the Geographical and Statistical Society, at the chapel of the University, last night,—Rev. Dr. HAWKS, the President, in the Chair,—a letter was read by the Secretary from the father of the late Dr. KANE, thanking the Society for the resolutions which they passed at a recent meeting, eulogizing his character and deploring his decease. The Secretary passed the letter to the Reporters for publication, but Dr. HAWKS immediately interposed, and desired that it should not be printed.

ABRAM S. HEWITT, Esq., was then introduced to the meeting, and read an interesting paper on "The Uses of Iron in War." Nations, he observed, would go to war while humanity was constituted as it is. For this inevitable disposition to fight there must be some philosophical reason. Theologists, statesmen, poets, had each their theory on the matter, but the fact was incontrovertible. TENNYSON was the latest bard who had disputed the blessings of peace, and sung in praise of war. Mr. HEWITT quoted some stanzas from "Maud," in illustration, and said that undoubtedly the dream of universal and perpetual peace was a delusion. BONAPARTE almost created Europe anew, and the student of History must admit that the results of his battles were cheap indeed, even when the immense loss of life was taken into consideration. War was a contingency for which every nation must provide, and the best security for peace was due preparation for hostilities, but in order to be well prepared we must determine on what principle war should be carried on. The cardinal principle in warfare was destruction, and the utmost skill should be used in bringing the appliances of destruction speedily and directly to bear. To be able to destroy required men and tools, the same as to construct. The invention of gunpowder marked one of the epochs of the world, and the man who first made cannon was one of the heroes of history. The superior weight of their cannon had already given Americans what advantages they had gained in war, and it should now be decided upon by the Government, and those who had control of such matters, that cannon should be made so large that no resistance could be offered. 125,000 tons of iron were in use, in cannon, carriages, and balls, in the last battle that decided the fate of Sebastopol,—a quantity of iron, that if made into rails, would create a railroad from New York to the Pacific. It was often not the valor of men, so much as the material they used, that decided the greatest battles. Steam and lightning were victors in the Crimean conflict, and not France or England.

Iron, the lecturer contended, was now the chief agent to be employed in war. Guns of the largest calibre, and the largest steamships to transport them, and the men to use them. In connection with this part of his subject he gave a description of the leviathan British steamship, the Great Eastern, 690 feet long, and 83 feet wide. The Astor House, St. Nicholas, Metropolitan, Lafarge, Everett House, and Union and Clarendon Hotels, might be dropped comfortably into her. Her paddle-wheels were 56 feet in diameter. He alluded to the vessel because he wished to convince the meeting that modern warfare rested on the possession of adequate resources for the manufacture of iron, and the means of applying it. Ten years ago—such was the condition of the iron trade—the United States could not have succeeded in a great war, and if the blows recently aimed at the iron interest were successful we should still be in second-rate power.

The lecturer's theory was, that the science of modern warfare should be reduced to the exertion of mechanical force, with proper skill to apply it—that "in time of peace we should prepare for war;" that military schools should be warmly supported, and that Government should proceed rapidly with our seacoast defences. It was an interesting lecture, and well received.

Coroner's Inquest.

DEATH FROM SUFFOCATION AND BURNS.

The Jury impanneled to investigate the cause of death of Mrs. ANN PETERSON, who came to her death on Monday night, at No. 23½ Monroe-street, rendered a verdict of "Death by suffocation and severe burns, accidentally received; and the Jury further believe the fire to have been caused by carelessly leaving a candle in the room at No. 23½ Monroe-street."

Mrs PETERSON was 30 years of age, and a native of the United States. It is supposed that she was under the influence of intoxicating liquor when the fire occurred. The husband of deceased, and other parties, who were arrested on suspicion of setting fire to the premises, have been released from arrest.

TO THE CITIZENS OF NEW-YORK:
London Cordial Gin,
Medicated Schnapps,
London Club-House Gin,
Schiedam Schnapps.
CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.

After several years experimenting in the manufacture of gin, I fortunately succeeded, in the year 1843, in making a discovery in its manufacture by which it was deprived of its acrid and inflammatory properties, and rendered perfectly pure.

My manufactory is at Schiedam, Holland. After several months reflection what title to give it, I introduced it to the American public under the title of "WOLFE'S SCHIEDAM AROMATIC SCHNAPPS." Schiedam is the name of the place in Holland where the gin is manufactured; "aromatic" derives its name from the Italian juniper berry with which it is flavored, and the word "Schnapps" is the German for drink—cogne dram—Wolfe's Schiedam aromatic drink. No sooner had my schnapps been introduced to the American public, and received with approbation, than the liquor-mixers of New-York, Boston, and Philadelphia started in pursuit, with their mixed and poisonous stuff, under various names—Schoidam gin, Scheidam schnapps, London Club house gin, London cordial gin, medicated schnapps, &c.—and in several instances my labels have been so perfectly imitated, with only the addition of a few letters to plead a technical avoidance of the law, and so carefully prepared, as to impose on careless purchasers. I understand a large quantity has been purchased by the merchants of the Southern and Western States, on account of the cheapness of the article. A merchant who participates indirectly in the fraud, by selling the spurious article, is as much an offender as the principal who planned the imposition.

I hope every respectable citizen who values the health of the community in which he lives, will aid me in ferreting out and exposing the unscrupulous merchant who, for the sake of a few cents, will put in jeopardy the lives of the community in which he lives. Such men should be nailed to the pillory of popular execration.

LONG ISLAND.

Fire in Brooklyn.

At a late hour on Wednesday night a fire broke out in a large three-story frame building, at the corner of Myrtle and Franklin avenues, which was entirely consumed. The building was owned by ISRAEL COLYER, and in part occupied by him as a dwelling. The first floor was divided into two stores—one occupied by KIRK WHITE as a saddlery, and the other by WM. JULIAN, tailor. Mr. COLYER's loss is $5,000—not insured. Mr. BRIDE's loss is $300—insured. Mr. JULIAN saved most of his property.

The fire was first discovered in Mr. BRIDE's store. The wind was blowing strongly from the north, and for an hour it was very much feared that the whole block would be burned down. There was some difficulty in getting water, but when it was obtained the firemen worked nobly, and by a providential change of wind kept even the adjoining stable from catching.

The Late Sheriff Ryerson.

The funeral of the late Sheriff RYERSON took place yesterday afternoon from his late residence at the County Jail, Raymond-street, Brooklyn.

At 2 o'clock P. M. an address was made by Rev. Mr. PERRY, of the Fleet-street M. E. Church, which he concluded with prayer. The body was then placed in a hearse and followed to the Evergreen Cemetery by some seventy-five carriages. The attendance at the funeral was quite large.

EXPLICIT.—At the last meeting of the Board of Superintendents of the Poor in Kings County a resolution was adopted declaring that an application to them for an increase of salary, unless they agree to it, should be considered as a resignation upon the part of the applicant, and that the Board proceed at once to fill the vacancy.

MARINE MATTERS.

Missing Vessel.

The ship Helena, Captain JOHN THOMPSON, sailed from Swatow, China, on the 27th of August last, for Havana, with Coolies, and no tidings have since been received of her. The Helena was built in New-York in 1841 for the Messrs. GRISWOLD, and was sold three years since to Captain THOMPSON, who was a principal owner; she was 598 tons burden, rated A 2, and was valued at $20,000, and was insured in this City. Captain THOMPSON was one of the earliest Jersey pilots, and has a large family living in this City. His two sons were with him as first and second mates, and upon sailing from China the first mate took charge as Captain.

The bark reported ashore at Coney Island proves to be the E. A. Kinsman, CHASE, outward bound—not ashore, but lying in seven fathoms water. There are also reported ashore four schooners and one sloop on the bay shore, Jersey coast; a schooner and a sloop on Sandy Hook, and a sloop in the Horseshoe. No names or particulars.

The screw steamer City of Baltimore, Captain LEACH, left at 9 o'clock, yesterday morning, for Liverpool, with 81 cabin and 64 steerage passengers.

THE ISAAC NEWTON STILL HANGS.—Captain J. S. BISHOP, from the derrick, says that the position of that vessel has not altered since she sank. The two boilers have been taken off, and are now on the derrick, and the intention is to soon raise her just as she is. There was a report circulated yesterday that her dome, valued at $10,000, had been carried off, and that she had sunk ten feet since Saturday. We are assured that the report is entirely false, as the dome was carefully examined yesterday by Captain BISHOP, who says that not even the paint is cracked. Her height is forty feet, eighteen of which are in the water. The first cabins are uninjured, not a drop of water having entered them. Captain B. says that after the Isaac Newton has been raised, the Buffalo can be raised very easily.

About 5½ o'clock yesterday morning, the steamboat Buffalo (engaged by the owners of the Newton, to assist in raising her) sank. She had a deck load of casks. She was observed to be leaking the night previous, and being probably neglected, heeled, taking water into her ports. The load of casks assisted to heel her over, and she sank, and now lies at the bottom of the river, near the Newton.

The United States sloop-of-war St. Mary's, THEODORE BAILEY, Commander, was at San Juan del Sur about the 18th instant.

The ship Samuel Russell sails to-day for China. She has had her lower masts shortened, and has been thoroughly overhauled, recaulked and coppered.

The pilot boat Nettle, No. 20, spoke brig Winona, from Aux Cayes for Boston, 16 days out, March 28, lat. 39° 16', lon. 73°, having on board the crew of brig Wm. T. Dugan, lost at Sandy Key.

Also, bark Ariel, CHEESEMAN, hence for Port au Prince, March 27.

A Man in the Rapids of Niagara—A Fearful Predicament—His Rescue.

The story of JOSEPH AVERY, the unfortunate man who lived for a day clinging to a rock in the rapids above the American Fall at Niagara, will not soon be forgotten; and an occurrence of very similar character happened on Tuesday last. A man named E. C. TAYLOR, a resident of West Winfield, Herkimer County, (a guest at the Ladow House,) descended the bank of the River, near the Suspension Bridge, probably for the purpose of viewing the Bridge from below. On reaching the bottom, he slipped, and fell into the water, just above the bridge, and when discovered was thirty or forty rods below the bridge, near the shore, rolling over and over, borne along by the resistless current, until he caught hold of a large rock, and after some hard struggles succeeded in reaching the top. The alarm was immediately given in the neighborhood, and it was soon decided there was no way of reaching him but by means of a rope ladder. This was immediately procured, and after much hesitation, delay, and altercation, occasioned by the difficulty of determining where to place it, inasmuch as the man could not be seen from the projecting bank over his head, it was lowered to the distance of perhaps a hundred feet and became entangled among the rocks and trees.

It was at once decided that some one must go down to disentangle it. In a few moments, WILLARD B. CONDEN, porter of the Ladow Hotel, volunteered his services, and descended to the place where the ladder was attached to the trees. He needed assistance, and soon two more brave men, ANTHONY SANEY and [illegible] and 86¼ was paid, buyer 60 days, 70¾ cash. Under the Discount Brokers there is agood inquiry for strictly first-class paper at 8 to 9 P cent. 60 days to 4 months. The fair or second grade names take a wider range, 10 to 14 P cent. The reports this week are more favorable in regard to collections from the northwest. Foreign Exchange quiet—108¾@108¾ on London, 5.23¾@5.22½ on Paris. The steamer on Saturday is the Arago, for Southampton and Havre.

The Great Western Railway of Illinois, yesterday, failed to make due provision for the April coupon on their first mortgage loan. The concern has its chief proprietary in this City, mostly wealthy capitalists. It has not yet been made a productive property, being but recently finished to its Eastern connections. For several years the large yearly interest has been cared for by the New-York owners—Mr. MORRIS KETCHUM, the first Treasurer, who negotiated this loan of a million of dollars, being of the number. Yesterday a notice was posted to the effect that Mr. KETCHUM having declined to join the other parties in providing the means, the Coupons could not at present be paid.

Mr. HENRY MEIGS, Jr., yesterday retired from the Cashiership of the Metropolitan Bank. As previously announced, he goes into the Street in the Stock and Exchange business, with Mr. WM. ALEXANDER SMITH, an old member of the Board of Brokers. The firm is H. MEIGS, Jr., & SMITH, No. 39 William-street. The clerks in the Bank presented Mr. MEIGS, on his retirement, a handsome silver pitcher, with a suitable inscription, and accompanied by a correspondence warmly expressive of reciprocal esteem and confidence. A similar mark of respect has been shown by the officers and clerks in the Bank to Mr. JAMES MCCALL, the President, who retires on the first Monday in April—Monday next.

The balances subject to draft in the various depositories of the United States Treasury at the close of March amounted to $24,722,821.

The North River Insurance Company has declared a half yearly dividend of 10 P cent.

The Illinois Central office has issued official notice of the intended increase of the capital stock of which mention has been made heretofore, and the details are given as to the manner of carrying the design into execution. The books of the Company will be closed on the 20th of June next, and reopen on the 1st of July. One-third the apportionment of new shares is to be paid for at the rate of 30 P cent. on 1st of July. Optional rights will issue for another third for the 1st of February, 1858; and for the remaining third for 1st of July, 1858. These rights convertible at any intermediate time into stock, on the payment of the 30 P cent.

The Southern Railroads, in the direction of New-Orleans are steadily progressing, relying chiefly on local aid to construct them, and there only remains unfinished of the several roads leading from New-York to Memphis, Tenn., forty miles, which is expected to be completed next November, and within a year from this time there will be under one hundred miles of unfinished road to prevent the completion of the entire line of direct railroad to New-Orleans. But few of our citizens are aware of this fact, and we think but little is hazarded in predicting, that short of three years hence, the trip between New-York and New-Orleans will be performed within three days.

The Sub-Treasury received to-day $186,961; paid $173,206, and held at the close $15,530,073.

BALTIMORE, Tuesday, March 31, 1857.

During the past month the market has exhibited continued firmness, with occasional intervals of activity. The demand from the trade especially was very fair until the 20th inst., since when there is not much doing. Operations are somewhat restricted by the unyielding pretensions of holders, who evince much confidence in the certain stability of prices. The late advices from Rio as well as from Europe are considered quite favorable, and calculated to strengthen their views. A large proportion of the late receipts has been stored, and the stock on hand is almost entirely in first hands. Twenty three hundred bags received per bark Hazall, were reshipped to a Southern port. Our statement presents a full report of sales, embracing more particularly cargoes or invoices in the order of time, which affords a more correct idea of the recent transactions, and the general character of the market. We quote prime Rio at 11¼c.@11¾c.; good, 11c.@11¼c.; fair, 10¾c.@11c.; Laguayra, 12¾c.@13c.; Java, 17½c.

The City Article of the Times, dated Saturday evening, March 14th, says: "In the Stock Exchange to-day the rate for short loans on Government Securities was 5¾@6 P cent. In the discount market and at the Bank there was a very heavy general demand, and it is again becoming evident that when the dividends fall due, a large proportion of them will have to be carried back to the Bank in repayment for advances."

The same authority under date Monday evening, says: "The English Funds continue to show extreme dullness, the uninterrupted drain of gold checking all disposition towards improvement. Consols for money to-day again opened at 93¼@¾, and declined in the afternoon to 92@¾, from which there was no recovery. For the Account the last price was 93¼@¾." The final prices of the French Three Per Cents on the Paris Bourse, this evening, were 71f. for money,

THE NEWS FROM NICARAGUA.

Modification of Previous Accounts.

Statements of Men Recently from Gen. Walker's Army.

Why He Left Rivas and Why He Returned.

CONDITION OF COL. LOCKRIDGE'S FORCE.

The Position of Affairs on the 19th.

We publish below some additional information concerning the positions and movements of General WALKER at Rivas, Col. LOCKRIDGE on the San Juan, and the Allies throughout Nicaragua and Costa Rica. The greater portion of all that appeared in the newspapers yesterday had an air of insincerity about it that few readers interested in the subject could have failed to detect. Since then we have received correspondence and statements sufficient to fill many of our columns. But as it consists mainly of recapitulations of former proceedings, accounts of which have long since been published in detail in the TIMES, and opinions that have no reliable foundations, we have chosen to publish in continuation any such information as comes from those who have knowledge of what has been done, and have the least personal interest in the result of the present war in Nicaragua. It was published generally yesterday morning, that on the 16th of March, Gen. WALKER'S army was in good health and spirits, and that he went out and attacked San Jorge. That after driving the enemy and gaining the Plaza, he burned a part of the town most important to the Allies, when he learned that about 1,200 of the enemy, under Gen. CHAMORRO, had marched by another road with the intention of attacking Rivas. That he returned and met them at the forks of three roads, in full retreat from before the guns of General HENNINGSEN. That the Allies were so situated that they could not get away, and that he fell upon them and slaughtered them in great numbers. General WALKER estimated their loss at 600 killed and 500 wound. From the reading one would naturally infer that General WALKER had left Rivas for the purpose of gaining a victory. Messrs. EDWARD CARTER, DAVID WILLIAMS and MICHAEL RILEY'S account to the Wilmington Journal, gives a different impression. They left San Juan on the 19th of April in the schooner R. Brooks, Capt. ROBERTS, bound to New York. But the schooner put into Cape Fear on the 31st, in a leaking condition. The Texas left San Juan a day later, but the above-named gentlemen have personal knowledge of matters at Rivas and the movements of General WALKER as late as the rumors received from other sources. They were with his army. They say that on the 14th of April, although successful in repelling the attacks made upon them, the already feeble ranks of WALKER'S army were rapidly becoming thinned and the physical energies of the men sinking under fatigues and privations, unrelieved by rest or refreshment; and it was felt that this state of things could not much longer continue. To add to the difficulties of their position, their ammunition began to fail, It was finally determined to retreat from a position no longer tenable, and endeavor to reach the port of San Juan del Sur, on the Pacific, by way of Rosario. During the night of the 16th WALKER, with the main body, now reduced to some three hundred effective men, boldly pressed forward in that direction. Either by accident or design, simultaneously with the evacuation of Rivas by WALKER, and the entrance of the allies, that city was found to be on fire in a great many places. The chief point, however, from which the conflagration spread was a narrow calle, or street, leading into the main plaza, or public square. The houses, composed of a sort of frame-work of reeds, thinly daubed over with a species of mud, and covered with thatched roofs, dried to tinder by a climate in which rain is almost unknown, burnt with great rapidity, and large bodies of the assailants, becoming involved in the narrow and tortuous streets, stifled with smoke and enveloped in flames, lost their way, and numbers perished. It is probable that this circumstance favored WALKER'S bold movement. At any rate, his march to Rosario was unmolested. He had before taken the precaution to send his sick and wounded to that place in advance. The gentlemen named, with some others, in the melée and confusion became separated from the main body, and, instead of making their way to Rosario and thence to the Pacific coast, started for San Jorge, distant some four miles, and thence along the lake shore, about fifteen miles, to Virgin Bay, where they seized upon a boat and passed over to San Carlos, the outlet of the San Juan River, on the southeastern extremity of the lake. From this point they made their way, partly on foot and partly by canoe on the river, to the Atlantic.

After these men left, we have nothing but rumor for what occurred. Nevertheless, we have the statement that before firing at Rivas, WALKER returned and with Gen. HENNINGSEN succeeded in preventing the allies from occupying the point he had just left. But even if that were the case, he could not have reoccupied it under circumstances more favorable than existed when he thought it necessary to leave it, if we except the temporary effect of succeeding in driving back the allies might have upon his remaining force. The rumored arrest of Gen. CANAS may have some foundation in fact; but the statement that President RIVAS had been assassinated requires confirmation. Other additional particulars are given as follows:

The Reinforcements to Col. Lockridge.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The reinforcements received by LOCKRIDGE on the San Juan, consisted of 250 Texian Riflemen; they were chiefly from Western Texas, a section of the State famous for its unerring marksmen, and belligerent backwoodsmen. They were received by the citizens of Galveston the latter part of February, with approbation, and in one day $500 in cash was raised, and contributed to their treasurer, to aid them to reach LOCKRIDGE. They were thoroughly disciplined, and in short were the élite of the forces that served under HOUSTON against Mexico. The recent splendid successes of Generals WALKER and HENNINGSEN, combined with the reinforcement above alluded to, will have the effect of a corresponding effort on the part of LOCKRIDGE, to push his base of operations beyond the river, so as to place his forces in the rear of the Allies, and should the Costa Ricans attempt to retreat, they would meet with a very hot reception; but even should they succeed in reaching their own country, the expedition that is to sail from New-Orleans in a few days, (composed of at least 500 men,) will meet them at their own hearth stones, and they will be easily disposed of. If the defection of CANAS is such as has been reported, it will prove, to say the least, very dangerous to the further advance of the Allies, and the death of RIVAS, if true, will cause quite as much commotion among the allied forces, and may perhaps lead to a serious ruptu re between them.

But this is idle speculation on a theme prolific of many theories, which may or may not prove true. I have only to say that, if WALKER and HENNINGSEN on the one hand, and LOCKRIDGE and ANDERSON on the other, cannot hold their own positions in Central America, all the world beside cannot do it.

The famous Knight of the Quill, who had the arrogance (peculiar to his nature) to style himself "The Voice of Nicaragua," the minion of GOICOURIA, the confidential book-keeper of VANDERBILT, the attaché of M. O. ROBERTS, has retired from his proper vocation, and immortalized himself as a fit companion for SPENCER, and in a manner achieved a notoriety, more unenviable perhaps, than that of BENEDICT ARNOLD, and if he lives to see future years, when WALKER, victorious over all his foes, succeeds in his honorable intentions, if "The Voice of Nicaragua" should fall into his hands, he would be treated with the distinction his honor merits.

AN OFFICER OF NICARAGUA.

Journal and Views of Captain Brontley, of the Nicaraguan Army.

Captain BRONTLEY, one of the passengers arrived by the Texas, who was with Colonel LOCKRIDGE and Colonel TITUS on the San Juan River, has written a journal, giving a minute detail of the engagements, labors and troubles of the Walker force stationed on the San Juan, from the time of his arrival at Grey town, on the 4th of February last, till his departure from Nicaragua, on the 20th ult. The journal contains no news, however, and is not worth publishing entire.

Captain BRONTLEY went with Colonel TITUS and 200 men from New-Orleans on the 20th of last January. He was second in command to the Colonel, and had charge of the "Alabama Rifles." At Fort Anderson, twenty-five miles up the river, they met Colonel LOCKRIDGE, with a force of 250 men. The two forces united here, and proceeded up the river. The facts given in the journal of the advance up the river, the engagements at different points with the enemy, &c., corroborate the statements heretofore published in the TIMES. The Captain closes his journal with an account of the attack on Castillo, and the final retreat therefrom of Colonel TITUS, and the disgust of himself and nearly all the other commissioned officers in consequence. The want of forethought on the part of Col. TITUS, and his consequent unfitness for his position, he illustrates by relating the following incident connected with the attack on Castillo: The force under Col. TITUS was making its way as stealthily as they could through the plantains, trying to keep their approach concealed from the enemy till they got opposite the fort, and everything in readiness for a surprise charge. As they got opposite the fort, Col. TITUS saw a big bull at a short distance. Regarding it as a prize too valuable to let get out of their way, he ordered two or three men to fire their pieces. The bull was killed, but the result of the firing was to alarm the garrison, and give time to prepare to resist the attack.

In conversation with our reporter, Captain BRONTLEY discoursed freely upon the present aspect of matters in Nicaragua, and gave his views of the leading causes that have combined to bring about the present state of things. General WALKER he declares to be in a bad fix—a fix which it will be impossible for him to get out of otherwise than by taking the back track and beating a retreat from the country. The prime cause bringing him into this fix he attributes to the inefficient character of his leading officers. Col. LOCKRIDGE, he says, is a robust six-footer, brawny-complexioned, with bent shoulders and an intelligent eye, but possessing no elements of a good commander. He put him down as possessing neither decision, firmness, nor tact. He says that with a force of 5,000 men he never could make his way to General WALKER.

The personnel of Col. TITUS the captain describes as being unusually imposing. He weighs 220 pounds and is finely proportioned. For mental calibre, however, he says, he has not two well-defined ideas in his head. His chief characteristics he defines as want of courage, an immense brag and a selfish tyrant. He thinks it would have been infinitely better for his reputation had he rested on his Kansas laurels, and never ventured to Nicaragua.

Next to the misfortune of inefficient leading officers, a great drawback to the success of Gen. WALKER is stated by the captain as being the almost universal intemperate character of his subordinates in command. He never saw so much drunkenness—it was terrible. Nearly all the men were drunkards and gutter-birds. As for Gen. WALKER himself, the captain entertains the highest respect—he regards him as the great man of the age—the second NAPOLEON. In his view he could not hold on much longer however—he was so completely hemmed in by the enemy that he must retreat. The next steamer he believes would bring news of his withdrawal from the country, although his present force, including the men with Col. LOCKRIDGE, counted 700 fighting men.

A Fillibuster View of the San Juan River.

Yesterday, at the St. Charles saloon, the aspect of things was quite Nicaraguan. There were present Colonels GEORGE B. HALL and ALEXANDER JONES, Captain FARNUM and others, all in brilliant military raiment, together with ALEXANDER C. LAWRENCE, APPLETON OAKSMITH, and several more of the distinguished among WALKER'S sympathizers, seemingly in most hopeful spirits. From a conversation with some of WALKER'S friends, fresh from Col. LOCKRIDGE'S party, we are able to state a few additional particulars of an interesting character.

Col. TITUS, according to our informants, is a man of unquestioned bravery, but destitute of some of the requisite qualifications of a military commander. At Castillo he committed a grave blunder, but it was an error of judgment rather than an instance of disaffection to the cause. When he first arrived in Nicaragua, he gave out that his sole object was to open the San Juan River, and that accomplished, he should return whence he came; that he was not desirous of obtaining any command, and would accept of none, but as a mere temporary necessity. He had urgent business in the States, whither he should proceed as soon as his special object was secured. But after his inglorious repulse at Castillo Rapids, he concluded that his services were required to convey important dispatches to Gen. WALKER, and he accordingly left San Juan ostensibly for that purpose. Col. TITUS is described as very much of a gentleman, and is the man to enforce respectful treatment from all. It was not till after his departure for Aspinwall that any reflections were openly cast on his qualifications and conduct. It was then said, also, that he was bound for San Francisco.

Our informants have a poorer opinion of Colonel LOCKRIDGE. They say he calls himself a Texan, but Colonel KINNEY, who hails from that section, don't know him as such, and is not willing to recognize him as a fellow citizen. He is a brawny six-footer, with an awkward stoop in the shoulders, and is horribly illiterate. He has had no military experience, and is regarded as altogether incompetent. He acts like an Irishman hired by the hour, and is good at carrying logs, or knocking down a refractory private. Colonel LOCKRIDGE secured his present position in this wise: When, on arriving at San Juan, he found the river in possession of the enemy, he assumed the command there, receiving and dispatching all communications from and to General WALKER. By coloring his own reports he has impressed the Commander-in-Chief with an undue confidence in his abilities, and so managed to exclude all his superiors in rank who chanced to join him. He now commands the forces on the San Juan, however, by verbal authority only from General WALKER.

WHEAT and Col. ANDERSON are credited with planning and carrying out the operations on the San Juan. Col. LOCKRIDGE is said to have a great affection for the river steamboats, and takes an intense delight in sailing up and down, especially when the foe is around. Thus, at the taking of Serapiqui, he occupied a safe position on the Rescue, and left the brunt of the battle to WHEAT and ANDERSON. Gen. HORNSBY, who recently arrived at Greytown with the recruits from New-Orleans, when he ascertained the state of things in regard to Col. LOCKRIDGE, determined to return forthwith. But happening to have two or three glasses of whisky down, at the moment his party were leaving on the steamer Scott to go up the river, he was induced to go along. These recruits, numbering 146, our informants say, were a fine looking body of men from the Texan frontiers, and all Americans but one. As compared with the general run of "emigrants" sent out from New-Orleans, New York and elsewhere, they were in every respect vastly superior.

Capt. FARNUM has explained to us an occurrence, said by some of the journals to come off at Greytown, in which he and Col. HALL were represented as taking a leading part—both, as alleged, being slightly inebriated. He states that as to Col. HALL, the charge is utterly false, as the Colonel was then on board Her Majesty's ship Cossack, and knew nothing of the fray till some time after. With reference to himself, he admits that he got into difficulty, though without his seeking, with some of the Costa Rican negroes of the town, and being "shoved" pretty hard, he let drive right and left, knocking one or two down, and being knocked down in turn. In the midst of the melée, Mr. MARTIN, the Mayor of Greytown "mixed in" with a view to quell the row, and was unceremoniously kicked in the bowels, and afterwards knocked down by the Captain, who failed at the moment to discern his official character. The Captain says he battled with the crowd from 1 o'clock P. M. to 5, and believes he whipped them all out. As to the charge of being "tight," he alleges that he was sober enough to attend a fandango this same night, and take down the whole party in the fancy dances.

The steamer J. N. Scott, our informants further state, had been repaired at Punta Arenas, and placed in excellent condition. She was drawn up on the ways entirely out of water, and had a new bottom put in and her machinery overhauled. At the latest advices she had just left Greytown with the new recruits. At the time of her seizure by Colonel LOCKRIDGE'S force, she was fastened to the bank of the river, and two or three men swam across and cut her from her moorings.

While drifting down she was fired at by the enemy, two shots passing through her wheel-house. But subsequently, while being towed down the river by the Rescue, she grounded on a rock, and was not got off till three days after. One of the sections of her hull was torn off, and other parts injured, but this was afterwards repaired, as stated. The Fillibusters now have two steamboats, the Scott and Rescue, in first-rate condition, and amply sufficient for all purposes of present transit on the river.

OVERTURES FROM CANAS CONFIRMED—GEN. CHILLON'S PARTIALITY FOR WALKER.

[TELEGRAPHIC.]

WASHINGTON, Friday, April 3.

There is no doubt of the truth of the report brought by the steamer Texas, which arrived at New York last evening, that General CANAS had made overtures to General WALKER, as such action was before indicated by a letter by a previous mail, from Minister of Hacienda at Nicaragua—though the nature of the overturee is not known.

General CHILLON has always been friendly to Gen. WALKER, and only awaited a proper opportunity to take sides with him. The reinforcement that joined Col. LOCKRIDGE consisted of two hundred and twenty Texans. The above is on the authority of private advices.

The Rescue of the Crew of the British Bark Tasso—The Dred Scott Decisions—The Chinese Question—Appointments—Location of Indian Scrip, &c.

WASHINGTON, Friday, April 3.

The Union of this morning publishes the correspondence between Lords NAPIER and CLARENDON and Secretary CASS, relative to the rescue of a greater part of the crew of the British bark Tasso, which was wrecked at Barnegat, by the crew of the American life boat. Mr. FOWLER, the Acting Vice-Consul at New-York, has been instructed to convey to the widow of JOHN JONES, one of the American boatmen who perished, a donation of £50 as a mark of the sympathy of the British Government.

A subscription has also resulted in the collection of a sum sufficient to purchase a house and farm for Mrs. JONAS. Mr. FOWLER is also making inquiries respecting the relatives of JOHN PARKER and another boatman, who lost their lives at the time, and in reference to the rest of the boatmen who shared their danger, Lord CLARENDON has instructed Lord NAPIER to express in the warmest terms the thanks of the British Government for the timely assistance rendered, and their admiration of the courage and devotion of the American boatmen. Gen. CASS, in a letter to Lord NAPIER, says:

"It is always a source of gratification to this Government when citizens of the United States are instrumental in rescuing individuals, especially citizens or subjects of foreign countries, from the perils of the sea, and the manifestation of sympathy and gratitude on the part of Her Majesty's Government in this instance, is justly appreciated by the President."

The Intelligencer this morning publishes a card from Mr. HOWARD, the Reporter of the Supreme Court, stating that a volume containing the decisions in the Dred Scott case will be published in three weeks.

The following appointments have been made: George R. Berrell, Appraiser of Merchandise, of Philadelphia, vice Gideon G. Westcott, appointed Postmaster; Moses Bates, Jr., Collector of Plymouth, Mass., vice Edward P. Little, whose commission has expired; Amos Robbins, Collector of Perth Amboy, New-Jersey, vice Francis W. Brinley, whose commission has expired; William S. Jackson, Collector of Vienna, Md., vice George A. Z. Smith, whose commission has expired; Lyndon Taylor, Surveyor of Pawcatuck, R. I., reappointed; Warren Hathaway, Postmaster of Eastport, Me., reappointed; Edgar Whiddon, Postmaster of Calais, Me., reappointed; Samuel Edwards, Postmaster of Belfast, Me., vice Joseph L. Norris, whose commission has expired.

The President has also appointed the following Collectors:

JACOB FRY, at Chicago, Ill., vice CONLEY, resigned; EDMUND WRIGHT, at Edenton, N. C., re-appointed; ROBERT PARKS, at Cuyahoga, Ohio; JOHN P. BALDWIN, at Key West; AUGUSTUS JENKINS, at Portsmouth, N. H., vice CLEMENT, whose commission has expired; JOSIAH G. HADLEY, is appointed Surveyor at Portsmouth, N. H., vice SHELDON, whose commission has expired; JESSE SHARP, of Wilmington, Del.; L. D. STARKE, Camden, N. C.; STEPHEN WILLETS, Little Egg Harbor, N. Y.; W. W. WOOD, Vicksburg, Miss.; MERITZ SCHAEFFER, Milwaukie, Wis.; W. S. BOWEN, Bridgeton, N. J.; THADEUS SANFORD, Mobile, Ala.

JAMES R. THOMPSON has been appointed Surveyor of Town Creek, Md.

CHARLES H. HEMPSTEAD has been appointed Director of the Mint of California in place of LOTT, removed.

Applications for Ronte Agencies and small Post Offices continue largely to increase. It has been determined, however, that no removal of the present incumbents shall take place excepting for cause.

It is not true that PETER G. WASHINGTON, ex-Assistant Secretary of the Treasury intends going into the banking business with ex-Secretary GUTHRIE at Louisville.

The removal of KENNAN, the Consul at Hong Kong, is conditional. Commissioner PARKER is instructed to carry it into effect if he shall ascertain the truth of the charge that KENNAN carried the American flag at the head of the forces in the attack on Canton.

The Administration have no intention to send a Minister Extraordinary to China, as was reported. Before Ex-Governor BIGLER of California was appointed Minister to Chili, he was offered but refused the office of Commissioner or Minister to China.

The Commissioner of the Land Office has issued a circular letter relative to the location of the Half-breed reserve or Sioux scrip, from which it appears that scrip has been prepared for six hundred and forty persons, under the act of Congress of July 17, 1854, assigning four hundred and eighty acres to each person. This scrip, as declared on its face, is locatable upon the following-described classes of land, namely: upon the Sioux Half-breed reservation, which is situated wholly in the two land districts of Red Wing and Faribault, in Minnesota; that portion of said reserve situated in townships 111 to 113, inclusive, ranges 160 to 150 West; that in the latter being in townships 108 to 111, ranges 90 to 150.

1. The scrip may be located by the half-breed upon any land within this reserve, upon which, at the date of the act of July 17, 1854, he was an actual bona fide settler.

2. Upon any land within said reservation, which, at the date of the said act, was not so occupied by a half-breed, or any other person who may have gone into the reservation under the authority of law.

This scrip is not transferable. The land selected in satisfaction of a certificate of scrip must be located in the name of the party in whose favor the scrip is issued, and the location may be made by him or her in person, or by his or her guardian or duly authorized agent. The Registrars and Receivers are interdicted from charging fees or commissions for their services in this matter.

From the records of the Pension Bureau it appears that the land warrants issued since the first law was passed will call for fifty-eight millions of acres. The acts passed since 1847 have granted more than fifty millions of this amount.

Our Foreign Relations—Negotiations Concerning China—Refusal to send a Special Minister—New-Granada.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, April 3, 1857.

China and Chinese affairs have engaged the attention of the Cabinet for three sittings, at the instance of the British Minister, and have finally reached a conclusion. In order that the position of the Government may be properly understood, it is as well to begin at the beginning. Shortly, before the late Administration went out of office, Count SARTIGES presented himself with a dispatch from the Minister of Foreign Affairs, asking the coöperation of the United States, in a course of policy marked out by France—(England has kept conveniently in the background,)—for extending commercial relations with China, and transferring diplomatic negotiations to Pekin, instead of transacting them through the subordinate Governorship at Canton. The interview rested upon verbal conference, and the argument employed was the ready acquiescence which France had given to the doctrine of maritime law, enunciated by the Administration. Besides, it was asserted, that the American Minister on his way to China, had assured the French and English Ministers of our support, and therefore it was claimed partially through that alleged committal. Another interview followed within a few days, and then Count SARTIGES was enlightened that no committal had been made by the American Minister—Mr. PARKER—as had been stated, and that the Government could not and would not abandon its principle of neutrality; that we had not cause of war with China, and would join in no aggression; and that if outrages were committed upon the American flag or upon American citizens, redress would be promptly and summarily taken, as it had been in a case which extorted apology after the punishment had been inflicted.

The case stood in this attitude until the arrival of Lord NAPIER. He presented his credentials in a speech, which went far out of the usual way, to conciliate opinion here, and, not content with that official declaration, he indulged in the most honied personal professions. He was willing to concede almost anything that was asked, and was, accordingly, gracious to everybody. In a little while he showed his hand, with an earnest request that the United States would throw the moral power of its weight into the scale, by joining England and France against China. After the arrival of the last steamer, those solicitations became more urgent, and the reason is palpable. Lord PALMERSTON assured the House of Commons that our Government had approved the conduct of the British authorities in China, and he more than intimated the opinion that it would coöperate in the policy intended to be prosecuted there.

As France and England had appointed special Ministers, Lord NAPIER saw that if the Administration would even go that length, without engaging in the hostile operations, PALMERSTON would have the benefit of a seeming coöperation to justify his assurance and to strengthen his position in the appeal made to the country on this question. Hence, his efforts were directed to that end especially, and it was in this connection the name of Governor WALKER became suggested by the interests here, which is ever industrious in presenting him for every available or advantageous position. What Lord NAPIER wanted, was a special minister, not caring a fig who received the appointment. It was the prestige of the act which his employers required, and not the man. All the stuff about WALKER'S chart of China policy is gammon, for he never submitted any such chart to the last Administration, when tendered the mission, as the records will show. He wanted a roving commission for Cochin-China, Japan, and all that part of the globe, and prepared himself for it by drawing the outfit to China, which was subsequently returned when the mission was declined, and Mr. LANE appointed in his stead.

After much deliberation in Cabinet, the President has at length determined to follow in the path of Mr. MARCY, by refusing to join the alliance, or in any way to compromise the neutrality of the United States. No Special Minister will be appointed, because in the opinion of the world such an act, conforming as it would to the course of France and England, would be regarded as practical, if not professed coöperation. Lord NAPIER is informed of the determination, and is less cheerful than he was a week ago. If the Allies want war in China, as they undoubtedly do, they must make it on their own hook. It is not improbable that the American Minister, Dr. PARKER, may suffer under the rule of rotation. He is old, given to fixed ideas, and though skilled in Chinese, is hardly thought up to our notions of progress, however he may be esteemed among the Celestials. The American merchants at Canton are divided in opinion as to which should be the policy of the Government, some inclining to the English view, but others of experience and sagacity strongly preferring an independent and neutral attitude as the most desirable in every aspect.

The official accounts from New-Granada are discouraging to the prospect of an accommodation through the mission of Mr. MORSE. And the premature publicity given to his instructions at Bogota will necessarily enlist an opposition that only sought the pretence which is now afforded. The abstract of the instructions, though condensed so as to exclude an intelligent comprehension of some parts of the complicated proportions, is yet correct in the general outline. There are a few points, however, which are not sufficiently disclosed, and the surreptitiously-obtained copy did not contain the consideration proposed by our Government for the Commissioners of New-Granada. Panama and Aspinwall, by the projet, are made free cities, following the idea of the Dallas-Clarendon treaty, in regard to San Juan. These cities divided the jurisdiction of a strip of territory to be acquired, between eighteen and twenty miles wide, along the line of the Railroad. The cities are required to furnish police force for the protection of the road, and in an emergency the United States Consuls may call out a force at the cost of the Railroad Company. The three small islands off Panama, belonging to the steamboat and railroad companies, and that of Taboga, nine miles distant, owned by private individuals, to be acquired for dépôts or other purposes, and the absolute sovereignty vested in the United States. All the rights and advantages now held by New-Granada over the railroad, by grant, charter or otherwise, to be transferred to the United States, with power to renew or extend the same.

For the attainment of these objects, Mr. MORSE was authorized to offer about two millions of dollars, from which the just claims for losses at Panama were to be deducted. In case the islands were not acquired, then the offer was to be reduced, and so, also, in the event of other branches of the proposition being modified. Mr. MORSE was instructed to get a categorical reply to his overtures, but at the same time not to abandon the effort of an accommodation, until he had exhausted every honorable means and persuasion. Failing, he was directed to return promptly and report to the President. The resident minister, Mr. BOWLIN, was associated with him in the negotiation, but with no instruction to close the mission, in the event of failure. There is no alternate left for the President, if Mr. MORSE should demand his passports, but to lay the subject before Congress, with a recommendation to exact the redress that has been denied after a calm appeal to reason and justice. He must either take this course, or ignoring the whole proceedings of his predecessor, put the Government in an embarrassing attitude, besides rendering it powerless to demand reparation when outrage may be inflicted hereafter.

OBSERVER.

Trial of Rev. Mr. Kallock for Adultery.

BOSTON, Friday, April 3.

Voluminous testimony was taken in the Kallock case to-day. Much of it went to impeach the testimony of the principal Government witnesses, and to sustain Mr. KALLOCK'S general reputation for chastity.

It was certified to that Mr. BAILEY, the landlord, had said, describing the scene in the private room, "If I could have had my own way, I would have rushed into the room, caught them, and taken him (KALLOCK) down fifteen hundred dollars."

It was also sworn to that Mr. GIDDINGS, the fare-taker, had said, "Now they have said so much, I would rather have my right hand cut off than not have Mr. KALLOCK convicted."

Dr. THOMAS FRYE, of Compton, Me., for the defence, under cross-examination, said he had heard reports against defendant's chastity while a pastor in Rockland, Me.

One or two other witnesses testified to similar reports, but said the reports were not generally believed.

The trial progresses slowly, and the squabbling among the lawyers being mostly over, and the filthiest part of the testimony having been given, the Court room is less crowded and the public interest has subsided somewhat.

A Policeman Shot in Newburg.

At an early hour on Wednesday evening great excitement was created in Newburg by the report that Officer CLARK had been shot by a negro named JOHN WHITTINGTON. Sheriff EDWARDS had a warrant for the negro for dispossessing and maltreating a woman, and Officer CLARK was assisting in making the arrest. As the officers opened the door, the negro blew out the light and presented himself at the head of the stairs with a gun. After a few words had passed between them, the negro fired, the whole charge of shot taking effect in CLARK'S face. CLARK was at once taken to the residence of Mr. SHAW, and physicians sent for. One side of his face was completely riddled with shot, and the [illegible] badly burned. When Mr. CLARK had been carried off, the Sheriff rallied a posse, but sought in vain for the negro. Not less than a hundred men were in the search during the night. A reward of $10 was offered for his arrest, but he has since given himself up. WHITTINGTON is a bad character. Mr. CLARK is suffering severely. His face is terribly swollen. It is impossible yet to form any opinion as to the result of his injuries.

FROM KANSAS.

The Free-State Sentiment—Emigration.

Correspondence of the Missouri Democrat.

LECOMPTON, K. T., Friday, March 20, 1857.

There is little stir in Lecompton just now. The excitement of business and town property speculation, so much felt at other points in the Territory, is little felt here. But few emigrants have arrived here yet. All the troops have gone to the Fort, except a few dragoons, and it is reported that they are to be detailed on other service. Some of them have been employed during the past week with a Deputy United States Marshal in trying to arrest some Free-State men. There were no prisoners here when Governor GEARY left. The Courts will not be held in this part of the Territory for some time. In two or three weeks the Spring Courts will begin in the Northern District. A great deal of excitement exists about the collection of the taxes. A large amount has been collected in some localities; in others, the tax gatherers have been warned to leave. A difficulty occurred on the opposite side of the river, some miles above this. The Assessor and Sheriff of Calhoun County have seized a lot of saw logs belonging to some Free-State men for non-payment of taxes. They were removed before the owner was able to prevent it, and it is rumored that a fight will be the consequence, if the logs are not given up.

WOODSON is acting Governor. A great deal of pretended mystery is thrown around this departure of Gov. GEARY. The other officers in charge give no satisfactory explanation. It is current in town that he has resigned. The chief topic is, who shall be his successor? A great many different persons are spoken of for that office. The Pro-Slavery men are confident that the next Governor will be more favorable to them. Gov. GEARY'S health has suffered greatly. He had a hemorrhage of the lungs before he left Lecompton. We had a rumor here last night that he had died at Jefferson City. No one here supposes that he will ever be back—even if alive. Some say that he was to be removed, and that RICHARDSON, of Illinois, was to take his place. Mr. HALL, of Missouri, and others, are still talked of.

The chief topic of excitement now is the Delaware lands. They have not been declared open yet. There is a great deal of trickery in the management of all these lands. The officers play into the hands of parties, while the authorities are well aware of their attempts to seize such lands. They declare to all peaceable men who inquire about them, that no one must go on them.

Emigration is pouring into the Territory very rapidly. Every day brings a boat load of passengers up the river. A week ago there was a heavy run of ice, and boats on the Missouri were much delayed. The rivers are now clear. Kansas River has been falling rapidly. It is still in boating condition. Should the usual Spring rains come they will keep it up.

Business is brisk throughout the Territory. Great speculation in town lots is going on. Some of this perhaps the most of it, is sound, and the towns will continue to increase in value. In some other cases, the towns are made for speculation.

THE POSITION TAKEN BY THE FREE-STATE MEN.

The Pro-Slavery men are dissatisfied with the position taken by the Free-State men in Topeka, in the late Convention. They call it rebellious and treasonable. They had desired that the Free-State men should have voted, as they expected, to aid of important votes, to out vote them. The position taken gives general satisfaction to the Free-State men. I send a portion of the remarks of two of the speakers before the Convention. They explain the reasons for their action. Mr. BLOOD said:

"As it has been said here that the cases of Michigan and Kansas were not analogous, I wish to state what I believe to be the historical facts in relation to the case of Michigan, as I believe the cases are parallel in most respects. Congress refused to pass an enabling act for Michigan; the people of Michigan adopted a constitution and organized a State Government and put it into operation, driving out or displacing the Territorial Government. The cases differ mainly in the fact that Michigan put her State

Speech of Senator Wadsworth in behalf of Trinity.

At the close of Mr. NOXON'S remarks, Mr. WADSWORTH said:

MR. CHAIRMAN:—I feel oppressed—deeply oppressed—by the fearful responsibility which in my judgment now weighs upon this Senate. The State is being tempted—the power of the State, by the bill before us, and still more by the substitute for that bill, is being invoked to perpetrate a crime, which, if perpetrated, will ring through the ears of Christendom; and I feel, in view of the importance of the action we are called upon to take, that it is my duty to warn the Senate, and to say, in the eloquent language of BURKE—

"Better is it to be alarmed from our slumber by the alarm of the fire bell, than to sleep on undisturbed, and perish by the flames in our beds."

There is a magnitude attached to this question, which, in my judgment, attaches to no other question on which we have been called upon to act; and I shall now proceed to submit to the Senate such moral considerations as force themselves upon my mind in connection with this important subject.

There are, as it seems to me, certain distinct crimes charged against Trinity by those who have arraigned her at the bar of the Senate. Her first crime is, that she is possessed of enormous wealth. What is that wealth, and how acquired? In 1696, when New-York was but a hamlet, when her high wall kept the savage out of the petty village, a little church was established—the foundation of Trinity was laid just within the walls, that the devotions of her congregation might be carried on in peace.

Where Trinity stands is her cemetery, also, where slumbers Alexander Hamilton; where rest the ashes of Lawrence, forever to be remembered for those memorable words—"Don't give up the ship!"

If we move a little further onward, we find that the British Crown owned a little farm—almost or quite out of the village then—called the King's Farm, which had the trifling rent attached of thirty colonial pounds a year. On the south end of this farm St. Paul's Church was built, and the remainder of the block constitutes her cemetery also.

In the process of time, a little out of the village, we find St. John's Church erected adjacent to the property known as St. John's Park.

These, gentlemen, together with the other portion of the King's farm, which blessed Queen ANNE bestowed upon her, constitute the whole of Trinity's possessions; and of these theu modest possessions, while not one rod of land has been added thereto, more than two-thirds have already been sold by this sordid corporation, for the benefit of the Christian world.

The second crime urged against Trinity is, that she will not sell or divide up these consecrated spots, so sacred in the memory of the church. It is, perhaps, the misfortune of the Episcopal Church, that something of the old Catholic faith attaches to her, and that she believes that ground once consecrated should remain consecrated forever.

Now, I claim that there are two parties who appear on the record against Trinity Church. The one, the speculative philosopher of Wall street, who regards Trinity spire, as it stands serenely looking down upon that scene of selfish and worldly strife, simply as an obstruction which prevents Albany-street from being run through to Broadway. Already, church after church has yielded to the greedy demands of commerce, and now Trinity, too, is pressed by commerce, no less than by the corporation of the City, to give way.

The other arraigner of Trinity, is that member of the Episcopal Church who, while not of Trinity, is yet ambitious to become possessor and ministrant of her offices, wealth and power. These two combined would pervert the properties of the church to purposes far other than the evangelizing or christianizing of the world.

Trinity resists them. She does not want money so much as to sell her dead ancestry. She will not part with the dust of Alexander Hamilton, though each infinite particle might yield its ruby. He who sleeps there, over whose grave the Father of his Country might well have wept, and above whose ashes the tramping of every busy generation is heard, though he shall hear them not any more for ever—should sleep as sacredly and undisturbed as the Duke of Wellington sleeps in St. Paul's churchyard—in the busy street in the very heart of the world's metropolis—in the appropriate spot selected responsively to the great public voice, which asked,

"Where shall we lay the man whose we deplore?
Where the thunder of those he wrought for,
But the feet of those he fought for,
And echo round his bones for evermore!"

Trinity resists them on this previous ground. This sordid corporation—this grasping vestry, will not take the tempting sum she has been offered by the Corporation of the City—two hundred thousand dollars—for this consecrated dust.

But let us pass on to St. Paul's Churchyard. What is Trinity's position there? About two acres of ground constitute the cemetery of this Church. There, too, slumber her dead—not so distinguished, perhaps, as our Hamilton and Lawrence—only a couple of Irishmen—Thomas Addis Emmet, and Montgomery, who fell at Quebec. Only a couple of Irishmen, although not altogether unknown to fame. Perhaps you may have heard of them, Mr. Chairman. Now, it is a short-sighted, unworthy policy on the part of this sordid Vestry, not to sell the dust of these two Irishmen for a million and a half of dollars. Yet Trinity does obstinately refuse to part with the sacred spot

"Where the forefathers of the hamlet sleep."

Where, besides the two Irishmen I have named, the dust of some ten thousand Americans is laid. And this constitutes Trinity's second crime. And the speculative philosophers of Wall-street desire to destroy this old-fashioned guardianship, because it believes that in protecting the ashes of its ancestry, it also protects and perpetuates their principles; and that should it part with those ashes, it would part with that which, however singular it may sound in the ears of the man of the world, is really worth more than money!

Again, we trace the work of the speculative philosopher, in the attempt to purchase St. John's Churchyard,—or I should say, St. John's Park. In the great mart of commerce there is one leafy spot where the ringing laughter and noisy gambols of childhood go on through the live-long day; where, through sequestered walks, the sober matron and the joyous maiden can find summer see, in the wide spread foliage above, the kindly beneficence of an over-ruling Providence, and in Winter, through the long, bare arms of the leafless trees, can gaze without obstruction, upward to the dwelling place of God.

A few speculators thought this a good spot for a Post-Office. They applied to the church to know on what terms it could be purchased. Trinity met them not to drive a bargain, but to drive them away from the speculation—and with that view asked for the property the four hundred thousand dollars of which we have heard so much. It was but a courteous method of discountenancing a selfish proposition.

I now come, Mr. Chairman, to the third crime charged against this Corporation. It is that she has rebuilt Trinity in a style which comports with her dignity and possessions, and preserves her other magnificent constructions, in a locality where, by the demolition of some thirty churches in the last half century, there would, without them, be almost a moral waste. Sir, it seemed fitting that Trinity, upon this exact spot, should rear aloft her spire, in such singular contrast with the scene below; where, while it rebukes Mammon in his temple, it also catches the eye of the emigrant as he crosses the Atlantic, and tells him that England's great and sainted Church, whose memories were with him when in tears he bade his native shores good night, exists and flourishes in the land which stands ready to receive him in its bosom and to offer him a happy and a prosperous home. Nor should we forget here, that that Church, through her appointed missionary, meets the wanderer as he leaves the ship, to throw around him her fostering care, and guide his footsteps through those perils and temptations which too surely beset the stranger in the land.

It is, then, a crime, that Trinity has rebuilt her Church? Sir, if there is one thing in the physical and moral world which more than others can remind us of the fact that the unsleeping eye of God is ever looking down upon man, it is Trinity, arising in her glory at the very head of busy, worldly, Wall-street. And such a monitor is needed there, where the moral disease of the City rages in all its virulence; where wealth is as rapidly and unscrupulously made, as in the Fifth-avenue, a second moral pest house, it is rapidly and unscrupulously expended. It is fitting that Trinity should stand where she does, a perpetual rebuke and warning to both. And there she will stand, despite the efforts of those who, as between two thieves, are endeavoring to crucify her.

We are told, too, Mr. Chairman, that this adornment of her sanctuaries is, on the part of Trinity, a wasteful expenditure of money. Is this a time for the great Protestant Episcopal Church to count the cost of her constructions, when the Papal Hierarchy, after covering one continent with her venerable cathedrals, through which, more perhaps than through any other cause, she has been enabled to control the faith of men and of nations, is at this hour, within the very sight of Trinity, laying the foundations of a monumental cathedral pile, whose vastness shall be without compare on the continent of America; whose architectural proportions shall embrace all the beauty and grandeur of ancient and of modern art; whose two stone towers shall each in their sublimity rise to a point 100 feet exceeding the highest pinnacle of Trinity? Is this a time, I say, for the Protestant Episcopal Church, reproached for the greatness of her possessions, to question the expenditure of the moderate considerations against which these railing accusations are brought? Is this a time, when the Church of Rome is thus concentrating and consolidating her power and influence, to say that the Protestant Episcopal Church shall not be permitted to lift up even one spire like Trinity?

In my opinion, if there ever was a time when the Protestant heart should rejoice over her one undivided church, it is now, when Baptists, and Presbyterians and Methodists are being rent asunder by the fanaticism of the day. It is now that she should feel proud and confident that she can stand aloof, with her thirty-one bishops still representing the unity of the Church as coextensive with the nation. I, who am no churchman, nor the son of a churchman; I, who have no interest in this matter beyond the moral advancement of the age, I rejoice to see the mighty bulwarks of this mighty Church so strong; and I believe that it would be a parricidal act if, by the illegal and unconstitutional provisions of this substitute and bill, we should disintegrate and dissipate the vast properties of this church, the only church that in the hour of trial could, from her extent, safely or successfully wrestle with the concentrated power of the Papal Hierarchy.

I deem it my duty to resist this bill further, because if its principle should be carried out and sustained by the judgment of the Courts, they would remove the last muniment of constitutional protection upon which rest the rights of individual property can safely re-

If there be one fundamental reform for which she especially deserves praise, it is that by which she seeks to secure a return to the practices of the mediæval ages; when, through costly structures, and beneath the influence of grand and solemn ceremonies, the mind of the poor and the uncultivated was, by the very attraction of these material forms, led insensibly upward to nature's God. If this be reprehensible, I would to God that the church with which I am connected, should she ever possess the ability, might be guilty of the same error. No, sir, I do not concede that the magnificence of the structure is at all in conflict with the simplicity or the sanctity of religious service; but I hold that it rather spreads a subdued and holy awe over religious worship.

Will it be pretended that the poor do not enter Trinity? That those who minister at her altars do not assiduously attend to their duties, year after year, and every day in the year? That the church is not ever open, that the minister of the church is not ever ready, alike at the baptism, the marriage and the funeral; at each stage of moral want, where religious warning or religious consolation is needed by an erring humanity; with the sick, the dying, and the dead?

Would the Senator invite us to a comparison, or I would rather say a contrast, with her up-town sister churches, or with Grace Church, who stands so conspicuously foremost in the present contest as the assailant of Trinity? Behold her, then, standing in her pride: the rich carriages, with their velvet cushions, driving in a long line to her doors; the coachman with his gloved hands reining in the valueble steede; the footman in his gaudy livery swinging back the door upon its silver hinges; the Christian lady, the humble communicant of Grace Church, with all the "wealth of Ormus and the farther Ind" upon her person, sweeping along the carpeted aisle, the rustling of her silk chiming with the operatic strains that burst upon the ear. See her sleek and pious pastor, as with complacent smile he receives the golden cup in return for the infant baptism before that altar, at which all mankind are invited to worship, "without money and without price." Mark the rich contribution that are realized at her communion service. See how wealth pours into her treasury, even at the last ministrations over the perfumed corpse that lies before her altar.

Oh, Grace Church is glorious in her riches, beyond compare; and she looks with contempt on Trinity and her humble congregation. She can close her doors six or more weeks in the year, that pastor and people may go forth into the country, and recruit themselves after their most exhausting and self-sacrificing spiritual labors. Sir, Trinity never closes her doors. She has her ministers at her altars, and her stated service every day in the year. She does not set aside the duties of religion that she may gratify luxurious ease. How, then, does she compare with Grace Church?

Mr. Chairman, while I am sensible that these comparisons in matters of religion are odious and reprehensible, I desire it to be understood that we have not invited them. Has not Trinity been attacked upon this floor? Has she not been brought here by an inquisition instituted first by the Senate, and followed only by petitions to save this investigation on its very threshold, from assuming its real character of a Star Chamber inquisition? Trinity is not the assailant in this case; but as the guardian of this sacred trust, she cannot permit herself to be disgraced and degraded as she would be should she submit in silence to the wrongs which are sought by this controversy, to be imposed upon her. She was long silent—she will be silent no longer. She was dragged, a reluctant and unoffending party, to the bar of the Senate; but when it is sought to place her in the position of a felon, it becomes her duty to resist.

Let us proceed, then, with our task. And first, since the pay of our clergy has been made the basis of complaint, let us look at the evidence and see if her accusers gain anything by the comparison. It appears from the testimony of Dr. Berrian, that her rector receives $3,500; that her five assistant ministers get $3,000; that her three other assistant ministers receive but $1,500 per annum; making in all for her nine officiating clergymen, the sum of $23,000; while the pay of the five up-town rectors who appear as parties in this controversy against Trinity, receive an average of $4,000 each, or $20,000 in the aggregate.

Next, as to the baptisms and confirmations. A comparison with the four churches of St. Mark's, St. George's, Ascension and Grace Church, for the year 1856, shows the following results:

Trinity Baptisms	433
Confirmations	176
St. Mark's Baptisms	21
Confirmations	2	99
St. George's Baptisms	36		23
Confirmations	42		27 } 70
Ascension Baptisms	42
Confirmations	20
Grace Church—not reported.
Confirmations	35
Excess of Trinity—Baptism, 334; Confirmations, 71.

The funerals at three of these churches compare as follows, for the year 1856:

At Trinity	129
At St. George's	6
At St. Mark's	20
At Ascension	12
	38
Excess of Trinity	91

These, Mr. Chairman, are the figures; and, if it was worth while to institute a comparison at all in matters of this kind, it was worth while to arrive at the facts now presented to the Senate. This, indeed, has become doubly necessary, since the Senator from the 22d has seen fit, in order to sustain his argument, to quote only such evidence as would seem to substantiate the positions he has taken, entirely ignoring all the proof by which those positions were substantially refuted.

Again, on the question whether Trinity is in reality the Church of the Poor, I desire to call the attention of the Senate to some facts set forth in the evidence.

[The Hon. Senator then adduced portions of the testimony of the Rector and of the Rev. Drs. HAIGHT and VINTON, Assistant Ministers, in which the provisions made for the welfare of the poorer classes are fully set forth.]

MARKET REPORTS.

Markets...Carefully reported for N. Y. Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, Friday, April 3, 1857—6 P. M.

ASHES—Are in fair request at full prices. Pearls, $7.37½@$7 43½; Pots, $7 62½@$7 68½, ₱ 100 lbs.

COFFEE—Rules dull and heavy. The trade buying sparingly, there is no demand from speculators. Java, 15c.@15¾c.; Laguayra, 11¾c.@12¾c.; Maracaibo, 11¾c.@12¾c.; Rio, 9¾c.@12c.; Jamaica, 11¾c.@11¾c.; and St. Domingo, 11¾c., ₱ lb.

FISH—Exhibit no important change.

FLOUR AND MEAL—The market for State and Western flour is pretty brisk, and prices favor factors, especially for desirable lots of medium and fancy brands. The available supply is less extensive and the pressure to sell less urgent. The reported transactions comprise about 10,500 bbls., viz., mainly at prices within the annexed range:

Ordinary State	$5 60@$5 70
Straight State	5 70@5 80
Favorite and Extra State	5 80@6 10
Common to Good Indiana and Upper Lake	5 70@5 90

Extra Indiana and Michigan	6 00@7 40
Extra Ohio	6 00@7 75
Fancy Genesee	6 00@6 20
Extra Genesee	6 75@8 25

Canadian is in more demand at rising prices. Superfine to extra is worth $6 05@$7 50 ₱ bbl.; 900 bbls. were disposed of within the range. Southern is in better request at advanced rates. The transactions since our last comprise about 2,800 bbls. inw Mixed to choice Extra, at $6 50@$8 75 ₱ bbl. Rye Flour is quiet, yet steady, at $3 40@$4 50 for Fine to Superfine, ₱ bbl. Corn Meal is in moderate supply and demand, at $3 15@$3 20 for Jersey, and $3 60@$3 65 for Brandywine, ₱ bbl. The latter brings $17@$17 25 in puncheons.

FRUIT—The supply is limited, as also is the demand. Prices are unaltered. A letter from Malaga, dated Jan. 31, says: "The Raisin crop has been very short—the last vintage being estimated at about 600,000 boxes Muscatels, while other descriptions show a still greater decrease, owing to a disease which has been very general. Prices have ruled very high, averaging $3 for R. M. and $2 25 for ordinary layers for the American market. London layers $3 to $4 ₱ box. Stocks at the end of the year about 30,000 boxes. Freights to the United States dull at 35 ₱ ton for freight."

GRAIN—Wheat is more inquired for, but there is some disagreement about prices, which impedes business. Sales have been reported of about 5,000 bushels, including ordinary Western Red, (Club,) at $1 35; fair Southern White, at $1 56; and good Southern Red, at $1 45 ₱ bushel. Rye is in demand, and is now held at 86c.@90c. ₱ bushel. Barley is worth $1 60@$1 75, for inferior to prime, in lots, ₱ bushel, being very scarce and in demand. Corn continues in good demand, at rising prices. The supply is decreasing. HAY—There were 950 bales River sold at 70c.@80c. for shipment, and 80c @95c. for local use, ₱ 100 lbs.

HIDES—Are less active, and less firm, though not quotably cheaper.

Eighteenth Night of THE ELVES; Or, THE STATUE BRIDE, produced with new scenery, costumes, properties and mechanical effects.
LEGEND.—The mountain forests of Pastoria are inhabited, it is said, by Pixies, Sprites and Elves, who, like the Phantom Dancers of Germany, delight to entrap travelers into their realms and torment them with their mischievous antics. Having the power of transferring the spirit, they often, in their malicious gambols, give life to the newly dead. Statues, rocks and trees are seen fantastically moving in the forest, but it is only during the day they retain their fictitious existence; at the approach of night they resume their immobility.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The additional news from Nicaragua, or rather accounts of what has recently occurred there, from other sources, modify many of the statements received from interested parties and published yesterday. It seems that in consequence of sickness, desertions and other enfeebling causes, Gen. WALKER had determined to leave Rivas and attempt to reach San Juan del Sur, from which he might easily leave the country. With this intention he on the 16th of April took with him the principal portion of his remaining force, leaving a small portion under Gen. HENNINGSEN, to hold it, in case he was obliged to fall back. When at San Jorge, he heard the Allies at Rivas, and, returning, succeeded in preventing them from occupying it. His position, there, however, is no better than when he deemed it necessary to leave it. From Col. LOCKRIDGE'S party on the San Juan del Norte, there is nothing in addition to what was published in the TIMES yesterday morning.

By telegraph from New-Orleans, we have later news from Mexico. The Government is represented to be in very straightened circumstances—having been forced to suspend payment at the Custom-houses of Vera Cruz and the City of Mexico. The new Constitution was promulgated on the 11th of March. Nothing had yet been heard at the capital of the rejection of the Forsyth Treaties. Relations with Great Britain coutinne in an unsettled state, and it is reported that the inevitable SANTA ANA has numerous emissaries in the country.

The steamship Cahawba, from New-Orleans and Havana, arrived last night, having left the latter port on the 29th of March. She brings no news of importance.

The steamship Asia is now in her fourteenth day out from Liverpool, due at this port. She had not been signaled off Sandy Hook at 10 o'clock last night.

Secretary COBB has written a letter to a Government official in reference to the duties of office-holders. He declares that political associations cannot be permitted to interfere with the discharge of public duties, and that no party should press its claims upon the attention of Government employes. The person to whom the letter is addressed, is not named, but Mr. COBB apprises him that he cannot sanction his absence for the purpose of an active engagement in the approaching election of his State.

Lord NAPIER has sent to Mr. CASS a letter from the Earl of CLARENDON, conveying a tribute to the heroism and humanity of the two surfmen, JOHN JONES and JOHN PARKER, who lost their lives in their efforts to rescue the crew of the British bark Tasso, of Newfoundland, which was wrecked near Barnegat on the 20th of last December, and also announcing a pecuniary donation of £50 to the widow of Mr. JONES.

In the State Senate yesterday, a report was received from the Harbor Commissioners, stating that their expenses up to the 12th of March, were $49,747 06, and that the estimated additional expense, not provided for, was $37,340. The sum of $50,000 has already been appropriated, and $35,087 06 yet remain to be appropriated. The Port Wardens' bill, and the bill to consolidate New-York and Brooklyn, were made the special order for Tuesday evening. In the Assembly, the bill providing for the purchase of the Crystal Palace was reported favorably, and the Hudson River Improvement bill was passed. Proceedings were interrupted by the announcement of the death of Mr. BABCOCK, of Oneida.

A meeting of colored people was held, on Thursday evening, in Philadelphia, the object being, as announced in the call, "To consider the atrocious decision of the Supreme Court in the Dred Scott case, and other outrages to which the colored people are subjected under the Constitution of the United States." Various speeches were made, and a series of resolutions were adopted in furtherance of the objects of the meeting.

A policeman named CLARK was shot by a negro named WHITTINGTON, in Newburg, on Wednesday evening, while attempting to arrest him in company with the Sheriff. CLARK received a full charge of shot in his face, and his recovery is doubtful. The negro surrendered himself after a reward had been offered for his arrest.

On Wednesday of last week a destructive fire occurred at Jacksonsport, Ark., the loss resulting from which is estimated at $200,000. Out of the whole business portion of the town, only a drug store and a hotel were saved.

The Land Warrants issued since the first law was passed will, it is stated, call for fifty-eight millions of acres.

Mr. H. D. RICE, Superintendent of the Erie Railroad Express, died very suddenly on Thursday, at the residence of THOMAS A. MURPHY, No. 102 East Thirty-third-street. A post mortem examination of the body was made; all the organs were found in a healthy condition, and the medical examiners were unable to agree as to the cause of death. The Jury rendered a verdict of "Death from syncope." Mr. RICE was a well-known citizen. He was 49 years of age, and a native of Massachusetts.

A man named CHAS. WILLIS or WILLISTON, was found dead in his bed at the Rainbow Hotel, in Beekman-street, on Thursday afternoon. He was a stranger to the place, and had applied for and obtained lodgings the night previous. He was an American, and appeared to be about 27 years of age. The Coroner's Jury rendered a verdict of death from taking some narcotic poison.

In the Supreme Court, yesterday, Justice DAVIES rendered an elaborate opinion in the case of the People ex rel. the Board of Education vs. Comptroller FLAGG, growing out of a deficiency in the funds of the Board of Education. The Board moved for a mandamus to compel the payment of $125,000, as a special appropriation to supply the deficiency, and the application was denied.

An unusually large amount of counterfeit bank notes are now in circulation. Nearly half a dozen arrests were made yesterday of parties charged with uttering the spurious paper. Counterfeit Fives on the Exchange Bank of Hartford are especially plenty.

The Chamber of Commerce have appointed a Committee of Twelve Shipowners to inquire into the alleged cruelties to seamen on board our merchant ships, and to adopt measures for the suppression of the abuse.

A child, while playing with matches last evening, at No. 330 West Seventeenth-street, set fire to its clothes, and was so severely burned that it died shortly after.

Our Relations with China.

The National Intelligencer, speaking of the report that the privilege has been accorded by China to one of the great powers of Europe, to have a resident Minister at Pekin, says: "If that be the case, it strikes us that, if our Government thinks proper to be represented by a diplomatic agent at all, we should insist on his being accredited to the Supreme Government at the capital." We think the country at large will take the same view of the subject. We have already extensive commercial relations with China; and foreign trade involves the necessity of Government representatives for its protection. It is a matter of the highest importance to our commerce, as well as to the general interests of civilization, that our relations with China should be placed upon a footing less humiliating and more useful than we have been content to occupy hitherto.

It is rumored that our Government has repelled the friendly invitation of the French and English Governments to join them in urging upon the Chinese Emperor the necessity and propriety of treating the Western Powers less as inferiors, and more as equals, than he has done hitherto. To what extent these reports are true we are unable to say. If we were invited to join England and France in waging war upon China, our Government has been wise if it has declined. We have, as yet, no cause of war with that Empire, and we certainly are not called upon to espouse the quarrels of others.

But if we were asked merely to join in an application for the establishment of more just and satisfactory relations, and to apply, in common with England and France, for the privilege of having a resident Minister at Pekin, we do not see the necessity or the wisdom of repelling the invitation. The object is one of great and acknowledged importance, and the manner of seeking its accomplishment is both peaceful and friendly.

Final Settlement of the Danish Sound Tolls.

Among the items of intelligence received night before last from Europe, is that of the final adjustment of the Danish difficulty, and of a definite arrangement by which that anomalous inheritance from the Vi-King period—the levy of a tax on all vessels entering the Baltic—has disappeared from among the number of international abuses. The entire credit of having procured the abrogation of this unjust custom, a relic as it has been of middle-age piracy, is due to the perseverance and energy with which the United States Government has continued, for twenty-five years, to protest against it. Ever since the notes which were written on the subject in 1843, by Mr. UPSHUR, then Secretary of State, succeeding Cabinets and Presidents have made it a point of honor to continue their negotiations, adapting them to the exigencies of the time, but never deterred from steadily pursuing the desired end, either by the formidable resistance of the Court of Copenhagen, or of its allies in other parts of Europe. The final result is the more to our national honor, inasmuch as we have accomplished what FREDERICK the Great, with all of his prestige of success, failed to bring about, and what Sir ROBERT PEEL was totally frustrated in, in 1841, although backed by the whole influence of the British Government.

The Hanseatic League is the only power which, until now, has ever successfully withstood payment of tolls to Denmark, upon vessels passing through the Sound. It is well known that the origin of this tax, in dim antiquity, consisted in levying a contribution of salt and wine, together with a very small amount of deck-money. Even this trifling tribute was disputed by the League. In 1363 and 1365, WALDEMAR III. of Denmark was compelled to sign a treaty freeing "forever" vessels of the League from the payment of toll. Upon different subsequent violations of this treaty, new victories compelled Denmark to renewals of the same agreement in 1443, 1477 and 1524, and, in the most solemn manner, finally, in 1560. Between these several confirmations of the rights of the Hanseatic League infringements of the treaty were made by Denmark, but were always resisted by the pioneers of commerce of the ages between the fourteenth and sixteenth century;—and, but for the rivalry of the Netherlands, which originated a distinction between privileged and unprivileged nations, and enabled Denmark to establish a minimum of toll, which was a favor when compared with the maximum, the entrance to the Baltic would have ever after remained free.

Up to the year 1814, Prussia was the nation which, most of all, suffered by the tax upon vessels bound for ports upon her northwest coast; and no greater proof could be afforded of the subserviency of that Power to the Czar, (whose hopes of one day profiting by his reversionary right to the Danish throne have caused him, until lately, to abet the claims of the Court of Copenhagen,) than that the voice of the Berlin representatives at the Congress of Vienna was the weakest, against this tyrannical abuse, of any European Power; and that, since that time, the Prussian Government has never dared, until last year, to cooperate energetically in procuring its abolition. The foundation of a commercial treaty between Prussia and Denmark was, it is true, laid in 1814, through British influence; but the treaty itself, which was signed in 1818, is one of the most miserable instances of diplomatic ignorance, weakness and slavery on record. It abandons to Denmark even greater privileges than that nation had before enjoyed, and exempts from it as a "condescension," certain rights conceded to Prussia, at Camin and Colberg, in the seventeenth century. This treaty was concluded for twenty years, until 1838, and it was in consequence of the treacherous delays of the Court of Copenhagen, after the termination of that period, that the attention of the British public was attracted to the subject. Every effort was made by Sir ROBERT PEEL to procure a resort to active measures; but the subtle management of the Russian and Danish Ministers finally procured, by the reduction of duty on certain articles of British manufacture, the Convention of the 23d August, 1841, by which Denmark, by baiting its hook for Birmingham and Manchester, gained instead of losing. The Czar conferred a Russian decoration, set in diamonds, upon the Danish Ambassador at London, for the skill in juggling by which he had bamboozled the manufacturing classes of England!

The Convention of 1841 expired, by limitation, in 1851. Since then the efforts of the United States have been unremitting, and, by gradual advances, it has obtained the aid of England and France. The Eastern war destroyed also the opposition of Russia, and with it that of Prussia. The other European powers were all predisposed to resist a tax from which they derived no benefit, but much injury. The consequence has been the capitalization scheme of Denmark, which, with certain limitations, has at length been accepted. The sum to be paid by the United States will be so small, comparatively, that our Government could willingly have sacrificed ten times the amount, merely for the advantage of a safe channel, light-houses, pilots, &c., for which it is proper that Denmark should be compensated. The resistance of Mr. MARCY to the payment of any money as a matter of lawful equivalent for the Dues themselves, disappeared so soon as it was conceded by the Danish ministry that the nature of the "value received," of a future, substantial character, should be either implied or expressed in the treaty. It is now signed, and as soon as it shall have gone into operation, a troublesome embarrassment may be said to have disappeared from among the diplomatic entanglements of the day, and to have been disposed of in a way which calls for the gratitude to this country of the whole civilized world.

Failure of the Revolution in Peru.

The news from Peru, published in this journal yesterday, is by no means favorable to the Revolution. We are not surprised at this intelligence;—first, because there are, in reality, no urgent reasons for the overthrow of the existing Government. The revolutionists are contending for no great principle. They have no particular wrongs to avenge—no grievous oppression from which they seek to be relieved. The point at issue is purely one of personal ambition, and the result will depend on the personal popularity of rival chiefs. In the second place, VIVANCO, the head and front of the opposition, lacks that boldness which commands the respect of the multitude, and is the chief element of success in a military leader. And, thirdly, President CASTILLA is not the man to remain idle when action is necessary to his interests, nor to lose a single opportunity that the mistakes of his enemies may offer.

The Revolution at the commencement, had in its favor that incessant desire for change which is characteristic of the Spanish American, and of the Peruvian in particular. But it has now reaped all the advantage it is likely to gain from the fickleness of the people. At the first onset, there was a rush to its ranks. The cry of opposition to the Party in power drew those who had everything to gain and nothing to lose around VIVANCO'S standard. CASTILLA, himself a revolutionary chief, had hosts of enemies, and they, of course, supported his personal rival and opponent. The whole South became disaffected, and, to crown the hopes of VIVANCO and his admirers, the largest vessel in the little navy of Peru—in itself a host—and two smaller ships-of-war abandoned their allegiance, and hoisted the revolutionary flag. Under these circumstances VIVANCO'S speedy success was confidently prophecied.

There came, however, a reaction. The accession to the ranks of the revolutionists had an end; resources were not unlimited; and now that the entire strength of the party is known, a tolerable opinion can be formed of its chances of success. We do not conceive that these chances preponderate in its favor. President CASTILLA, with that stubborn resolution which is a chief point in his character, has labored with quiet but untiring energy to counteract the efforts of his enemies. In spite of the defection of the frigate Apurimac, and three sloops-of-war, and the tremendous impetus with which the movement started, he has succeeded in arresting its progress, and with the most populous districts and the army still faithful to his cause, there is every prospect of his ultimate triumph. Enthusiasm is the fuel with which Revolution is fed; but the enthusiasm of VIVANCO'S faction has received a fatal check—not so much from any actual defeat, as from the obstinacy and continued popularity of the man whose overthrow they are striving to effect. Even if CASTILLA is not sufficiently strong to suppress directly, and by positive force, an insurrection which has extended into remote and inaccessible districts, he is at least in a position to deprive it of life and weary out its promoters by a lengthened, determined resistance.

If these are not sufficient indications that the attempt to overturn CASTILLA'S Government will fail, there can be no doubt but that the outrage very recently committed by two revolutionary war vessels on the high seas will be the means of blasting VIVANCO'S hopes. From our correspondent's letter, published yesterday, it appears that the British mail-steamer New Grenada, on her last trip to Panama, was robbed of a large amount of specie and one thousand stand of arms by two of VIVANCO'S sloops-of-war. It is difficult to understand the motives that induced such an act, for it will be a slur upon the revolutionary cause, will ruin its prestige, and will destroy public confidence in its chiefs. With a British line-of-battle ship and two frigates in the harbor of Callao, the pirates have no opportunity to escape or reap any advantage from their plunders. It has been suggested that the whole was a plot prearranged between President CASTILLA and the officers of the revolutionary ships, and that they adopted this scheme in order to use the British naval force against VIVANCO'S warships, which have been the main stay of the Revolution and the terror of traitorous plots. The scheme is a cunning one, and will very probably succeed. It has now become necessary for the safety of passengers, mails, and treasure, by the South Pacific steamers, that the revolutionary vessels should be captured, and the British fleet in these waters is amply sufficient for the task. When it is accomplished, the movement under VIVANCO may be considered as put down. It is not to be expected, however, that any lengthened peace will be the result; for those who are acquainted with the political condition of Peru know full well that in anarchy her people delight, and that one Revolution only dies out to give place to another.

Newspaper Matters.

The Traveler, Chronicle, Telegraph, and Atlas, of Boston, are to be united, as they have not probably yielded of late a fair remuneration for the labor and capital of their proprietors. At the same time that paper is dearer and labor higher, the presses and other fixtures more costly, and telegraphing, to some journals, is an enormous bill, subscription prices have been reduced, and by agencies the advertising rates become ruinous.

We find the above floating in our exchanges. Its statements in regard to the projected union of several of the existing daily journals of Boston, are substantially true; and the public of Boston and its vicinity, as well as the parties directly interested in the journals themselves, will be great gainers thereby. The new paper, which is to be the resultant of the combination, will be under the editorial supervision of SAMUEL BOWLES, Esq., who for many years has made the Springfield Republican one of the best and most readable newspapers in New England. The union will afford him the business facilities, and the popular support which are essential to success.

There is no department of business, and no profession, in which greater progress has been made during the past ten years than in Journalism,—and this is still to go on. The public taste demands better newspapers than it did ten years ago,—papers containing more news, better writing, higher and fairer views of all topics of public interest and a greater variety of intelligence, correspondence and editorial matter. The first result of this has been an enormous increase in the expense of publishing a successful newspaper. Fifteen years ago the aggregate expenses of no newspaper establishment in this City reached $100,000:—there are three now whose average expenses probably exceed $350,000. The next result has been to decrease the number of competing journals, and render those which are strong enough to keep the field the more profitable and permanent. Fifteen years ago a newspaper which cleared $30,000 was a miracle of success: now there are at least half a dozen which do it, and three which probably average net incomes of $75,000 each. The demand for newspapers has increased steadily and rapidly:—and those which have supplied it best—at whatever cost,—have prospered accordingly.

One great element in the success of newspapers has been the increase in advertising,—not only in quantity, but in price. Fifteen years ago advertising was done by the year or month,—at prices which were merely nominal. The consequence was that immense blanket sheets were filled with cheap advertisements, and as their circulation was very limited, and the cost of the paper on which they were printed trifling, nearly all they did receive was profit. Now the circulation of the leading organs of publicity is enormous,—and the prices of advertising have increased accordingly,—though it is actually cheaper to the advertiser than it used to be, because where he found one reader for his announcements then, he finds ten now. Nothing proves this more conclusively than the steady increase in the amount of advertising,—in spite of its increased expensiveness. All the papers of large circulation are crowded to their utmost capacity with advertisements, and the pressure every year grows more and more severe.

The ultimate result of this tendency it is not difficult to foresee. The public will not be content with so serious a curtailment of the amount of reading matter as the increase of Advertising renders unavoidable. Every year the news from every quarter becomes more voluminous;—the commercial, financial and political developments in all parts of the world afford increased matter for announcement and for comment:—and the public taste grows more and more exacting in regard to the character and comprehensiveness of the Public Press. Our journals will be driven into enlargement. They must follow the example of the London Times, and issue, as it did for some years, an occasional supplement as the pressure of Advertisements rendered necessary, or a daily sheet of twelve pages,—or even of sixteen, as the London Times from the same necessity does now. Nothing short of such a movement will satisfy the public demand.

The practical difficulty in the way of doing it now is the low price of our newspapers. Publishers of the three leading papers receive only a cent and a half for each copy of their respective journals;—and this barely covers the cost of the white paper on which they are printed. Increase the size one-half, or one-quarter, and the white paper will cost more than the printed sheet. The larger the circulation, under such a state of things, the heavier the loss. The difficulty could only be met by increasing the price of the newspaper, so as to cover the cost of the white paper used. We have no doubt that this will be the next step in the progress of the Newspaper Press of this City. Some one or more of the established journals will increase its price, and make a corresponding increase in the variety and quality of its contents. And that the advanced taste of the community would abundantly sustain such a step, on the part of at least one daily journal, we have no doubt. There are at least fifty thousand newspaper readers who want a journal fifty per cent. better than at present prices any of the City newspapers can be made:—and they would gladly pay the difference in cost, in view of such a difference in quality.

EXTRAORDINARY ENVOY.—We understand that FANNY ELLSLER'S former factotum, WIKOFF, has been appointed Minister Plenipotentiary by the immaculate "historian" of Parker Vein and Potosi, the New-York Herald, to conduct negotiations with General CASS, Lord NAPIER, or anybody else who will tolerate the one or the other, and to offer the valuable support of that sheet—for a consideration. All news or favors to be paid for in first-rate notices, manufactured to order. We believe the same enterprising print appointed one BENEDICT a special Minister to Gen. TAYLOR'S Administration for the same laudable purposes in 1849, and, after falling out with him, published all his confidential correspondence with the Editor to the world.

The War in Circassia.

We learn by the last accounts from Europe, that Russia is about to make a great effort to put an end, at once and forever, to the warfare in Circassia, which has now been raging without any appreciable result for fifty years, and consumes annually a third of the imperial army. The Circassians, on their side, seem prepared to abide the issue, have procured supplies of arms and ammunition from England, and have placed the command of the United Tribes in the hands of a renegade Hungarian, who, if not a skillful tactician, is at least known to be already a resolute soldier.

The Circassians have received for a long while a great deal of sympathy at the hands of the whole civilized world, but the greater portion of it has certainly been bestowed upon them in utter ignorance of the exact amount of merit of any sort which they possess. We suspect half the admiration which has been lavished on them has had its origin in the old tradition of physical beauty, which has now for so many generations glorified them in the eyes of the Franks. They have had their fair share of the halo which romance has long cast over all that comes from the East. It is not our purpose to inquire how far their women justify the popular notion of their charms, or whether the men are in reality the types of manly symmetry and vigor which the popular fancy paints them. But we are sorry to say that the nearer view which has been obtained of the manners and customs of the tribes on the sea coast, at least, during the recent war, places beyond all doubt the fact that as a race they may fairly be set down in the same category with the Kurds, and Turcomans and Montenegrins, or in other words, may be described as an interesting people of prepossessing appearance, and dirty exterior, greatly addicted to lies, robbery, and assassination. One of the many delusions prevalent in England before the Russian war, was that the Circassians were devoted, heart and soul, to the cause of human freedom; were animated by the loftiest aspirations cherished in poetic imaginations; a pure and ideal of national as well as individual destiny, and, under the conduct of the "warrior prophet," marched to battle against Russia, as to a great and solemn act of religious worship. The ecstatic pleasure which this theory afforded for many years to a great number of well-meaning people was certainly some compensation for its falsity and folly; but it was just as well that it was utterly dissipated by the expedition undertaken into the interior from Sejvuk Kaleh, in the Summer of 1854, by Mr. LONGWORTH, the British Consul at Monastir. The experience of this gentleman and his companions proved, beyond all question, that Western sympathy was not an article greatly in demand upon the shores of the Caspian, and that the bearers of it were likely to meet, just as he met, with an exceedingly sorry reception. The fact of the matter is, that these tribes defend their fastnesses as wild beasts defend their dens, and are nearly as far from anything like a community of political ideas with the Western world as panthers from sympathy with the hunter. They hate Russia and fight against her, not from a sentiment of patriotism or honor, for not only are these two ideas unknown to them, but there are no words in their language to express them, but because the domination of Russia, let it mean what else it may, means order, restraint, and security for life and property. When a people fights for its old habits and old ways, and fights, moreover, with courage and pertinacity, one is very apt to dignify its efforts with the title of a struggle for national independence, and we are not disposed to find fault with the appellation; but we warn our readers against supposing that there is aught in the social or political organization which the Circassians have now for half a century defended with unshaken courage, that should command our admiration. The struggle which has been so long raging in the defiles of the Caucasus has undoubtedly been marked by great heroism and great constancy. Most assuredly it is not simply the resistance of freemen to the assaults of a despot. It is also, in a still greater degree, the resistance of brigands to the encroachments of law—of blood-thirsty fanatics to the propagandism of another and a detested creed.

The want of success which has attended all the efforts of the Russians in Daghistan reveals clearly the secret of their weakness. A powerful centralization, whose agents are slaves, who perform each act of their lives in terror of the rod and the axe, loses its energy in proportion as the scene of operations is distant from the Capital. The Russian generals in Circassia fight in the knowledge that a single failure may entail ruin and disgrace—that the greatest merit or bravery can meet with no better reward than the smile of a despot. The soldiers are, of course, the same with whose sufferings and exploits the world is already familiar, who, admirably trained as they are to act in masses under the guidance of superiors, are all but useless in mountain warfare, where individual intelligence and activity are everything. A Russian battalion manœuvres on a plain with the accuracy of a machine, fights bravely, and suffers patiently, and dies without a murmur. But take it into woods or mountains, break it up en tirailleur, and leave each man to depend on his own quickness, self-reliance and pluck, and it becomes at once a scattered drove of sheep, upon whom the hardy mountaineers descend like wolves on the fold. It is no longer the disciplined mass whose faultless precision commands plaudits in the squares of St. Petersburg, and fills Europe with foreboding, but the stupid, craven peasants, whom a relentless ukase drags each year from their stoves, and their sheepskins and raki, to acquire artificial manhood on the parade ground. A few thousand volunteers from Arkansas or Mississippi would do more against SCHAMYL in one year, than the armies of His Majesty the Czar of all the Russias have achieved in the last ten.

SAFE PAPERS.—We have a communication from one who signs himself the "Head of a Family," which is very savage upon the Herald for filling its columns with filthy details of the most disgusting crimes all over the country. He says he cannot, with any safety, take such a paper into his family, and he desires permission, through [illegible] the editor of the Herald some good advice on the subject.

We regret that we cannot open our columns for such a purpose. In the first place, we fear the editor and proprietor of the Herald doesn't consult our columns as often as he might with advantage to himself, for guidance and instruction, and he might not follow the suggestions which we should make.

In the next place, we are inclined to believe that he edits his paper remarkably well,—and that its popularity among those for whose edification and amusement it is designed, affords the best evidence of the fact. The Herald is not designed for families:—it is intended for the "outside circles" of society,—for grog-shops and dance-houses,—for the bar-rooms and back alums,—for the reckless, the profligate, the gossiping gabblers who hang upon the outskirts of society, and care nothing for principle, or morals, or respectability. These people read it and are not sensible of any serious damage to their morals in consequence. They want precisely the details which the Herald gives them,—and if it should omit them it would lose the bulk of its circulation. It is an essential part of an editor's duty to adapt his paper to the tastes and preferences of his readers;—and in this the Herald certainly excels.

Our correspondent should do as a good many other "heads of families" do—take some safe newspaper for his family, and, if he must himself have these titillating stories of which he complains as unfit for others, let him buy the Herald in a car, or at his counting-room, or in some corner where he can read it without endangering the morals of others. A great many very respectable gentlemen, including clergymen, manage the matter in this way with good success—thus at the same time indulging their own tastes and protecting the morals of their families.

Lost Money Letters.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: In a late issue of the TIMES I observed an editorial article complaining of the loss of a large number of money letters sent to your address through the U. S. mails, at the same time furnishing your readers with a list of such valuable letters lost in the month of February: you say:

"We keep a record of all the letters containing money sent to the TIMES, and which never reach us—so far as we are subsequently advised of their having been sent. The following transcript from that record for the month of February alone, shows the amount lost, and the proportion that were registered."

Then follows the list referred to, embracing about thirty letters, sixteen of which were "registered" at the offices where mailed, and the balance were sent as unregistered and in the ordinary way.

As all registered letters delivered from this office have to be receipted for by the parties to whom they are addressed, or by their authorized agents, I have made an examination of the receipt books in the Registry Department, and find that the Postmaster holds receipts for all the registered letters enumerated by you. The receipts are signed by the young man who was, until recently, regularly employed and authorized to receive registered and all other letters for the TIMES Office. If, therefore, these valuable letters failed to reach you it is no fault of the Registry System or of the Post-Office Department.

Very respectfully yours, J. HOLBROOK,
Special Agent Post-Office Department.

We have satisfied ourselves by personal examination, that the above is substantially correct, and that the losses of money contained in registered letters has been due, to some extent, at all events, to the unfaithfulness of agents in our own employ. We desire, therefore, to relieve the Clerks in the Registry Department of the City Post-office from whatever suspicion our former statements on this subject may have involved.

We may add, also, that we are satisfied that merchants and business men generally are far too careless in regard to the class of persons who are sent to the Post-office for their letters. It is very common to intrust this important and responsible duty to those employes who are in the most inferior positions, and who are the most inadequately paid for their services. A direct temptation to dishonesty is thus thrown in their way. We are satisfied that the matter deserves more attention than it receives.

STREET MUSIC.—The sound of the scraper, the broom and the shovel were last night heard in Fulton-street, making the most delightful music as they came in contact with the Belgian pavement. A bevy of men with lanterns, watering-pots, brooms and shovels, working by the light of the moon, attracted more attention and caused more delight than a target company with a band of music could have done. Familiarity will breed contempt after a while, but it will be some time before we become so familiarized to the operations of the street-cleaners as to entertain any other feelings than those of profound respect and satisfaction for their blessed services.

Personal.

A libel suit brought by ERASTUS BROOKS, editor of the New-York Express, against JAMES G. BLAINE, of the Kennebec Journal, is set down for trial on the 23d of this month, before the United States District Court of Maine. The libel is said to have been uttered by the Journal in reference to Mr. BROOKS' course towards Col. FREMONT during the recent canvass.

There is a flood of emigration from Oneida County to the West. Among recent departures is HENRY T. UTLEY, late District-Attorney, who goes to Dubuque.

Simple Method of Detecting Counterfeit Photographic Bank Bills.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The DAILY TIMES of this date publishes the case of attempted passing counterfeit photographic bank-bills upon Messrs. BECK & Co. Photographic bank-bills may be immediately detected by the following simple chemical application: Procure a half ounce of fluid of the solution of Cyanide of Potassium (which may be procured at any respectable drug store.) With a drop or two of this liquid moisten any part of the suspected bill, and if it be a photograph the color will in two or three minutes be changed or removed. If the bill be genuine—that is, no photograph—it will produce no change upon its color or face. A. C. CASTLE, M. D.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, April 2, 1857.

Presentation to an Alderman.

The residents of Lexington-avenue have presented Alderman WILSON, of the First Ward, (formerly of the Eighteenth,) with an elegant silver salver and pitcher. It was displayed yesterday in the Aldermen's "sanctum" of the City Hall. The salver is thus inscribed: "I did but my duty, and fulfilling your trust to the people, remembering my oath of office above all considerations."

NEWSPAPERS IN MASSACHUSETTS.—The State of Massachusetts pays for upwards of eight thousand copies of newspapers and periodicals, for the use of the members of the Legislature, the Governor, Council and the public offices. The Boston Journal has the largest list, 1,007 copies being subscribed for; Ballou's Pictorial has 344 subscribers; the Infidel Investigator 3; the Spiritualist 24; and quantities of the flash papers are taken. Thirty-eight children find consolation in the Youth's Companion; 23 others have comfort in Zion's Herald. The Flag of our Union has 99 readers; Littell's Living Age 261; the Parlor Casket 106; the Medical and Surgical Journal 66, and the Olive Branch 84. The members of the General Court seem to appreciate newspapers—particularly the "fancy" class of that literature.

MARINE MATTERS.

Chamber of Commerce.

The quarterly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held in Clinton Hall Thursday evening, E. Pauli, Esq., in the Chair.

Messrs. FREDERICK S. LITTLEJOHN and ISAAC SHERMAN were elected members of the Chamber.

AN OBSERVATORY FOR NEW-YORK.

Mr. MATTHEW MAURY (a merchant of this City—not Lieut. MAURY) reported progress on the subject of a meteorological and astronomical observatory in New-York, in favor of the same. The cost was estimated at $20,000.

Mr. A. A. LOW submitted propositions in favor of a movement for the protection of American property in China, and a resolution was passed that a Committee of five be appointed to prepare a memorial to the President of the United States, and, if they should deem it expedient, to proceed to Washington, with a view to secure attention to these great interests.

The subject of the alleged cruelties to seamen was then taken up, and a Committee of Twelve was appointed to inquire into the alleged facts, and to confer with shipowners as to the measures which can be adopted to remedy these evils, and to report at a future meeting of the Chamber.

Mr. CALEB BARSTOW, from the Committee on a permanent location for the Chamber, reported in favor of erecting a building for their express use, the collection of a reference library, a suitable reading room, and all of the appliances adapted to the wants of the merchants of this community.

A motion of Mr. WETMORE was adopted, and the Chamber instructed the Committee to hire the room in the Exchange, at an annual rent not exceeding $1,800. The Chamber then adjourned.

Widows' Relief Fund.

We have received from Messrs. POILLON & LE COUNT, No. 65 Wall-street, a statement of the moneys received by them, for the benefit of the families left destitute by the loss of the schooner Sarah E. Bird, with a list of the donors. The whole sum thus far received is $1,465. The subscriptions are by our principal shipowners and merchants, and vary from $10 to $100, the whole number of names being forty-seven.

The burnt wreck of the steamer Knoxville has had the boilers and all other movable portions of her engines taken out, and nothing but the bedplates and cylinders remain. Chains are placed beneath the sunken hulk, and Mr. BISHOP, with his derrick, is to make the attempt on Monday to raise and remove it. It will be taken to Green Point, where the copper can be stripped off. The expense to the owners and underwriters of raising the vessel will not fall much short of ten thousand dollars, besides the loss of the steamer.

The passengers by the Belgian steamer Constitution have signed a complimentary address to the officers of that vessel, with the customary good wishes, upon the occasion of their safe arrival on this side of the Atlantic.

FIRE ON BOARD A SCHOONER.—About 3 o'clock P.M. yesterday, a private watchman discovered a fire on board of the schooner River Queen, lying at pier No. 8 East River. It broke out on deck among some bales of Cotton wasting. After throwing overboard several bales, the fire was extinguished. The vessel received but trifling damage.

CHARGE OF THE GOVERNOR OF THE BAHAMAS AGAINST AMERICAN SHIPMASTERS.—The Nassau Guardian of Feb. 25 says that among the documents transmitted to the Legislature by the Governor of the Bahamas, was the following:

"I now beg leave to refer to paper No. 3—a statement by Mr. BACON, the United States Consul—showing the number of ships wrecked in the Bahamas during a period of two years and six months, with the value of their cargoes, the salvages paid to the wreckers, &c., &c.

In paper No. 4 (a letter from me to the Consul) I notice that a large proportion of the wrecked ships belonged to America; that there were honorable exceptions; but it appeared to me that many of the captains—citizens of the United States—were utterly unworthy of the confidence reposed in them; and for their own pecuniary gains, had recklessly sacrificed property which it was their bounden duty to have protected; and as he, Mr. BACON, was about to proceed to New-York, he would of course communicate with the Chamber of Commerce there, and he might be assured I would cooperate with them and the United States Government to put a stop to those shameful outrages which were giving to the colony so unenviable a notoriety. I may here notice that the colonial seal bears the impression of a ship-of-war destroying some piratical vessels, with the rising sun of commerce in the distance, the motto being "Expulsis Piratis, Restituta Commercia." The Bahama Islands were formerly nests of pirates, and care should be taken that they do not now become nests for another class, who if they are allowed to commit felonies with impunity, will soon get as daring as those men who infested these coasts many years ago.

Some reason must be assigned for the great increase which has taken place in the number of vessels and men which are now employed in wrecking; and I do not entertain a doubt that it is to be attributed to the numerous shipwrecks on the coast of the Bahamas, and that very many of these ships have been wilfully lost by agreements made between their captains and the wreckers, in order that the former may participate largely in whatever salvage is awarded, the captain, in some cases, placing himself in the hands of the owner of the wrecking vessel, consigning the ship and cargo to him, and he appointing his own arbitrator to settle the salvage.

The agreements to which I have alluded are so skillfully arranged and settled, that hitherto no proof could be obtained to justify any proceedings being taken by the Crown.

* * * * *

In all cases of foreign ships, I think their master should be compelled to place themselves in the hands of the Consuls of the respective nations to which they belong, who shall determine whether salvage may be settled by arbitration, or go into Court—if by arbitration, the Attorney-General to name the arbitrator.

Naval.

Capt. MCCLUSKY, now residing in Brooklyn, has, it is said, been offered the post of Commandant of the Navy Yard, in place of Capt. BIGELOW, resigned, and will accept. Capt. MCCLUSKY is now engaged at Washington, as a member of the Court of Inquiry, before which retired and dropped officers are prosecuting their claims for restoration. The Secretary of the Navy, it is said, intends to constitute, besides the present central court at Washington, two others, one at New-York and the other at Boston, to facilitate the objects of the Court, and to save needless traveling expenses, and delay. The movement is highly approved of, and will reduce, by more than two-thirds, the time likely to be consumed in the various hearings.

Commander PENNOCK has been ordered to join the new frigate Niagara, as the executive officer of the telegraphic expedition.

The Vincennes, now undergoing repairs in the Dry Dock, is designed for the East Indies.

THE MAIL LETTINGS.—Yesterday, the reception of bids for mail contracts closed, and at 9 o'clock the Department commenced opening the proposals, preparatory to rendering a decision thereon. Subjoined is the number of regular routes in each State, for which contracts will be given:

In addition to the above, contracts will be entered into for carrying the mail on six hundred miscellaneous routes, which are distributed throughout the different States in which regular lettings do not take place.—Union, Thursday.

Dr. DORSON, of St. Eustache, Canada, has been convicted of abstracting property from the trunk of a brother, immediately after his death, and thus defrauding the widow. The trial excited a good deal of interest, as the prisoner was respectably connected, and is said to be worth £50,000.

The Chinese Question.

From the National Intelligencer, April 2.

The subjoined letter, from a source in which we place entire confidence, will put our readers in possession of the ground, policy and plan of operations adopted by the British Government, and which the special Minister and the Admiral of the British forces have been instructed to carry out in China:

LONDON, Thursday, March 12, 1857.

DEAR SIR: It may be interesting to you to know something as to the operations of this Government in regard to Chinese affairs beyond what we all know from the debates in Parliament.

In the first place, we are in earnest, and the greater the objection to ministerial measures on the part of the Commons, the more will the energy of ministers be displayed in preparing the material for a revision of the Chinese treaty, the greater the exertions of the Admiralty to put into the hands of Lord ELGIN the power to discuss the treaty at the mouth of the Peiho, and off Nankin, in the meantime closing the doors of commerce at Canton, Foo Chow, and other ports. Long before the present Parliament comes to an end, such negotiations will have been inaugurated in China as will put it out of the power of any new ministry to suspend them. There can be no backing out; we must "go ahead," as you Americans say, and put our relations with China on a permanent basis. France is in for it, and has adopted, as we learn from the best authority, measures identical with our own to obtain this desirable end. It will be fortunate for all, and especially for China, if the United States should join us in settling the present question. You have a large interest in the matter, and you cannot well stand aloof; you may not make war, but you can help us to make peace, and you may be assured that your cooperation is earnestly sought by England and France.

It is not the wish, nor would it be for the interest of England, if she had the desire, to seek of China any exclusive privileges. When she will demand, at the door of Pekin itself, if necessary, must be demanded for the good of all the world, and it is to be hoped that the great commercial nation of the West will present their joint moral influence to bring the Chinese to an adjustment without much loss of time, and without any loss of blood or of credit.

The orders of Lord CLARENDON are of the most humane and the most liberal nature. They expressly repudiate any intention or desire to ask for any exclusive privileges, and they point to the most confidential relations between the British Minister and your Commissioner at Canton. It will be well for your merchants to know these facts, in order to counteract in some measure the usual non-committal policy of your Government. To refuse to cooperate with England and France in the present crisis would be to cast the United States among the barbarians. You cannot honestly refuse to cooperate in making peace; you must use your influence for the benefit of your trade, and for the benefit of your Chinese friends. We are actively sending forward the materials of war for peaceable ends, and we trust the United States will do the same.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, April 1.

For the last two or three days considerable attention has been given by the President and Secretary of State to our relations with China. Though we have avoided any cooperation with the British in their hostile demonstrations against China, yet we have been forced into collision with the Chinese authorities in consequence of the insults offered by the commanding officer of a Chinese fort to our flag. The insult was resented by our naval force in a very gallant manner, and the forts were destroyed. This was, by the way, the first occasion on which the new shot and shell practice for our navy, and belonging solely to our service, were ever tried in action, and their efficiency was most satisfactorily tested; for they smashed everything that was in their way.

This difficulty was settled for the time, at least, by a most satisfactory and ample apology in writing from the Governor of Canton, who disavowed the hostile act of the captain of the fort. It is said that our force, having prepared for action, did not wait the full time that had been given to the Chinese Governor for an apology, but anticipated the hour with well-aimed broadsides against the fort. As the matter stands we have no special cause of quarrel with John Chinaman, and have no reason to unite with the British and French Governments in a crusade against the Celestials. Besides, it is contrary to our general policy to entangle ourselves with foreign collisions, whether offensive or defensive.

The British would be, of course, very glad of our cooperation in the war which they have commenced, and have heretofore urged upon this Government and our Minister in China, the expediency of a joint effort of the American, French and British commanders to force their way to Pekin, the capital, and there insist upon the establishment in that city of direct diplomatic intercourse with the Emperor of China, instead of negotiating through the Governor-General of Canton.

This policy was repudiated by the late Administration, and, as I learn, finds still less favor with the present.

The imprudent and unauthorized act of our consul at Hong-Kong, in participating in the British assault upon Canton, and entering the city with the British troops, and bearing in his own hands the American flag, was rebuked by Mr. MARCY, and is equally censured by the present Administration. If the fact prove to be so the Consul will be dismissed. The act of the Consul was well calculated to provoke hostilities, and it is needless to say that no Consul has a right to commit his Government before the world on so important a subject.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, April 2, 1857.

The war with China, lately commenced by Great Britain, was not an unexpected event, and is connected with a policy which the British Government had adopted as far back as 1853, when our Minister in China, Mr. HUMPHREY MARSHALL, predicted, in his dispatches, that the "flowery land" would become the prey of Great Britain on one side and Russia on the other. The immediate cause of the commencement of the war in so vigorous a manner, by the bombardment of Canton, is not to be found, as Lord JOHN RUSSELL has shown, in the affair of the lorcha, which was a mere pretext.

Whatever may be the result of the elections to the new Parliament, it is believed that the British Government, with the aid of France, will prosecute it, with all the means at their command. The plan of their joint operations is spoken of as well arranged for the purpose of obtaining possession of the great tea district and the principal ports. They will take Nankin, and perhaps Pekin, or cut off the communication by the canal with Pekin. Ships of war, of the size of the United States frigate Brandywine can, it is said, approach within sixty miles of Pekin.

The British and French Governments desire and urge upon the United States their co-operation in this enterprise, the professed object of which is to open China to commerce and civilization, as if the Celestials had not a right to shape their own policy in this respect.

It should be observed that the United States are at peace with the Chinese empire. Whatever difficulties existed in consequence of the violation of our flag, have been settled, and no cause for reopening them exists. The Imperial Commissioner YEH has received such a lesson from Commodore ARMSTRONG, by the prompt and complete destruction of the four Barrier forts, that he will not soon permit another mistake in regard to the identity of our flag.

What motive, therefore, for the United States Government to enter into an entangling alliance with the Western Powers for the conquest of China? But neither the late nor the present Administration has approved of such a war. The offer to give free scope for expansion in the direction of Mexico and Central America, is hardly an equivalent for the hazardous experiment of the proposed alliance. Besides, if we conciliated Great Britain and France by such a step, to the same extent we should give offence to Russia, whose interests in China are not to be promoted by this war. Many American merchants have, it is said, taken the idea that their interests require a belligerent course on the part of our Government towards China. Their commerce would not be augmented by it. As matters now are, they can withdraw their property from Canton. The Dutch and Portuguese have no trouble with the Chinese.

Trade at Canton is suspended and the city is reported to be in a most distressed and suffering condition from famine, rebellion, and the prostration of industrial pursuits.

The Government will probably send an increased naval force to support Commodore ARMSTRONG in case of need, and a new Minister of experience and high character as a statesman, to attend to our interests in China and make a new treaty. ION.

New Treaty with Mexico—Important Intelligence.

The Missouri Democrat has been put in possession of an important telegraphic dispatch, which has been received in St. Louis, containing the substance of dispatches forwarded on Saturday night last, to the New-Orleans Picayune, from Washington City. It is as follows:

WASHINGTON CITY, Saturday, March 28.

Forsyth treaty rejected. A new treaty between Mexico and the United States has been framed, which pays Mexico fifteen millions for Sonora, Shialoa and Lower California—three millions to be retained for claims of American citizens. Also a line of postal steamers, under the American flag, from New-Orleans to Vera Cruz, to enable Mexico to obtain men and munitions during the threatened war declared by Rome through Spain, to regain her church property confiscated by the Mexican Government. First demonstration of the Ostend Manifesto. Look out for Cuba.

Such is the substance of the dispatches, which, if correctly reported, are certainly full of meaning. Furthermore, the Democrat learns that BUNKHEAD, Secretary of Legation, has been dispatched; express, by way of Mobile and Vera Cruz, to Mexico, with the treaty. He is to be immediately forwarded in a Government steamer. The signification is that the Administration will support Mexico against the attack of Spain, instigated by France and England, who are said to be behind the curtain.

Eleven Female Rioters Tried and Acquitted.

From the Sandusky (Ohio) Register.

At the late term of the Court of Common Pleas of Richland County, Ohio, the case that created the most interest, as we learn from the Mansfield Herald, was one in which several ladies were indicted and tried for riot. It appears that some time in November last the ladies of the village of Belleville, in that county, to the number of eleven, some of whom having fathers, and some brothers, who frequented a liquor shop kept by a man named MORRIS, resolved to put an end to the cause of their troubles, and did so, by smashing his casks and decanters, and destroying the liquor. They were complained of by MORRIS, and were indicted as before stated. The case came on for hearing, and, being arraigned at the bar, they plead "Not guilty." Numerous witnesses were examined, and the case occupied some three days. The Jury was duly charged by the Court, and retired.

In about an hour the bell rang, announcing that they had decided upon their verdict, and the people, who had manifested the most intense interest, crowding the Court-room during the whole trial, rushed from all quarters of the town, so that the Court-room would scarcely hold them. When the foreman of the Jury rose to hand in the verdict, the most breathless silence prevailed, and when he responded to the clerk, "Not guilty," the words were caught up, and such shouting, clapping, laughing, and shaking of hands was never before witnessed in that dignified hall of justice. Although late at night, the young men from Belleville could not wait for morning, or the cars, but footed it home to tell the news. When the ladies arrived the next day they were received with every demonstration of approval by the inhabitants of the village.

DESPERATE AFFRAY WITH A SLAVE.—We learn from a correspondent in the vicinity that Mr. THOMAS H. GASKINS, residing near the mouth of the Great Wicomico river, was assaulted in a violent and desperate manner by a negro man named ISAAC, on the 19th ult., who was on a visit to his wife, a slave woman living at Mr. GASKINS'. In defence of his life and that of his own wife and child, Mr. G., after a long struggle with the fellow, was compelled to shoot him with his rifle, from the effect of which he died at about 7 o'clock on the same evening, at the house of Mrs. OLIVIA COLE, whither he was removed and to whom he belonged. The affair took place in Northumberland County, Va.—Baltimore Sun.

NEWS BY THE MAILS.

The points of the late India-rubber decision o Judge PITMAN in the United States Court, at Providence, are these: The defendants rested their case upon certain objections to the Goodyear patent, and second, upon certain negotiations with the plaintiffs, which they claimed, amounted to a license to them to use the patent. The Judge held that the validity of the patent must, in the light of the previous adjudications upon it, be considered settled in this Circuit as in others, and that the cleim of a license was entirely unfounded, and that justice could not be done to the plaintiffs' rights, except by an absolute and unconditional injunction upon the defendants.

Mr. VANKOUGHNET has introduced into the Canadian Council a bill to prevent accidents upon Railways, by means of public inspection. The whole machinery to be employed for this purpose is to be under the control of the Board of Railway Commissioners, which consists of the Receiver-General, Inspector-General, Postmaster-General, and the two Commissioners of Public Works, and they are to be permitted to appoint a secretary, whose duties have hitherto been performed by the Secretary of the Board of Works. The Board is to have power to inspect all lines of railway before they are opened and afterwards.

The Coroner's Inquest into the causes of the Great Western Railroad disaster is still in progress. Among the witnesses examined was Mr. WHIPPLE, of Albany, a civil engineer, who built four or five bridges for the Erie Road, and constructed the Desjardins bridge upon which this catastrophe happened. Mr. WHIPPLE testified that the bridge was not broken down by the simple pressure of the traffic passing over it bearing fairly on the track rails; but that the immediate cause of the disaster was the violent collision of some part of the locomotive attached to the train with the timbers of the bridge.

Owing to a clerical error in enrolling the Army Appropriation bill, passed at the late session of Congress, all the civil employes of the Government at all the United States construction armories came within an ace of being thrown out of employment. The bill, as ordered to be enrolled, contained a clause appropriating $360,000 for the continuance of the work at these establishments during the next fiscal year. The enrolling clerk overlooked it, and failed to insert it in the enrolled bill.

KIPP, Esq. After prayer by the Chancellor, Mr. SAMUEL DONN, of this City, one of the eight students standing highest in their class, who were appointed to deliver orations, was called on the platform, and proceeded to address the audience on "The World's need of Reform." The orations of these young students are scarcely fit subjects for criticism, and we shall content ourselves with saying of Mr. DONN, that he was thoroughly in earnest, and took a correct view of his very comprehensive subject. He was followed, after an air from "The Daughter of St. Mark," by the Band, by Mr. EDWARD L. SNYDER, also of this City, and the representative of the Philomathean Society, who have the privilege of appointing an orator. This gentleman's subject was "The true Gentleman." He commenced by alluding to the distinction made in monarchical countries between those of what was termed gentle, and those of common birth. The blood of the former was supposed to be better than that of the latter, though why it should be so, neither history or tradition had informed us. In all ages of the world there had been men born of poor parents who were more true gentlemen than many scions of wealthy families. It was left to America to teach the world that it is the qualities of mind, and not the factitious advantage of riches, which make the gentleman.

Mr. SAMUEL T. CARTER, of this City, next addressed the assembly. His theme was "The Last of the Incas." The oration was really a fine effort for so young a man, and his hearers signified their approbation by long and loud plaudits at its close.

"The Choice of a Profession," was the subject chosen by the next orator, Mr. R. L. VAN KLEEK, of Flatbush, L. I. He was succeeded by Mr. GEORGE Z. GRAY, of Staten Island, who selected "JOHN SOBIESKI" as his subject, and waxed warm in eulogy of that renowned deliverer of Poland. Mr. GRAY's enunciation was good, and he did not offend by ungraceful, or too violent gesticulation, as some of the speakers did. He said, of course, nothing that was new about SOBIESKI—it would be difficult for any one to do that—but he showed a complete apprehension of the great features of his hero, and paid just homage to the valor and virtue of the patriot-warrior, "in whose grave were buried all the hopes of Poland."

Mr. WILLIAM H. COOKE, of Bloomfield, N. J., the representative of the Euclean Society, succeeded Mr. GRAY, and delivered a fine oration on "Unconscious Power." In our judgment, it was the best effort of the day, but such was not the opinion of the Committee appointed to recommend the "Webster Prize." Mr. COOKE, on concluding, received a shower of bouquets, and the applause which greeted him lasted some minutes.

The other orators were Mr. THOMAS CARTER, of this City, who chose for the subject of his address, "The Death of ZWINGLE;" Mr. F. H. ADAMS, of Peekskill, whose theme was "The Possibility of Greatness;" Mr. LAURENCE H. MILLS, of this City, who discoursed on "True Courage," and Mr. JOHN L. SERVIS, of Haverstraw, N. Y., whose theme was "Fame."

The presentation of the Webster prize to the best orator of the occasion was then made. The Committee appointed to decide on the merits of the orations, decided that it should be awarded to Mr. SAMUEL T. CARTER, for his discourse on "The Last of the Incas." The Committee also empowered the Chancellor to say that if a second prize had been at their disposal, they would gladly have awarded it to Mr. WM. H. COOKE, for his oration on "Unconscious Power." The decision of the Committee occasioned some surprise, and considerable dissatisfaction. The applause and the hisses strove together, and it was for a long time uncertain whether the disaffected would not outclamor the approvers. The band broke in with the "Druid Chorus," from "Norma,"—the Chancellor pronounced a benediction, and the audience dispersed, to reconsider the verdict of the Jury, at their leisure.

Special Aldermanic Committee on Stages.

At a meeting of the Committee, on Friday, for the relief of Broadway, Mr. SUDLOW was examined by Alderman BLUNT. He stated that he was proprietor of stages running on Bowery and Houston-street; would have very strong objections against stopping some of his omnibuses at the Park; it would disarrange his business, and would not satisfy the public. Our experience (said he) teaches us what no outsider can possibly know; is willing to try it, if it could be proved to be personally advantageous. The Alderman said he was satisfied that if the omnibus proprietors would allow the opportunity for the experiment it would be eminently successful.

After some further conversational palaver between the Alderman and the unconvinced stage proprietor, the latter somewhat reluctantly expressed his willingness to try it for one week—that is, provided the owners on the other routes would do the same.

Mr. SIMPSON, of the East Broadway line, was the next gentleman upon whom the Alderman directed his persuasive fire. If he was not in favor of it, (as the Alderman told him,) certainly he could not compel him. Mr. SIMPSON showed early indications of fusion—the melting point being reached in spite of the united judgment of Messrs. SUDLOW and himself that "it would not work well." They were both anxious to know whether, if the plan were adopted temporarily, any advantage would be taken of their consent afterwards. They were assured to the contrary. Ultimately it was suggested that it would be well to call a meeting of all the omnibus route proprietors, to ascertain if they could be willing to fall in with the favorite idea of Alderman BLUNT, namely —to abridge the number of stages going through to South Ferry.

Mr. SUDLOW promised the Committee he would call such a meeting and report the sense of it.

Mr. HASSON, who took part in the observations made, stated that at least twice as many omnibuses were needed as are in existence and use, and that if proper regulations were adopted, they would prove as useful as they were necessary.

Some of the Committee were of opinion that the corporation had power under the ordinances to interfere with the supposed privileges of the stage proprietors. They thought the Common Council were not bound to endure a nuisance, even though they had granted licenses. The vote of two-thirds of the corporation would place them beyond the mercy of the stage proprietors.

Alderman OWENS was decidedly of such an opinion, and though he would extend all courtesy to the stage owners, he contended that the Committee were not entirely in the hands of the proprietors; if it were so, they were not a deliberative body, and might as well adjourn at once.

Alderman OWENS then quoted the following section of the law on stage routes, which he adduced in support of the right of the Common Council to override or interfere with the supposed immunities of the stage owners:

"The Common Council shall have the right to make such regulations in reference to the running of stages and omnibuses in said City, as may be necessary for the convenient use and accommodation of the streets. It shall not be lawful to run stages or omnibuses in said City, except in conformity with this act."

The rest of the proceedings were entirely conversational, but of a very desultory character.

Adjourned to Wednesday night.

Milking the City Cow.

The Committee on Civil Courts of the Board of Aldermen, Alderman MONEGHAN Chairman, met on Friday afternoon in the City Hall, for the purpose of investigating the reasonableness of a lawyer's bill for the defence of a City Judge, which charge was referred to this Committee.

Judge LEMON, examined by Alderman MONEGHAN, stated that he was sued for false imprisonment about four years ago. Judge WHITING and Mr. CARPENTER were his counsel. The judgment was $500. In explanation as to why the bill of costs was so high, the matter contested being of so trivial a nature, Judge WHITING said the case was more than four years on the calendar, and then judgment was taken in default. Judge LEMON was of course bound to defend. The action was brought by one CHAMPLIN, and during the year there were upwards of 2,000 cases on the calendar. The costs would be the same in default as if the parties had proceeded to trial.

The Alderman said, it was not so much the legality of the claim that he disputed, but the amount of costs seemed so enormous. Mr. CARPENTER gave precedents in which bills of a similar character had been paid by the City. The Committee listened to other statements from Judge WHITING and Mr. CARPENTER tendered to show that the charge was extremely proper and moderate, upon which the Committee took time to consider and report.

Coroner's Inquests.

SUDDEN DEATH OF H. D. RICE, ESQ.—A VERY SINGULAR CASE—INABILITY OF THE PHYSICIANS TO ASCERTAIN THE CAUSE.

H. D. RICE, Esq., Superintendent of the Erie Express, and a well-known citizen, died suddenly on Thursday afternoon, at the residence of THOMAS A. MURPHY, No. 102 East Thirty-third-street, where, for a few days, he had been stopping. Coroner PERRY was notified, and held an inquest upon the body yesterday. The facts elicited were very singular. Dr. C. F. HEYWOOD, family physician to deceased, testified that he had not had occasion to prescribe for him for some time until Monday night, the 31st of March, when he appeared to be suffering from severe pains in the lower part of the abdomen. He sent him [illegible] prescription, consisting of suppositores of opium, and visited him again next morning, when the patient considered himself much better, and said he did not think he would need any further medical advice, but would send for the physician if he thought he needed one. "On Thursday, April 2," says Dr. HEYWOOD, "I made a second visit about noon. Deceased was at that time sitting in a large easy chair, with his feet elevated; his face was pale, pulse feeble, his manner subdued, and whole appearance indicating exhaustion and mental depression. He conversed chiefly concerning his business, which he said had been the occasion of much anxiety. I told him, after looking in vain for any symptoms of disease, excepting tenderness and slight swelling in the lower portion of the abdomen, that he needed repose, recreation and food. The compound infusion of gentian was written for, and wine advised to be taken at once. I was present at the autopsy which was made by Prof. J. C. DALTON; every organ in the body was carefully and minutely examined; no abnormal appearance was found, with the exception of a relaxed condition of the muscular tissue of the heart, and a minute amount of pus in the right epididymis."

TESTIMONY OF PROFESSOR DALTON.

Professor JOHN C. DALTON, of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, &c., &c., testified thus: I have made a post mortem examination of deceased, and found the heart in a flabby condition, a small amount of pus in the right epididymis, and an effusion of fibrine in the cavity of the right tunica vaginalis, and no other morbid appearances; I have not been able to form any opinion as to the cause of death.

TESTIMONY OF DR. A. K. GARDNER.

Dr. A. K. GARDNER, of No. 141 East Thirteenth-street, deposed—I was present at the autopsy made by Dr. DALTON, and corroborate the statement of the appearances as given by him.

Being pressed by Coroner PERRY for some statement as to the cause of death, Drs. GARDNER and HEYWOOD were of opinion that death might have ensued from syncope, and a verdict to that effect was rendered by the Jury.

Mr. RICE was 49 years of age. He was a native of Massachusetts, but resided in New-York for many years. Not long since he purchased the estate of N. P. WILLIS, near Newburg, and his family were there living at the time of his sudden death. They were notified of the event by telegraph.

SUICIDE BY TAKING SOME NARCOTIC POISON.

A man supposed to be named CHARLES WILSON, or WILLISTER, aged about 27 years, was found dead in his bed on Thursday afternoon at the Rainbow Hotel, in Beekman-street. An inquest upon the body was held yesterday by Coroner GAMBLE. W. J. HOWELL, one of the proprietors of the Hotel, deposed that deceased came to his house on Tuesday evening, about 8 o'clock and asked for a room. He registered his name as "CHARLES WILSON," from Albany, paid for his room and went to bed. He did not drink anything (adds Mr. HOWELL) and appeared perfectly sober. He came down stairs next morning and staid around the place all day. He was very quiet and seemed much depressed. He went to bed early on Wednesday night, and I did not see him again. About 3½ o'clock Thursday afternoon one of the servants came to say that room No. 23 (the one which deceased had engaged) was locked on the inside, and she could not make whoever was inside hear her knocking. I then went up with some other parties, and we opened the door and found deceased lying dead in bed. His pantaloons and the rest of his clothing were hanging up. I notified the police; I found a bill of LOVEJOY'S in his pocket for ten days' room hire, amounting to $5; it was not receipted; I went to inquire at Lovejoy's Hotel and found that deceased had been there and registered his name as "CHARLES WILLISTER," from Boston. I cannot say further.

Dr. O'HANLON made the post mortem examination. No external marks of violence were found upon the body. The lungs, heart and other viscera were in a healthy condition. The stomach and lungs were much congested. A bottle of chloroform, about two-thirds full, with the label partially scratched off, was found in the pocket of deceased. From the history of the case and the appearance of the deceased the Doctor was of opinion that death was caused by some narcotic poison. The Jury rendered a verdict of "Suicide by taking some narcotic poison."

DEATH FROM BURNS.

An infant named PATRICK CROSSMAN, died yesterday at the New-York Hospital, from injuries received by the explosion of a spirit lamp a few days since, at the residence of his parents, corner of Eleventh-avenue and Forty-sixth-street. Coroner CONNERY held an inquest upon the body, and the Jury rendered a verdict in accordance with the facts.

DEATH FROM DROWNING.

The body of PATRICK CORWIN, who was drowned on the 22d of February, was recovered on Wednesday, at the foot of Twenty-sixth-street, East River. Coroner CONNERY held an inquest upon it. Verdict: "Death by drowning." Deceased was 32 years of age.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—April 3.

Before Hon. Justice Davies.

THE DEFICIENCY IN THE FUNDS OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION—MANDAMUS DENIED.

The People ex rel. The Board of Education vs. Azariah C. Flagg, Comptroller, &c.—This was a motion for a mandamus, compelling the Comptroller to pay to the Board of Education the sum of $125,000. In December, 1854, the Board of Education found a deficiency in their funds amounting to $198,091 96, of which they notified the Common Council and asked an appropriation. The Common Council advanced the sum of $125,000, and reimbursed itself by moneys subsequently raised for the school purposes. The Board of Education objected to this, and claimed that the money advanced was a special appropriation made to supply the deficiency in their funds, and not a loan. They, therefore, moved for this mandamus to compel the payment of the money so reserved.

His Honor, Mr. Justice DAVIES, yesterday rendered quite an elaborate opinion upon the matter. He reviews the statutes bearing upon the subject, and concludes as follows: "If the moneys authorized by law to be raised for school purposes are inadequate to meet the necessary legal expenses of the school, I see no other relief to the Board of Education than an application to the Legislature for authority to the Supervisors to raise an additional sum. As the law now stands, I am quite clear that the Supervisors cannot go beyond the limit authorized, and that the Common Council have no power to raise money for the Board, except to meet deficiences, in anticipation of the next annual tax. Such deficiency may be reimbursed out of such annual tax, there being no other fund or tax from which it can be appropriately or legally paid.

As these views necessarily dispose of the main question in the case, I do not think it necessary to consider the others raised on the argument.

The application for a mandamus must therefore be denied."

Corwin vs. Corwin.—Motion to dissolve injunction denied; plaintiff to have leave to amend complaint by setting up fraud in execution, &c., of the lease.

Bernard vs. Le Grand et al.—Motion to vacate judgment granted.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Murphy vs. Howland.—Motion for judgment on account of frivolousness of answer denied.

Blesch vs. Blesch.—Motion for an order of reference denied.

MARINE COURT.

Before Judge McCarthy.

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING—THE SPIRIT OF LITIGATION.

Isaac R. Fithian vs. Young Chotes.—The plaintiff in this case is a grocer at Nos. 917 and 919 Broadway, and sued the defendant for a bill of groceries alleged to have been sold to him to the amount of $210 75. It seemed by the evidence that the only difference as to the payment was, whether it should be given in a note for three or four months, the plaintiff demanding the former and the defendant insisting on the latter. The claim was not disputed, and consequently the Court gave judgment for the plaintiff to the full amount claimed, together with costs and $12 allowance.

Before Judge Maynard.

Sarah Jane Hovey vs. John Wilson.—In this case, reported at length some time ago, an order was obtained by the defendant's attorney, granting a stay of proceedings for the purpose of effecting an appeal. No notice of filing security having been served on the plaintiff, Judge MAYNARD, yesterday, vacated the order, with $5 costs to the plaintiff.

J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR.

We copy the following from the editorial columns of the Boston Daily Ledger of Feb. 19, 1857. Mr. BARNARD, the gentleman alluded to, is a prominent citizen of Boston:

"J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR.—In the multitude of curatives that are almost daily offered to the public, it is very difficult to make a selection of any one that will prove valuable for all the purposes for which it is recommended. But, in our opinion, one specific has been discovered for complaints of the throat and lungs, that seems to be of inestimable worth. It is J. R. STAFFORD'S Olive Tar. From a pamphlet setting forth its many claims on those afflicted with the diseases above named, we learn that this remedy is not to be taken internally, after the ordinary methods, but it is used by Inhalation and Application. In this subtle way it performs its soothing and healing offices on the THROAT, LUNGS, NERVES, MUSCLES, JOINTS and SKIN. Olive Tar, it is claimed, contains an Electro-Magnetic power, which is capable of restoring to the system its lost VITALITY; and this is performed alike by the inhalation of its odor, and the outward application of its fluid. Several of our Physicians often employ it for Special Inhalation, and its curative properties they well understand. We know of many cures it has performed in cases of bronchial difficulties, in Coughs, Colds, and complaints of a similar character; and are able to give it our full recommendation.

We are informed by our fellow-citizen, JOHN M. BARNARD, Esq., that during a fit of sickness last Winter he had occasion to make use of the "Olive Tar," and found it even more efficacious than he had ventured to expect. He caused about three tablespoons full to be placed in a saucer over a basin of boiling water, heated by a night lamp, and found that its odor was not only a real DISINFECTANT of the sick room, but a most pleasant soother of the irritation of his throat and lungs. He improved immediately in his health, and now uses the Olive Tar, as occasion may require, in the reservoir of his furnace, satisfied that its volatile odor is of great service in rendering the atmosphere of his house both sweet and healthy at all times."

The above assertions are also fully verified by testimonials from the following well known persons:

WILLIAM B. TOWNSEND, Esq., Staten Island.
ISAAC V. FOWLER, Esq., New-York.

And of many others equally prominent.

J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR is sold at 50 cents a bottle, by the Stafford Olive Tar Company, No. 16 State-street, (east side Battery,) New-York, and by all druggists.

PARTIAL DEAFNESS AND DISCHARGES FROM THE EAR.—Dr. HARTLEY, Principal and Proprietor of the Philedelphia Ear Institution, is now in New-York City, and generously offers to attend all persons suffering from affections of the Ear, without charge until cured, thereby proving his success unequaled, and protecting the deaf from being swindled by paying self-styled Aurists exorbitant fees in advance, and the infliction of still more serious evils, by permitting the application of dangerous remedies by inexperienced and unskilful hands.

Dr. H. may here state, that he has no connection whatever with any person advertising to cure deafness. Neither has he given permission for the publication of a certificate, purporting to emanate from him, and cannot, therefore, be responsible for any alarming consequences resulting from rashness and desperation. The loss of money may not be material to some persons, but the deprivation of one of the most important of the senses ought to be regarded and treated with more than ordinary solicitude.

Deafness, noise in the head, and all disagreeable discharges from the ear, speedily and permanently removed, without causing the least pain or inconvenience. A cure in all cases guaranteed where malformation does not exist.

Thirteen years' close and almost undivided attention to this branch of special practice, has enabled him to reduce his treatment to such a degree of success as to find the most confirmed and obstinate cases yield by a steady attention to the means prescribed.

The destruction by fire of the Institution of which Dr. HARTLEY was the head, having temporarily released him from his duties in Philadelphia, he will receive calls during each morning at No. 105 West Ninth-street.

RHEUMATIC, NEURALGIC, and all other pains cease, when J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR is applied, because Olive Tar contains Electro Magnetism, which it transmits to the body, increasing its vitality.

Supervisor BELL presented the following preamble and resolution, which was adopted by a unanimous vote:

Whereas, It appears from the public papers that there is a law now pending before the Legislature of this State, investing a Board of Six Governors with the management of the Alms House of this County; and whereas, the passage of the same in our judgment would be very prejudicial to the interests of the County, therefore

Resolved, That the Special Committee having in charge the application of this Board, for a law altering the method of furnishing supplies for the Alms House, be directed and authorized to remonstrate in the behalf of this Board, against the passage of said law creating a Board of Six Governors.

The Board adjourned for two weeks.

FRIDAY, April 3—P. M.

The indications to-day in the market for Money, confirm the improvement noticed yesterday. Without being cheap, the supply of means on the street is liberal and on the increase. They are lent with every sign of confidence in the general soundness of trade, and in the decidedly favorable bearing of the account current of the country with Europe. This last point is especially important, while Money keeps dear in London. We find that our Foreign Counting-houses and the Bullion-brokers concur in the belief that the remittances due to England and the Continent have been kept up with more than the usual punctuality, leaving still to the credit of many of the American banking accounts on the other side larger balances than have been known in April for several years. In this view of the prospect ahead, the probable Gold movement for May and June is not likely to be materially influenced by the price of bills, until after the rate passes the point of 109 ⅜ cent. Such is the impression of parties likely to be thoroughly informed on the subject. Though looking to what has occurred in these months the two past seasons, and the continued high ruling of discounts in England, we have calculated, without the slightest apprehension of the effect on the money market—for similar shipments were made in 1855 and 1856, without disturbance—on the export of something like fifteen millions to Europe, exclusive of the transit operations in Spanish Doubloons passing from Europe through New-York to Havana. And this calculation has reference to the following figures:

EXPORT OF SPECIE FROM NEW-YORK AND BOSTON.

	1857. Estimated.	1856. Actual.	1855. Actual.
April	$4,000,000	$3,986,000	$3,388,000
May	5,000,000	5,540,009	7,186,000
June	6,000,000	5,843,000	5,604,000
Total	$15,000,000	$15,369,000	$16,678,000

The business in Exchange for the Arago, sailing to-morrow, has not been important to-day. The Bankers are generally indifferent about selling, except at full rates. The range on London is an eighth wider than quoted yesterday, say 108⅜@108¾, with some sales of first-class bills at ⅛@⅜. Francs, as before, 5:23¾@5:22½ net. Disconnts, prime lists of paper, 8@9 ⅜ cent. to wider rates for very short bills. Demand loans easy to be had by the leading Brokers, at 7 ⅜ cent. A good employment in this way is some few quarters. Collections are coming in from the West favorably. The Southern Bank balances are on the increase. The Import trade complain of a sudden falling off in the demand for goods, and warehousing for the new tariff hill will begin to diminish the current cash duties at the Custom-House by the 1st May; some of the trade say before the 15th inst. The Sub-Treasury disbursements today were $388,484, against $108,629 received. The balance reduced this afternoon $15,255,218. The offerings at some of the large Banks yesterday and to-day fell off from the demand of last week, notwithstanding the preparations for the 4th April.

A fair degree of activity was manifested on the Stock Exchange this forenoon, with a further advance of ¼@⅝ ⅜ cent. on New-York and Erie, but less firmness on part of the Western list. La Crosse and Milwaukee and Mississippi, were exceptions to this remark, both being in good request, and the former 1 ⅜ cent. higher than yesterday. New-York Central steady, but kept down by daily sweeping offers to sell in lots of 1,000

VOL. VI.....NO. 1730 NEW-YORK, MONDAY, APRIL 6, 1857. PRICE TWO CENTS.

...ay last several letters were shown to ... prominent officers in the army of General ... in Nicaragua, by gentlemen of this City, who ... warmly attached to his cause. They all speak of ... attacks upon San Jorge, and of the simul... upon Rivas by the allies, and agree in ... with the statements published on the ... of the arrival of the Texas. They agree that ... Rivas left Rivas on the 16th of March, with ... body of his little army, for the purpose of ... San Jorge; that he was doing well there ... the allies, when he heard firing at Rivas; that ... immediately thereon abandoned the fight at San ... and hastened back. When near Rivas he ... fire on the enemy's rear, while General HEN... was using grape with much effect upon ... front. The result was a slaughter of some ... hundred of the allies and a stampede of ... rest. More detailed statements of the battle ... expected, but have not arrived. General CAL... assures us that letters sent to FERMIN FERRER, ... MM. HERRINGSEN and to himself, have not been re... ceived. He is under the impression that they ... been purloined. Captain GARRISON received a lette... from Mr. MCDONALD, the agent of CHARLES MORGAN ... Sons, giving an account of the late proceedings ... similar to what has already appeared in the TIMES. ... We give extracts from

A LETTER FROM AN OFFICER.

It contains some statements not heretofore published. After speaking in general terms of the healthy condition of the troops under his command, he says: ... The fight was in fact a second edition of the Virginia battle, but we had a better chance a... ... You remember how they scattered when w... ... from Masaya. Well, here they didn't hav... chance. The old St. Jorge road, you know, ... lined with native ranches, and fenced with the cac... tus. Probably 200 or 300 got into these huts, and es... caped by the gardens in the rear. We killed or took ... among all the rest. You never heard such a howl... as went up against the poor devils as when we opened, for ... the first time, on them. Gen. SANDERS facetiously remarked, ... was giving them all the Laus allowed. They flung ... their arms every way. This morning we are bring... ing them into Rivas, half of them loaded. ... We shan't need any more importations from ... California for a while. Of course you will ... all want to know how many we killed. ... If anybody asks you, you can say—as our ... old water-cure friend used to—"any number ... you please." WILSON began to count them ... and got up to 320, and said he thought it was wasting ... the precious hours of a probationary state to spend ... any more time on dead greasers. It is certain that ... we finished at least 500—and have got about as many ... more on our hands in a most deplorable condition. ... But the General has given orders to take good care ... of them all, and no doubt we shall save all that's ... worth having. One thing you may be sure of: they ... will never stand up against us again—even if there ... was any sort of harmony amongst their leaders. So ... you may consider the hard fighting about over.

Your old horse is here. Col. CASEY rode him in ... from San Juan. You will see by the papers an ac... count of his skirmish with the greasers. He is a ... brave fellow.

Another of the private letters shown us is directed to a party in this City, whose relation to present movements in Nicaragua is of a character that should entitle the statements made to respect. A detailed account is given in the letter of the attack on St. Jorge by General WALKER on the 16th ult. Corroborating as it does, in all the main particulars, the account of the engagement already published in the TIMES, we consider it unnecessary to republish the details again. This letter gives General WALKER's loss as 10 killed and 40 wounded. The number of Costa Ricans killed, wounded, and taken prisoners, are stated as being in the neighborhood of 800 men. After citing the particulars of the battle on the 16th ult., the writer refers to WALKER's present position and his intended future movements. We subjoin three extracts from this portion of the letter, as giving new and important information:

... I see the New York papers, and, indeed, the papers of the States, generally, are giving most doleful accounts of the present position of WALKER. According to their statements, WALKER is deficient in every knew of war, men, ammunition, provisions, and money. My previous advices to you I trust have convinced you of the folly of giving credit to newspaper stories. General WALKER has at his command now all the men he needs to accomplish the ends he has in view in this country—there is no lack of provisions or of armaments of war. He has got the steam engine in the arsenal, of which I wrote you in my last letter, in complete operation and every facility perfected for keeping his men supplied with ammunition, guns, and artillery, generally. ... It is astonishing what astounding stories are told of desertions from WALKER's army. One would suppose there were not men enough left to beat a drum for retreat. I can assure you that not one good man has left the army. There has been desertions, as there is in any war, and will be. The sum total of the desertions will not, however, exceed one hundred men; these have been almost exclusively Germans and Frenchmen whom General WALKER has been more anxious to get rid of than retain. Of Americans who have left they comprise such as came on here expecting to lead any other life bn a soldier's life. Of these a few went away because they expected at once to be placed at the head of the command, or the next thing to it—they were not gratified in this, and thus became disgusted. The balance of the few Americans leaving were cowards, whom the scent of powder and the whistling of balls frightened off. All these have been a good riddance. As to the German and French deserters, I will add that General WALKER has actually given instructions to allow every possible facility to be given them to desert. Where one of either of these nationalities has been captured and brought back, it has been through inadvertence or ignorance; when one has been shot, it has been to make his riddance sure. ... Gen. WALKER, at my writing, is in most excellent spirits. All the officers are feeling jovial and fine. The brilliant assault following the engagement of St. George, which I have detailed to you, has stirred up the natives with encouragement and enthusiasm. I tell you Gen. WALKER's plan to conquer this country is a good one, and his men I believe begin to appreciate what it is. This plan, as unfolded to you in one of my earliest letters, he will rigidly adhere to. He will allow the allied forces to exhaust their resources, and when their resources of men, and arms and ammunition are exhausted, then he will strike his ultimate blow. I tell you Nicaragua is ours. I tell you this confidently and knowingly, and with this declaration I close my letter.

Other letters have been placed in our hands. They give nothing additional to what has been already published in the TIMES.

RECEPTION OF THE NEWS IN NEW-ORLEANS.

NEW-ORLEANS, Saturday, April 4.

The late Nicaraguan news has excited General WALKER's friends here, and large collections of money were made to-day, and more recruits and provisions will be sent on to him as speedily as possible.

REPORTED DEFEAT OF GEN. WALKER A HOAX.

BALTIMORE, Saturday, April 4.

The Wilmington Journal admits that the account of the defeat of General WALKER, purporting to have been received from a vessel that put into the mouth of Cape Fear River, was a first of April hoax, and chuckles over the success it met with in deceiving a portion of the press.

NEWS FROM HAVANA.

Reformation of the Tariff—Walker News in Havana—Proposed New Line of Steamers to Aspinwall—Miscellaneous News.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

HAVANA, Sunday, March 29, 1857.

The Diario de la Marina has published two long articles quite recently, on the policy of Spain's making certain reformations in her present tariff, particularly in linen and cotton goods, and proposes a reduction of fifty per cent. If this measure is carried into effect as will probably be done, it will give the death blow to smuggling, which is principally done with these two articles. Almost all the linen goods are introduced as cotton, and the difference is equally divided between the merchant and the vistas. The annual amount of this smuggling is calculated to yield the officers and merchants nearly a million. I might mention some of the principal mercantile houses in this city, whose whole fortune has been made in this manner. This is a notorious fact, and is the common topic, so much so, that a vista ciega is considered one of the fattest offices in the gift of the Crown. Vista, in Spanish, means sight.

It would be well for the Diario to look over some other articles, which demand a thorough reform. It is Spain's policy, as well as her interest, to imitate the example given by the last Congress, in the reduction of her tariff, which is particularly oppressive on all articles introduced into the Island from the United States. This would be the best way to bring about a union with their northern neighbors, with whom it is advantageous and necessary to be on good terms. It would increase the trade between the two countries, and be the most effectual barrier against all piratical invasions, and bind them together in perfect harmony.

The last Aspinwall steamer brought over some one hundred and odd men belonging to the fillibustering ranks of General WALKER. They were a hard look ing crowd, and seemed to be qualified for any emergency but civilizing the barbarous Nicaraguans. They were in the greatest want and destitution, and expressed great joy at finding themselves near their own homes once more. Before leaving Costa Rica, they published a card, inviting their comrades to follow their example, and desert the cause of WALKER, whom they represented to be a villain of the blackest dye. Their passage to the United States was paid by the Government of Costa Rica. From all the accounts we have received, the drama is fast drawing to a close, the conclusion of which will inevitably be the counterpart of what was done by the fillibusters with SALAZAR and his companions. WALKER will find no friend to plead for his life. Padre VIGIL has also been designated as one of the victims to be sacrificed to Central American revenge.

The storm on the Isthmus continues to gather fast, and New-Granada is obstinate in her purpose of refusing all the overtures made by the American Government. As Mr. BUCHANAN has expressed himself rather explicitly on future acquisitions of territory, it may reasonably be supposed that strong measures will be adopted to obtain satisfaction and indemnification. The subject is exciting profound sensation in the high circles of Havana, as adducing grounds on which to form a correct estimate of the policy to be pursued towards Spain. It has been proposed to form a company of propellers between this place and Aspinwall, to compete with the American line; but I believe the plan has not found much echo among our merchants, who have been very unsuccessful in all their attempts of steam navigation. Zangroniz' Company of European steamers has cured them entirely of all desires to invest in this kind of property. The Spanish Government has been unable to get bidders for carrying the mail between Cadiz and Havana at $80,000 monthly.

The work on the new railroad progresses finely. About five hundred men are now employed. Messrs. LAMA, TORIZES, FESSER and ESTEBUN have bought the Colisco Railroad for the sum of $1,400,000, payable $100,000 annually. A branch will be made immediately to Bemba. This road has been extremely unfortunate, and I think the shareholders have done very well in disposing of it to parties who are more competent to manage such things.

Considerable excitement prevailed in our City in the early part of this week, owing to discoveries of false dividends having been declared by the former Director, Señor LEAONE. The shares fell from eighty per cent. premium to par. The subject is being investigated before a magistrate.

The Ravels leave us on the Black Warrior for New-Orleans. They were successful to the last. GOTTSCHALK is now at Sancti Espiritu. He will give but one more concert in Havana before leaving. The Matanzas Opera Troupe are expected to make a tour through the Southern States.

News from Mexico.

New-Orleans papers of Sunday last contain advices from the City of Mexico, by the way of Tampico, to the 17th ult. The country was quiet, except in the Western States. The serious aspect of the difficulty with Spain had given rise to much apprehension. General confidence was expressed in the result of General LAFRAGUA's mission.

The Spanish residents of the Republic appear to be anticipating the threatened attack upon the Republic by their Government at Madrid. They are assailing Mexicans with a high hand. On the 20th ult., 12 of them well armed, attacked the rancho of Olvera, demended arms of the Mexican proprietor, Sr. OLMA, ill-treating and insulting him, his overseers, and his family and servants, by way of enforcing their demand. On the arms being of necessity delivered to them, they proceeded to demand money, and got $1,300, all that Sr. OLVERA possessed, and then with more threats and insults, locked up all the inmates in the place, and made off with their booty, also taking their horses with them. They were pursued, however, and discovered; six of them seized, $360, the horses, and one of the fire-arms being also recovered.

The Siglo XIX, of the 26th ult., has a lengthy account of the proceedings of Blancarte, from which it appears that while professing determination to submit to government authority, he was, in fact, persisting in acting contrary to orders.

Amusements.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—The sterling comedy company of this establishment commences a season of genuine entertainments to-night. The caste of the "Rivals" which is given is superb: Sir Anthony, Mr. BLAKE; Jack, Mr. LESTER, Sir Lucius, Mr. BROUGHAM; Falkland, Mr. DYOTT; Acres, Mr. WALCOT; David, Mr. GEORGE HOLLAND, Julia, Mrs. HOEY, Lydia Languish, Miss GANNON; Mrs. Malaprop, Mrs. VERNON. Such a combination of rare talent has seldom been witnessed.

NIBLO'S THEATRE.—The glorious RAVELS are still in the ascendency, and attract large and enthusiastic audiences. To-night a new ballet will be produced called "L'Almee," followed by the pantomime of the "Conscript," and preceded by tight-rope exercises.

The Italian Opera Troupe under PAINE will commence at this house on Monday next.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—A gorgeous spectacle prepared with extreme care, and at unusual cost, will be produced here to-night. It is called the "Last Days of Pompeii," and has some effective dramatic situations which will be ably rendered by the members of the Stock Company, assisted by Mr. LORRAINO.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—Another petite comedy will be produced here to-night, called "Living too Fast," after which the successful and beautiful piece called "The Elves."

BURTON'S THEATRE.—SHAKESPEARE'S Comedy of the "Winter's Tale" will be revived here to-night, with Mr. J. W. WALLACK, Jr., as Leontes, and Mr. BURTON as Autolycus. It will be produced with the same care which marked the production of this piece at the Chambers-street establishment two years ago.

PURDY'S NATIONAL THEATRE.—"Life in Brooklyn" is the first piece here to-night, followed by "Raoul," and the burlesque of "Clam-eel."

MASONIC CONCERT.—This entertainment is definitively fixed to come off on Saturday next. Miss GILLER, Mr. OLE BULL, Signor GIANNONI, Signor GASPARONI, and the Mendelssohn Union have already volunteered their services, and will be sustained by a full orchestra under Mr. G. W. MORGAN.

BARNUM'S MUSEUM.—Mr. C. W. CLARKE, the very active and popular director of amusements at this establishment, takes his benefit to-day and to-night. He has provided an excellent bill, and will be assisted by Mr. and Mrs. E. L. DAVENPORT in the evening, (as Master Walter and Julia, in the play of the "Hunchback,") and by Mr. CHARLES WALCOT and Mr. G. HOLLAND, in the afternoon, (in "Out for a Holiday.") In addition to these distinguished artists, Bryant's Minstrels will discourse much excellent (Negro) music. The frequenters of the Museum have seldom had such an opportunity.

BUCKLEY'S SERENADERS.—The "Essence of Ole Virginny" and "Young America," and the "Old Folks' Concert," with minstrelsy of a very superior quality, are announced for to-night and during the week.

Musical.

The New-York Harmonic Society gives an entertainment to-night at Dodworth's Saloon, on which occasion Dr. LOEWE's cantata of the "Seven Sleepers" will be performed. The solos will be rendered by Miss BRAINERD, Miss AMDEN, Mr. GARDNER, Mr. WEST, and other members of the Society, assisted by its full choral strength. After the Cantata, Barrow's Te Deum and Jubliate will be given, with solos by Mrs. ANNA ELIOT.

SOIREE AT RUTGERS INSTITUTE.—The young ladies of Rutgers Institute gave a musical soirée on Friday evening, under the lead of their teacher, Mr. LASAR. The house was crowded, and the musical performance of the young ladies were excellent. A number of difficult pieces, rarely attempted by young singers, were given with precision and delicacy.

A COMET.—There is a telescopic comet now in the northwestern part of the sky, moving eastward. It was observed through the large equatorial of the National Observatory on Friday night. Its position was as follows:

	R. A.			Dec.
	h.	m.	s.	h.	m.	s.
March 27, at.....	8	15	17	1	32	45

This comet was discovered in Leipsic, Feb. 22, by Prof. D'ARREST, and on the 26th of March at Newark, N. J., by Mr. VAN ARSDALE.—National Intelligencer.

It is now said that the final sittings of the Paris Conference on Turkish affairs, (which will be chiefly devoted to the question of the Principalities,) will be held in June.

The third meeting of the Neufchatel Conference at Paris will take place shortly, instructions of a more favorable cast having been received from Berlin.

Austria is on the point of breaking off diplomatic relations with Sardinia, and the Sardinian Chamber of Deputies has voted, by 103 to 14, the considerable sum of 5,000,000 francs to put the fortifications of Alessandria into an immediate state of defence.

Full instructions were sent from Cadiz, on the 12th, to Gen. CONCHA, at Havana, respecting the difficulties with Mexico; meantime, the Mexican Envoy has arrived at Madrid.

The Brussels Nord publishes the text of the treaty of peace between Britain and Persia.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times, writing on the 19th of March, says:

The Government received yesterday news from Naples. It is said that a reconciliation with France and England is becoming not merely possible, but probable, and that an attaché of the French foreign office will soon leave for Naples on a private mission.

A Dutch journal, the Nord Brabander, publishes a letter from Batavia, dated the 9th of January, in which it is stated that two British ships of war have forced an entrance into the Japanese port of Nangasaki, breaking through a chain which was stretched across it. This statement is very much in need of confirmation.

The London Times of a recent date contains a list of the British vessels now on the China station. They nnmber fifteen sailing ships and nineteen steamers. Besides these, several first-class war steamers and a squadron of twenty gun boats have recently left England for the seat of the disturbances at Canton, and have taken out over five thousand troops. The Paris Pays says of the French operations:

"France, with a view to the operations of the approaching campaign, keeps Admiral GUERIN's squadron in the Chinese waters, which squadron will join its efforts to those of the naval division commanded by Admiral GENOUILLY; thus our naval force will be on a respectable footing. If the maritime means of France and England are well employed, the Chinese authorities will necessarily improve the previous situation. The more imposing the force employed to support a plenipotentiary the more likely is the better success of the negotiations, for the Chinese will see that they have nothing to gain by continuing hostilities.

It is reported that MEHEMET BEY (the Polish Colonel BANOVA,) with 300 men equipped by English sympathisers, had landed in Circassia, from the English steamer Kangaroo, to aid the Circassians. M. BOUTENIEFF, the Russian Minister, at Constantinople, has demanded explanations from Britain on the subject.

The English papers are full of electioneering addresses, almost to the exclusion of other news. There are now six candidates in the field for London. Liverpool is contested by Mr. EVART (for reelection), TURNER, and HORNEFALL. Manchester candidates are SIR JOHN POTTER, Mr. GIBSON, and Mr. LOWE. Mr. CORDEN offers himself for Haddersfield.

The Irish Liberal Party are understood to have agreed on this programme for the hustings. The leading points are as follows:

1. Tenant right as recently modified.
2. The disendowment to all religious sects, and the abolition of the Irish Church as a State establishment.
3. Religious freedom and equality, involving the repeal of the ecclesiastical titles act.
4. Opposition to any Ministry which will not comply with the foregoing demands.
5. Enlargement of the County franchize (on the basis of LOCKE KING's motion,)
6. The abolition of the property qualification.
7. The reduction of the qualification for voters in towns to £5.

It is stated that the title under which the Speaker of the House of Commons will go to the House of Lords is that of "Lord BROMLEY," the right honorable gentleman having property in that part of the County of Middlesex.

The question of a modification of the French Cabinet is, after a long interval, once more among the rumors of the day. The object is believed to be the incorporation of the Cabinet with the Department of State and the imperial household.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

LONDON, Friday, March 20, 1857.

We are still in the crisis, or rather hovering on the verge, before taking the final plunge into the vortex, of a general election. Vortex, indeed, it may be truly called, for Scylla and Charybdis and the Maelstrom put together but faintly typify the whirlpool confusion of party and opinion which now covers the face of this once merry England of ours with scowling suspicion and sinister incredulity, concerning all political professions and professors. To-morrow the present Parliament closes, and ere this day week half the hustings in the kingdom will have given their verdict, not as to this or that policy, for there is none, or to this or that party, for there is none, but as to whether Lord PALMERSTON, at 73, is to guide the destinies of Great Britain how and whither he pleases. That is the sole and exclusive question at issue. That question is submitted in this naked form by his lordship's followers—"appendages," as Lord DERBY calls them, by way of retaliating the sobriquet of "atoms," bestowed on his adherents by Lord PALMERSTON. The opponents of ministers accept that issue also. Mr. DISRAELI, pointing to the appointment of Lord ELGIN as Ambassador to China, after the official declaration that BOWRING and BOWRING's course alone should be in the ascendant, says that the whole aim of the Premier has been to "hasten a year"—that is, to carry on Government without the control of Parliament—which the septuagenarian functionary is clearly determined to do.

The nomination of ELGIN to China took everybody by surprise here on Saturday, for though public opinion pointed to him as a very eligible person, he was known to have wounded the amour propre of the Premier, and, moreover, as you were duly informed, he had a motion for Tuesday last condemnatory of the Government in respect to Anglo-American matters. So sudden and unexpected, even by himself, was the bestowal of this post, that he had not time to withdraw his notice of motion; and there it stood, on the books of the Peers House of Legislature, for two days after the announcement, that the mover had become a servant of the Administration he meant to censure.

The precipitancy of this appointment, and the circumstances under which it takes place, recalls the case of Sir C. NAPIER's nomination to India, amidst the perturbation occasioned by the Sikh war, which was all over, and the business it pertained to disposed of long before the gallant General got to his destination, though he was much more nimble in setting out than ELGIN is likely to be. If any real good was to have been done by such an official, he should have left here, as CORDEN pointed out, by the very steamer that took to Hong Kong the Commons' condemnation of BOWRING's proceedings. Every moment is vital, yet weeks will elapse before ELGIN is ready to start; and when he is ready, he will take the whole business as easy as though the object of his mission were one of congratulation to his Celestial Majesty for having taken to himself a sixteenth rib. ELGIN, it is understood, goes out, when he does go, by way of Paris, where he is to have a conference with LOUIS NAPOLEON as to the intended part France means to play in these far-off waters. Perhaps, however, that intention may be considerably modified by the arrival, ere long, of the Czar himself, who is believed to have a remarkably knowing eye to affairs in the Flowery Land, and in other lands, too—the land of rose leaves, to wit, namely, Persia, whose Ambassador, FERUK KAHN, has just arrived here; his hat will be the astonishment of all natives in these latitudes for some time to come, beginning with Lord PALMERSTON himself, a whose usual Saturday night soirée his Excellency will figure to-morrow.

A piece of intelligence still more indicative of Muscovite prescience as to coming events in the Oriental World, is announced to day, namely, that Russia is carrying through Persia, Herat, and along the Caspian, and all those latitudes, such a system of electric telegraph as will give St. Petersburg prior possession of news from India several weeks in advance of London. Does anybody suppose that she goes to this expense for nothing, or merely to furnish the Bee with a honey-pot of Hindoo gossip in advance of the Times. Of course if she is asked anything about it she will be prepared with some cock-and-a-bull tale about the necessity of keeping up communications with her Circassian Provinces. Then, by the way, she has again just sustained another defeat by the invincible mountaineers, whose bravery inflicts even a less remarkable blow upon Russian military prestige than ridicule upon that stultified Western diplomacy which excluded the heroic population of the northeast shore of the Black Sea from the circle that should have drawn a ring of fire round the hyperborean Colossus.

Fresh material for Russian astuteness is every day springing up throughout Europe, saying nothing of more remote regions. The animosity between Austria and Sardinia is coming to a head so rapidly that the Ambassador of the former Power at Turin has received instructions to withdraw promptly in case he does not receive satisfactory assurances, which of course he won't, as to the future policy of Piedmont in Italy.

A much more alarming announcement has just been made, in the shape of a most elaborate State paper presented by the French Commissioner at Rome to his own Government, wherein he pronounces a decided judgment against the withdrawal of the French troops in the Papal States, not only now, but within any probable period of time. He states, in great detail, his reasons for this conclusion, and very curious they are; for while proving that the Pontifical Administration is quite a model of clemency and excellence in every respect, he admits that it is so exceedingly good as to be impracticable through native machinery, and must needs be sustained by external force. He confesses that this is a very lamentable condition of things, but contends that it is infinitely wiser for Europe in general, and France in particular, to deal with the necessity in the manner it is being dealt with, than to risk the certain, inevitable and tremendous consequences that would accrue to Italy in the first place, and to the whole Continent immediately afterwards, in the event of the Pope being left to his own resources. The practical bearing of these disclosures on English politics will be very considerable, as soon as the more personal considerations about PALMERSTON, or NO PALMERSTON, have somewhat worn down; for it is clear that the concerns of the Continent must speedily and enduringly engage us, let the noble lord endeavor to eschew them as he may by raising the cry of combination against him individually.

Sir JAMES GRAHAM, in addressing his Carlisle constituency the other day, bitingly dealt with this universal cant of coalition, by repeating the saying of BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, that there is no accusation knaves so readily believe as knavery. The mot told home, as do all the sayings of this able man, himself about the most unscrupulous among us. If, as the poet says of the passions, "he best can paint them who has felt them most," Sir JAMES ought to be the highest possible authority on all points that affect tortuous conduct or sinister motives; for certainly the burglar of MAZZINI's letters, the pimp of the Austrian Police, the libeler of many of the officers of the late Crimean War, who were proved to have said and done the very reverse of what he knowingly alleged,—the man who used his own dexterity in debate and official adroitness to run down our poor, harum-scarum, but nevertheless heroic old son-of-gun, Admiral NAPIER;—a person of these and innumerable similar antecedents ought to be a judge how far knavee can best appreciate, if not actually relish knavery. Yet, in the very speech so uttered, he also says, and says truly—of such contradictions are we all made up—that it was only a sense of duty that compelled him to relinquish the office of First Lord of the Admiralty, which he held for some time after PALMERSTON became Premier.

On Tuesday evening the stipulations of the treaty with Denmark for the abolition of the Sound Dues, intelligence of the signature of which had been communicated by telegraph, were brought before Parliament by Mr. BRAMLEY-MOORE, who was a member of the Select Committee by whom the subject was investigated last session, and took a decided par against their abolition. As the sum which the country will be called upon to pay for the capitalization of the dues payable by British shipowners and merchants amounts to considerably more than a million sterling, Mr. BRAMLEY MOORE thought that information should be furnished as to the precise stipulations of the treaty. The Chancellor of the Exchequer explained that, though the treaty comes into operation on the 1st of April next, to suit the convenience of the Governments who have made similar treaties with Denmark, and who have no Parliament to consult on the subject, yet the execution of the general treaty has been made, by the seventh article, dependent upon the sanctions required by the constitutions of the respective countries; whilst the separate convention between the British and Danish Governments provides that the amount to be paid by the former as compensation to the latter for the loss of the tolls, in the event of Parliament giving its sanction, shall be paid within three months after the passing of the act required to give effect to the arrangement. In the meantime, the Danish Government will maintain a sort of status quo by taking security from all vessel passing the Sound for the payment of the dues in the event of the treaty failing to receive the sanction of Parliament. The faith of the country is, therefore, by no means pledged, and the new House of Commons will be free to deal with the matter as may seem best.

Two Parliamentary documents have been issued this week which have a close connection with a subject brought under the attention of the British Government by Capt. GALTON, in his recent report on American Railways. Canada, he said, in speaking of the projected railway to the Pacific, should be connected by such communication with Vancouver's Island, and the settlement of the fertile region between Lake Superior and the Red River, which would thus be facilitated, would be the best means of avoiding future difficulties on the subject of the boundary. The first document is a dispatch from Mr. LABOUCHERE to Gov. HEAD, stating that it is the intention of Her Majesty's Government to bring the affairs of the Hudson's Bay Company under the investigation of a Committee of the House of Commons, and desiring him to consider what steps may be necessary to represent the views of the provincial Government. Gov. HEAD replies by inclosing a report of a Committee of the Executive Council, dated the 17th of January last, stating that the general feeling in Canada is that the western boundary of the Province extends to the Pacific; but His Excellency carefully avoids expressing any opinions of his own on this point. The Committee observe that "the tracing and fixing on the ground the line of separation between the United States and these territories is of great importance. The rapid settlement of Minnesota, shortly to be admitted a State of the American Union, renders this the more necessary, for as civilization approaches the boundary, so will be increased the difficulty of maintaining the distinction between the rights of the two nations on the frontier. The Committee have reason to believe that difficulties in this respect have already occurred, or at least have been threatened, and the importance cannot be overrated of early guarding against such." The second paper consists of extracts from the royal instructions to Governor MURRAY, dated 1763, and the letters patent appointing the late and present Governors, defining the boundaries of the province, which, as regards Canada West, are stated to be, on the west, "the channel of Detroit, Lake St. Clair, the River St. Clair, Lake Huron, the west shore of Drummond Island, that of St. Joseph and Sugar Island, thence into Lake Superior;" and on the south, "beginning at the stone boundary between Lancaster and Longueil, Lake St. Francis, the St. Lawrence, the Lake of the Thousand Islands, Lake Ontario, the Niagara River, and Lake Erie." The assumption of the Canadian Committee is thus shown to be baseless, and the prudent precaution of Governor HEAD, in not committing himself to their views, is fully justified.

I now append the promised extracts from the book of travels in Italy frequently referred to, as indicating the writer's (a "British Female's") views of Mr. FILLMORE, and others whom she met in her recent tour:

Monsieur Rosbif is better taught than to ask impertinent questions, where he knows they will never be answered, so he pays his money and grumbles, and pays it again, never hoping for any change. Mr. FILLMORE seemed to notice everything in his travels, and to have drawn clear deductions from all he had seen, and we learned much of interest from him during after-conversations. He has a clear voice, and an attractive way of speaking, that seems to possess the power of making you view things from his own level. He appears to enlarge the understanding of his listeners, and you find yourself talking of governments, of the difficulties arising from America being divided into such intensely opposite interests; North and South; commerce versus agriculture; Slaves and no Slaves, till you get frightened and stop. Yet there is a deep pleasure in listening and talking thus; it is totally different from English conversation, so bold and free, you shake your wings, as if after long imprisonment you were in the free, pure air, with nothing to stay your flight, if only your wings be unfettered. We were one day talking of the almost impossibility (I mean as a general rule) of the negro becoming an intellectual being; and as their intellectual faculties are unused, so their senses are quickened; their sight how keen, finding the trail, where European eyes discerned no trace of feet. From this we passed to society at large. I said: "In England, the intellectual classes most certainly belong to neither the highest, nor the lowest." "Precisely," said Mr. FILLMORE, "they are of those who have been most obliged to cultivate their faculties; it is with the mind as with the body, if any muscles are unused, they contract and grow smaller; and every power of mind increases in like measure with its use." And as with the mind, so with the spirit, also; the ten talents gain other ten, while the "hidden treasure lies useless." Speaking of agriculture, he said, "he had been greatly struck in England by the way in which the land was urged to the utmost—every bit of ground being cultivated to the greatest extent. Our implements," he added, "are perhaps the best, bnt it is necessity with us, as labor is scarce, and we have to provide otherwise." He then contrasted the activity and life of England with the decay and languor of Italy. Of the religion, he said: "There is much to captivate many minds—the music, the painting, the devotion, the equality, high and low kneeling side by side, before their common Father." "Yes, that is very striking," said I. He looked up earnestly, and added, in, I believe, these words: "The more we forget station in religion, the nearer we are to Christianity." The Ex-President admired our writers in the most hearty way; he remarked that MACAULAY's description of the trial of WARREN HASTINGS was a perfect "Daguerreotype of the scene." CARLYLE and the German school did not come in for much praise; bnt he liked "Gray's Elegy" so entirely, that he had been to Stoke Pagis to see his grave.

With one passage more we conclude:

At Lyons we met some of our American friends, who were there for a marriage, previous to starting off for Switzerland. One of the ladies told me she had crossed the Atlantic seven times; they appear to think it nothing of a journey, and speak of it as we do of crossing the channel. Many of them return without ever having seen the "motherland," and one impression seemed to have been made on all—that we are not considered a hospitable people—unless to a Mrs. BEECHER STOWE, who, by abusing the institutions of her own land, has secured the sympathy of part of ours. I think the Americans feel this the more deeply, because it was England who fastened the institution of Slavery upon them. I do not think I met one American, whether Virginia slave-owners or New-York merchants, who do not look on Slavery more or less as an evil; bnt one that now was unavoidable, and they would laugh at the extraordinary way in which Mrs. STOWE first creates the premises, and then draws her own conclusions.

Grand Ministerial Banquet in London.

THE PREMIER'S GROUNDS FOR APPEALING TO THE COUNTRY—RELATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES—SPEECHES OF LORDS PALMERSTON AND CLARENDON.

On the evening of the 21st of March the Lord Mayor of London entertained a numerous and brilliant company of the corps diplomatique and members of both Houses of Parliament at a banquet in the Mansion House. The occasion derived unusual importance from the impending dissolution, and the anticipation that the First Minister would avail himself of the opportunity to explain the grounds of the approaching appeal to the country. Public expectation was not disappointed. The following is:

LORD PALMERSTON'S SPEECH ON THE APPEAL TO THE COUNTRY.

Lord PALMERSTON, who was received with lond cheers, said:

MY LORD MAYOR, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN.—Often as it has been our good fortune to partake of the splendid hospitalities of the city of London, I may certainly say that it never fell to the lot of any administration to receive those testimonies of courtesy and good will upon a more important and interesting occasion than to the present. [Cheers.] We are not deceiving ourselves, my Lord Mayor, when we interpret the manner in which you have been pleased to propose our health as a renewal of that expression of confidence and good will towards Her Majesty's Ministers, which I had the honor of receiving not many days ago from your Lordship, as evidencing the feelings and opinions of the citizens of this great metropolis. [Cheers.] We were not long ago, as is well known, placed in a minority in the House of Commons upon a question which involved a censure upon Her Majesty's Government. I know very well that some of those who honored us with their general support, viewing that question merely as a simple expression of judgment on a particular transaction which had taken place at the antipodes, some months before, persuaded themselves that in giving their votes against the Government, they were not pronouncing a censure upon the Administration; and some of those honorable gentlemen assured me—I am convinced with great sincerity—that they did not intend by the votes they gave to withdraw from the Government the general confidence they had hitherto extended to it. [Cheers.] But the great majority of those who voted knew perfectly well the full political import of their votes. The resolution was that the proceedings which the Government had approved were unjustifiable; and if the Government have approved unjustifiable proceedings, that they followed a course which deservedly must incur the censure of the Parliament and the people of England. We were persuaded, on the contrary, that those proceedings were right and necessary. We felt that great wrong had been inflicted upon this country. We felt that our fellow-countrymen in a distant part of the globe had been exposed to every sort of insult, outrage, and atrocity [lond cheers]; that a treaty with this country had been broken; and that those who were locally charged with the defence of our interests were not only justified in resorting, but were bound to resort, as far as the means at their command enabled them, to the measures requisite for their vindication. We felt that we should have been basely betraying a trust which our Sovereign and the country had reposed in us if we had not approved proceedings which we thought right, and which if we had been placed in similar circumstances we should certainly have deemed it our duty to adopt. [Cheers.] Well, my Lord Mayor, in ordinary cases, when the House of Commons [illegible] Government has [illegible] confidence, especially if [illegible] shares the opinions pronounced by [illegible] tives; but on the present occasion our [illegible] shared their opinions. [Prolonged cheering.] [illegible] the liberty, during the late debate, of saying in the House of Commons that I was sure their votes, if it were adverse to us, would not be ratified by the opinion of the country, and the result has proved how entirely we were justified in entertaining that conviction. We have even now, before the [illegible] have had an opportunity of recording their votes, had numerous expressions of opinion from all parts of the United Kingdom—addresses from men of all ranks of society, and of all shades of politics—from Whigs, Tories and Radicals—declaring it right that, when the interests of the country are at stake party differences should be forgotten, and the whole people should rally together to vindicate the honor of the empire. [Cheers.] We know—our fellow-countrymen know well—that such will be the result of the appeal we are about to make, and even now, although the time when that appeal can practically be answered has not yet arrived, we have proof that the heart of the country is sound, and that it will reverse the censure which was passed upon us the other day by the House of Commons. [Cheers.] It seems that it is not permitted to me to talk of coalitions or combinations, because they have been distinctly repudiated; but there was, if I am obliged to say so, an accidental concurrence of the leaders of opposite parties in the lobby against us. In that lobby there were the elements of a Government which expected to succeed to power by making the humiliations and degradation of their country a stepping-stone to office. [Cheers.] We are truly told that party spirit and party ties were remembered on occasion, but one party tie was wholly forgotten—the tie that ought to bind every Englishman to the interests, the honor, and the glory of his country. [Cheers.] If those who voted against us had risen to power, what ought they to have done as the logical and inevitable consequence of their vote? They asserted that our proceedings were unjustifiable. They were bound, therefore, in the event of their success, to have apologized to the Chinese barbarians for the wrongs we had done—to have rebuilt the forts which our gallant sailors had destroyed—to have sent from Woolwich new cannon in lieu of those which our brave seamen had rendered unserviceable—and at the same time, in order to complete the measure of redress, they must have paid the rewards which had been given for the heads of our merchants, and the cost of the arsenic which had been used in poisoning our fellow-subjects at Hong Kong. [Cheers.] Gentlemen, I cannot envy the feelings of those men who could witness with calmness the heads of respectable British merchants on the walls of Canton, or the murders and assassinations and poisonings perpetrated on our fellow-countrym country has arisen that irregular trade in coolies which the more narrow-minded philanthropists think is, almost ninety-nine out of a hundred of them—are always laying to the charge of England—and only our interests, but our reputation and humanity itself, demand that we should have every opportunity of substituting some other merchandise than opium. It has been said, indeed, that the Chinese have so few wants, and that labor is so cheap there, that we can never hope to bring our manufactures into competition with theirs, even if it were humane to drive their labor out of the field. As the same objections have been made to every step in the economy of labor, the extension of trade, and the commercial intercourse of nations everywhere, and in every age, we set them down at their proper worth. For our own part then, we admit no limit to what we may demand from these whimsical, subtle, and faithless barbarians, so long as our demands are regulated by equity, and in the interest of all nations. What it may at this moment be convenient to demand is another affair, and one which we presume may be left to her Majesty's advisers.

No doubt, any demands whatever which may be thought an adequate result for a great expedition sent across the globe will be unpalatable to the barbaric pride or political jealousy of the Chinese Government. Nor are forty hundred millions of people to be despised who, ignorant as they may be of the art of war, are not the less crafty and cruel. It is therefore a service both of difficulty and danger that Lord ELGIN has undertaken. Though he will not advance sword in hand, and will not, therefore, fulfill Lord ELLENBOROUGH's ideal of the only competent negotiator, he will have his way prepared by a large naval and military armament. When the commander-in-chief—General PENNEFATHER—has made the proper dispositions, and is ready for an advance, the British plenipotentiary will, we suppose, invite the Emperor to a peaceful settlement of affairs, and under the present deplorable circumstances of the Chinese Government it is not likely that our chief difficulty will be in that quarter. It has, indeed, been insinuated that we ought not to have taken advantage of an hour of distress and perplexity to press our claims; but it is the imperial crisis itself which has brought on the rupture, Commissioner YEH having notoriously presumed for a long period on his security from imperial control. The plenipotentiary will have to deal, then, not only with the Emperor and his mandarins, but with his insolent viceroys, and with a rebellion almost everywhere victorious. It is likely enough, therefore, that circumstances will arise which may require great discretion, temper, and even courage. Lord ELGIN, however, must have counted the cost, and can form some estimate from the experience of his colonial task. Should he meet with success his will be a singular lot and a unique glory in achieving two great works of reconciliation so wide apart and under such various circumstances.

Prince Albert on the Education of the Poor.

On the afternoon of March 20, Prince ALBERT, accompanied by the Prince of Wales, publicly opened with much eclat the newly erected poor schools at the end of Golden Lane, London. In answer to the welcome extended to him, the Prince said:

Mr. ROGERS, and gentlemen, promoters and supporters of these schools, I thank you heartily for your kind and cordial welcome. I rejoice at the opportunity which has this day been afforded to me of visiting this noble establishment, and my satisfaction in doing so is increased by the circumstance that my visit occurs at a period of its existence when the state of useful development to which, by your exertions, it has attained, is about, by a continuance of the same exertions, to receive a still wider extension. [Hear, hear.] In the progress of these schools, struggling, I may say, from the most lowly and humble beginnings up to their present noble dimensions, we find a striking exemplification of the Divine truth, that the principle of good once sown is not destined to lie dormant, but that, like the grain of mustard seed, it is calculated to extend and develop itself in an ever-increasing sphere of usefulness, and we may confidently hope that what you have now effected, following this universal law, will not be limited in its results to the immediate objects of your charitable exertions, but that it will prove the means of diffusing untold blessings among the most remote generations. [Hear, hear.] For you, Mr. ROGERS, who have been mainly instrumental, and at great personal sacrifice, in bringing about this great good, and for those who have stood by you, and contributed by their support to the success of your efforts, there can, I am sure, be no higher source of gratification than in the contemplation of your own work. [Hear.] The reflection that you have been the instrument, under Divine providence, of conferring upon the poor and needy in this vast district that greatest of all boons, the means of obtaining for their children the blessings of education and of religious instruction, without which any lasting success in life or any permanent amelioration of their lot would seem hopeless; and still further, the feeling that this inestimable blessing will be secured in a yet higher degree to their children's children, will carry with it its own best reward. [Much cheering.] Still it will be a source of legitimate pride and satisfaction to you to know that your labors have not been unobserved, but that your noble and Christianlike exertions to benefit those who cannot help themselves have attracted the notice and admiration of your Sovereign, and of those who are destined under her to watch over and promote the education and moral welfare of her people. [Hear.] The means which you have adopted to effect your work of benevolence appear no less deserving of commendation than the object itself.

You have not been content with the bare attempt to force, perhaps, upon unwilling recipients a boon the value of which might not be appreciated, but you have wisely sought to work upon the convictions of the parents of the children you wish to benefit by extending your assistance to those who, by a small contribution out of their hardly won earnings, have proved that they are awake to a sense of the vast importance it is to their offspring that the means of being fitted to pass successfully through life, and by honest industry to better their worldly condition, should be brought within their reach. It is a source of high personal gratification to me that I have been enabled, by my presence here this day, and by that of the Prince of Wales, [great cheering,] to mark not only my own appreciation of your labors, but also the deep interest which the Queen takes in the well-being of the poorest of her subjects, and that gratification will be greatly enhanced if by this public expression of the sympathy of the Queen and of her family and Government this noble cause shall be still further advanced. Most earnestly do I pray that the same success which has hitherto blessed your labors may continue to attend your future progress, and that your example may stimulate other localities to emulate your useful efforts. [Long-continued cheers, which were again and again renewed.]

The Threatened War Between Spain and Mexico.

ARRIVAL OF THE SPANISH MINISTER AT CADIZ—ATTITUDE OF FRANCE AND ENGLAND AND OF THE UNITED STATES—PREPARATIONS FOR WAR—INTERVENTION OF SPAIN IN SPANISH AMERICAN AFFAIRS.

Madrid (March 11) Correspondence of the London Post.

Señor SORELA, the late Spanish Minister in Mexico, has arrived at Cadiz from Havana, with the other members of his Legation. He is hourly expected here to render an account to the Government of the events which led to his withdrawal. The agent of the Mexican Government, who has been awaiting in Paris favorable intelligence as to the reception he might meet with in Madrid, has, by the last accounts, left that city on his way to this Court. In the meanwhile, Señor PIDAL, to whose charge the negotiations relative to Mexico have been exclusively intrusted, has, without loss of time, dispatched full instructions to Gen. CONCHA, the Captain-General of Cuba. The Minister has received highly favorable replies from the Governments of England and France to his note, in which he communicated the intentions of Spain with respect to Mexico, and announced as probable a resort to hostilities, in the event of full satisfaction not being obtained.

The Spanish Government has also reasons to hope for an assurance on the part of the United States of strict neutrality. Several names have been mentioned as likely to take the command of the expedition to Mexico. The probability is that General CONCHA, the Captain-General of Cuba, will have the supreme direction; but as it will not be advisable that he should leave the Island, the military operations will be conducted by General MENDINUETA, who has received orders to embark at Cadiz at the end of this month. The amount of public attention which the affairs of Mexico have lately attracted toward the new world may lead hereafter to a more active intervention on the part of Spain in the affairs of the South American Republics. For a long time past a very natural jealousy of Anglo-Saxon domination has indnced a certain party in Spain to advocate the formation of a defensive league among the Spanish American States, to which Spain should lend at least her moral support. So far, the design was very natural and legitimate; but the proposal is now mooted that Mexico should be converted into a monarchy, and a Spanish Borbon placed upon the throne. In the event of such an apparition being displeasing to the adjoining model Republic, England and France, in addition to Spain, are to be guarantees for the security of the new kingdom. The resuscitation of this old idea is not due exclusively to the Esperanza or the ultra-monarchical sect, but it is deliberately suggested by politicians of various hues, who, in other respects, are perfectly sane. One would think that the animosities and bloodshed caused by the monarchical machinations of FLORES, in the other South American Republics, was yet too fresh in our remembrance, that a repetition of these evils should be again risked in Mexico, even if internal dissensions in that State were the only obstacle to the realization of the scheme.

Madrid (March 11) Correspondence of the London Times.

As regards the general question of a war with Mexico, many disbelieve that it will come to actual hostilities, while those who are less confident of a pacific termination of the quarrel have evil forebodings—not with respect to the result of the conflict itself, or even on account of the expense it must entail, and which Spain can ill-afford, but on account of the island of Cuba, the safety of which they fear will be in some way compromised. It is easy for people in Spain to count up the guns and battalions that protect their precious colony, and to reckon on them for its defence, but I know that their confidence is not shared by many persons who have been on the spot, and in the best position to estimate the chances. What they say is, that let Spain do what she will, and no matter how staunch the garrison and how loyal the colonists of Cuba, the island will be America at no very distant period, unless England shall exert their authority to preserve it to its proper owners. Of course it would be rash to fix a date for such an event, but those who believe that it must ultimately come to pass, and that it is a mere question of time—basing their opinion on the well-known cravings of the States for Cuba and on the impossibility of Spain making head alone against the power of the Union—are naturally uneasy when, as at present, circumstances arise that seem not unlikely to afford an opening for American aggression.

The Sound Dues Convention.

As already announced, the treaty for the abolition of the Sound Dues was signed on the 14th of March. The following is an abstract of its provisions:

"By Art. 1, Denmark engages not to levy any customs, tonnage, light-house or other dues whatsoever on vessels or their cargoes which pass by the Belts or the Sound; nor to delay or embarrass, in any way whatsoever, such vessels; nor to impose upon such of them as may enter or leave Danish ports the dues which were formerly paid to the Belts or the Sound; nor to increase the existing taxes in those ports.

By Art. 2, Denmark undertakes to preserve and maintain in the best order all the lights, buoys, &c., &c., at the entrance or approaches of its ports or harbors, and along its coasts; also to maintain the buoys, &c., in the Cattegat, the Sound, and the Belts; likewise to watch over the service of pilotage in those waters, and to see that the charges for them are moderate, &c.

Art. 3 declares that the stipulations of the two preceding articles shall come into effect on the 1st April, 1857.

Art. 4 enacts that, in return for these concessions, the contracting powers shall pay Denmark 30,470,698 rix dollars in certain specified portions, each power, however, being only responsible for the payment of its own portion.

Art. 5 allows the payment to be made in forty half-yearly payments.

Art. 6 says that the time and place of, and other matters respecting such payments, shall be regulated by special treaty with Denmark.

By Art. 7, it is enacted that the execution of the preceding conditions, as regards constitutional States, is subject to the rules and formalities established in such States.

Art. 8 provides that the exchange of the ratifications of the treaty shall take place by a given date,

Mr. Buchanan's Inaugural.

From the London Times, March 21.

The Inaugural Message of the new American President will perhaps disappoint those who waited for its arrival with anxiety. It would seem that, though the forms of a Monarchy and a Republic may differ, the teachings of political experience are the same in both. The session of the British Parliament is annually opened with a royal speech, a composition which has been the butt of several generations of satirists, but which keeps its ground because it is exactly suited to the circumstances of our political life. Ministers who do not wish to appear without a policy, and are yet unwilling to commit themselves, find the meagre but significant paragraphs of a speech from the Throne the best means of indicating their intentions with a prudent vagueness. The American Republicans from the beginning refused to countenance such brevity; they would have a clear narrative of the past and a clear plan of the future, from the hand of their Chief Magistrate. Yet, as the concerns of the country become more extended, as the relations between the States become more delicate and complicated, as the Republic is brought more and more into connection with the Powers of Europe, as questions of foreign policy assume greater importance, we find that the Messages of the Presidents are more cautious and reserved, and that these powerful and almost irresponsible rulers imitate the vagueness, if they do claimed the conciseness, of a Royal Speech. Mr. BUCHANAN has been elected President after the most exciting contest of recent times. Since our own Reform Bill there has been nothing like it on either side the Atlantic. Americans, generally disposed to laugh at the predictions of dissension and disruption which are sometimes heard in English society, and to set them down as the voice of ignorance or jealousy, admitted that they could not help taking a serious view of the struggle of 1856. The anger and boisterous invective of the Southern States, the bitter resentment of the North, the fanatical excitement of the Abolitionists, and the deeds of blood in Kansas, made the contest an anxious struggle. Add to this that the foreign policy to which Mr. BUCHANAN had given his sanction at Ostend justly roused the apprehensions of more than one foreign State. England, Spain, Mexico, and even France, were all more or less interested in the question whether a statesman should be raised for four years to power far greater than that of a Constitutional Minister, after having seemingly subscribed to doctrines which, carried into action, would give foreign States no alternative between undignified submission and forcible resistance. As it was, the relations between England and the States were still unsettled; the questions relating to the Bay Islands and Nicaragua were still the subject of negotiation; and a hostile President might delay for an indefinite term the desired solution. We and all the world, as well as the Americans, took the deepest interest in the election, and, when that was decided, waited with something of impatience for the new President's political programme. This document we have at last, but it falls far short of satisfying the curiosity which has been awakened.

Mr. BUCHANAN is certainly the most distinguished politician who has been elected to the Presidency during the last 20 years. More than one of his predecessors have merely profited by political combinations or political jealousies. When one section would not tolerate the leading man of another section, both would unite to raise to the highest place some one whose mediocre qualities disarmed apprehension and dislike. But Mr. BUCHANAN is the leading man of his party; he is first in ability, as in place, among the Democratic politicians of his country. We cannot suspect him of weakness, or imagine him to be sincerely commonplace; we may therefore attribute to his experience and judgment the singular moderation and indefiniteness of the present message. The President commences by saying that, having determined not to be a candidate for reelection, he has no object but faithfully to serve his country during his term of office, and to live in the memory of his countrymen. As at the expiration of his Presidency Mr. BUCHANAN will be in his 70th year, we can well understand that he is anxious to conclude worthily a long political life by his conduct during the next four years, without looking further into futurity. The President then declares his adherence to the principle now recognized by the country,—that the will of the majority in each territory or State shall determine the establishment of domestic Slavery. "Congress is neither to legislate Slavery into any territory or State nor to exclude it therefrom, but to leave the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States." This principle Mr. BUCHANAN represents, and its enunciation is nothing new. By it Slavery and non-slavery are allowed to battle it out between them without the interference of any controlling authority. Slavery may force its way up to the British frontier, and Freedom may carve for itself new domains out of the wilds of Texas. Compromises and boundary lines are now effaced. Territory will be won by either of the two systems, according to the energy and progress of its representatives. "May we not, then," says Mr. BUCHANAN, "hope that this geographical parties to which the question has given birth will become speedily extinct?" Thus is the terrible problem solved by the new Government of the United States.

The President then proceeds to point out the folly and want of patriotism displayed by those who during the late struggle hinted at and even advocated the disruption of the Union. We need not follow him into his arguments that the preservation of this great confederacy tends to the development and civilization of every part. The fullness of the American Treasury is the gratifying subject of the next few paragraphs. This plethora of income has, it appears, given rise to wild schemes of expenditure, and called into existence a race of jobbers who threaten to corrupt the virtue of the Republic. As "a relief from this embarrassment," the President proposes to appropriate the surplus to great national objects, the extinction of the public debt, a reasonable increase of the navy, and the defence of the extended seacoast. The squandering of the public money, it is then urged, sinks into insignificance compared with the waste of the public lands, and the President calls attention to the powers inherent in Congress and in the several States with regard to this subject. The next point is the necessity of a military road from the Atlantic States to California, so that in case of war reinforcements might be sent to the Far West without the necessity of passing round the Horn or across the Isthmus. It will be seen that these topics are of a domestic character, and neither in themselves nor in the manner in which they are treated do they exhibit anything novel or striking. The convulsion of the electoral struggle has certainly passed away, to be succeeded by a soothing calm of domestic improvement.

But what of the new President's foreign policy? Into what are the Monroe doctrine and the Ostend Manifesto to be developed by the triumphant champion of the Democrats? To these questions the Inaugural Message affords but vague answers. The two concluding paragraphs are devoted to "our rights and duties as a member of the great family of nations." The duties, as defined by Mr. BUCHANAN, are such as might satisfy the most scrupulous international lawyer. To cultivate peace, commerce, and friendship with foreign nations, not only with a view to material interest, but in a spirit of Christian benevolence, to employ a diplomacy which shall be direct and frank, to cherish a sacred regard for the independence of nations,—such are the principles of public policy which are to guide the conduct of Mr. BUCHANAN and Mr. CASS. We are, however, next brought to the application of these principles as understood by their propounder. The United States, we are told, have never extended their dominions by the sword, for Texas was annexed by the vote of a free people, and that half of the Mexican territory which was added to the Union ten years ago was fairly purchased after the Mexican armies had been beaten. While the American Government continues to act on this principle "no nation will have a right to interfere or complain if in the progress of events we shall still further extend our possessions." These are the most marked indications we can gain of the President's policy. To acquire territory he looks upon as natural and praiseworthy, if it be the will of the majority of the actual settlers, or the stipulations of a pecuniary bargain. The application we must leave to the individual judgments of our readers. However, these are but tame doctrines after the Ostend Manifesto. On the whole, we think we see symptoms of that necessary moderation which accompanies the assumption of responsibility. The Government of a BUCHANAN and a CASS could not say less than is said in this Inaugural Message. Let us hope that temperance of tone will be followed by frankness of conduct, and that one of the first results will be the final settlement of those trifling differences which still exist between the two great free nations of the world.

American Railways.

From the London Times.

The first sight of an American Railway map, to use a vulgarism, "quite takes one aback." An impression is produced rather akin to what we receive when a friend whom we have not cast eyes on for 15 or 20 years comes across us, and reminds us forcibly of the fact "how old we are getting." Here is a part of the world which we have scarcely left off picturing to ourselves as aboriginal and fresh from the great act of Creation completely intersected by railways. Omitting all the intermediate stages between Chaos and Bradshaw, it has taken a violent leap into time, and from the very first seized hold of the latest results of civilization. A network of 26,000 miles of railway now covers the United States. This has been accomplished principally by Irish labor, and it is unnecessary to say that the cost of construction has been very small, compared with that in this country. The single article of the difference in the value of land would, of course, make an enormous difference. The cost of construction per mile on the New-York and Massachusetts Railways has been £10,000 to £12,000, as compared with £35,000 on British Railways. We quote the very interesting Report on the Railways of the United States, by Capt. DOUGLAS GALTON.

The cheapness of land has been one great cause, as we have just said, of this sudden and wonderful creation, more particularly as grants of land are often made, especially in the Western States. Let us take the Illinois Central Railway as an example of this method of railway-making. Congress granted to the State of Illinois 2,595,000 acres. The vacant lands, in alternate sections, within six miles of the road were conveyed by direct terms in the grant, and, in lieu of such portions as had been previously sold, selections were authorized to be made between 6 and 15 miles on each side of the road. The Company raised 20,000,000 dollars by mortgage upon the security of this land, reserving, however, 250,000 acres towards the annual payment of the interest. At the same time they call in 25 per cent. of a capital stock of 17,000,000 dollars. This pays for the Illinois Central Railway, which is, therefore, in fact, given to the Company, with the exception of the quarter which they take from their own stock. The State only charges 7 per cent. on the profits of the railway as a compensation for its gift of land, and thus a railway of 250 miles, which forms the backbone of Illinois, and connects Cairo with Duhuque, is built at a cost to the Company of 4,500,000 dollars.

But the most remarkable feature which this report brings out is the energy and impetus with which the Americans have rushed in medias res at once in the construction of their railways. This explains the rapidity and the small cost of this vast work more than the cheapness of land or the grants of land. There are some persons who cannot begin to work till they have a perfect tool. They are fidgety and uncomfortable without it; they wait and wait and delay operations indefinitely till their tool is nicely ground, polished and shaped, and a convenient handle put to it. There are others who won't wait, but take the first tool they can get and work with it. A bad tool is worse than a good one, but in the meantime they are doing so much work while the others are doing nothing, but only waiting. It depends, of course, on what the department of work is which of these two methods is the best. An epic poem requires the very best tools and waiting; a speech at the hustings or in Parliament must be made with whatever tool comes to hand—i. e., with the best kind of expression we can summon at the moment. Some persons, however, cannot bring themselves to speak till they have hit on the very best word. The late Archbishop of Canterbury was so fastidious in his choice of words, that he used to keep his audience painfully waiting till he had tried one word after another to see how it would fit, and, as this process took place once or twice in every sentence, the constant search for perfection was hardly repaid by the tardy discovery. In matters of "time and tide," and ever which that great power to which one of the seven wise men consecrated the result of a life's wisdom, "Opportunity," presides, it seldom answers to wait very long for your machinery. In war, for instance, you cannot.

The object for which railways are wanted in America is in one very important respect different from that in this country; they are wanted not simply as railways, but as roads, not only to quicken communication between different towns, but to open a way into the heart of large spaces of territory, and to carry off their produce. The railway is the carrier there. Railroads, as Captain GALTON informs us, are cheaper than roads; there would not be funds forthcoming for making even tolerable roads over the vast prairies of the West; but the railway comes before the road in this extraordinary world of inversions; it is the aboriginal road of the West, performing the very first function which the new country wants—that of opening it to human labor, and affording a channel by which the results of that labor can make their way to a purchaser. "When first opened, three years ago," says Captain GALTON of the Illinois Central Railway, "the station-houses were almost the only habitations on the line; now there is a large village at each station, surrounded by vast tracts of cultivated ground. When I passed along the line last Autumn sacks of corn covered every available spot round the stations, and the means of the company were scarcely adequate to removing them." With boundless tracts of land, then, lying idle and waiting to be used—land which will give an enormous return to cultivation, it is obviously not the interest of the American to delay his railway till he can make one with the best curves and the most even rails. He cannot afford to wait for a chef d'œuvre of engineering; no, every minute is lost that this land lies idle, and therefore he lays down a railway good enough to take him into the heart of this profitable region, and set him down there with plow and spade, and a channel of conveyance for the produce of his farm. He bends the railway to his temporary object, and makes it serve the purposes he wants at the time he wants—i. e., now. He dashes a hill end, and does not mind sharp curves and inclined planes. This is making the most of the instrument in his own case, and wielding it most victoriously and effectively. The Baltimore and Ohio Railway, as first made, avoided an expensive tunnel by "a series of zigzags, ascending over a hill by a gradient of 1 in 18 at its steepest part, each zigzag terminating in a short level space, so that the train was run up one zigzag on to this level space, and then backed up the next zigzag, and so on." This eccentric expedient was superseded by a tunnel after wards, but the American would not wait for perfection before he had his railway in the first instance. We wish our Indian authorities would take a hint from American expedition. They go on waiting for perfect engineering, and doing nothing till they can do everything as it is done in this country. The Americans would have covered India with railways before now. The mode of raising funds for the construction of railways by means of grants of lands is, perhaps, a useful hint to our Australian authorities.

It would, however, be doing injustice to the American railways to omit the great conveniences and good accommodation which they afford, notwithstanding the haste of their construction. Indeed, it is one of the most remarkable characteristics of the system how it combines roughness and expedition in the construction of the railway with convenience and refinement in the railway furniture and carriages, even greater in many respects than those we have in this country. The average American is perhaps more particular about indoor comfort even than the average Englishman; he carpets his coaches, and cushions them as we do our drawing rooms. The railways humor these tastes, and the carpets, the cushions, the chairs with backs, that can be put either way, the room for moving about, the lights, and the warm-air pipes, put all except our first-class carriages to shame. The ingenious contrivance on the New York and Erie Railway, of a tunnel which conveys air down into a chamber, where it is purified by spray forced up from jets below, and thence makes its way through the car, is a specimen of American railway indulgence to Summer travelers. The slanting windows and the screens of tarred canvass for throwing off the dust show the same consideration, while the use of a bell instead of a whistle on leaving stations proves a regard for the human ear at which we have not arrived in this country.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

BY TELEGRAPH FROM LONDON TO LIVERPOOL.

We are indebted to Capt. LOTT, of the Asia, for the following telegraphic intelligence, received at Liverpool just previous to the sailing of the Asia.

LONDON, Saturday, March 21.

Parliament was formally dissolved to-day. The Queen did not attend in person, and the Royal Speech was delivered by the Chancellor as follows:

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN: We are commanded by Her Majesty to inform you that in releasing you at this early period from your attendance in Parliament, it is Her Majesty's intention immediately to dissolve the present Parliament in order to ascertain in the most constitutional manner the sense of Her people in the present state of public affairs.

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS: We are commanded by Her Majesty to thank you for the liberal provision which you have made for the exigencies of the public service during the period that will elapse before the new Parliament, which Her Majesty will direct immediately to be called, shall have been able to give its deliberate attention to these matters.

My Lords and Gentlemen, we are commanded by Her Majesty to express the satisfaction which she feels at your having been able to reduce materially during the present session the burdens of her people. Her Majesty commands us to assure you that it is her fervent prayer that the several constituencies of the United Kingdom upon whom will devolve the exercise of these high functions which by the constitution belongs to them, may be guided by an all wise Providence to the selection of representatives whose wisdom and patriotism may aid Her Majesty in her constant endeavors to maintain the honor and dignity of her Crown and to promote the welfare and happiness of her people.

The Neufchatel Difficulty.

The Independance Belge publishes the terms upon which the King of Prussia agrees to settle the Neufchatel question.

The King renounces his rights on this Canton on condition of reserving to the Prussian Crown the title of Prince attached to Neufchatel. He requires the enjoyment of four years of the revenue of his ancient domain in the Canton: they amount annually to 100,000 francs, and it is presumed that his Majesty claims them in order to indemnify his Swiss partisans for their sacrifices on his behalf. The King also requires an amnesty in their favor for all they have done since 1848, the maintenance of the Municipalities being incompatible with the new order of things. The King consents to renounce them, but wishes their charitable establishments to be preserved. It is thought that Switzerland will raise objections to the title of Prince of Neufchetel.

TRINITY CHURCH MATTERS.

I cannot leave this branch of the subject (Trinity's provision for the poor) without alluding to the fact that the Honorable Senator from the Twenty-second, even while making the remarkable declaration that this Corporation has never shown one scintilla of spiritual feeling, was compelled, most unwillingly, as it seemed to me, and probably only from the conviction that it was necessary to break the force of what must be admitted to have been a most intemperate and unjustifiable expression, at a subsequent stage of the discussion, to admit that those who minister at Trinity's altars are without blame. But it is this Vestry, this Corporation, he says, which he would have figure in the eye of the law as criminal. And who constitutes this Vestry? Twenty two gentlemen, as nearly without reproach as any twenty-two that could be selected within the great metropolis. And why are they denounced? Because they are an old-fashioned set like our Hamiltons, Jays and Kings. Because they will not sell or disturb the cemeteries of Trinity or part with any of the property of the Church. One of the vestrymen is Gulian C. Verplanck. Is he to be impeached upon this floor? Who that knows Mr. Verplanck does not know him as a man of most unostentatious manner and liberal life; as one who has devoted twenty years of his life to the emigrant, for whose good, as a Commissioner of Emigration, he has constantly labored? And is he one whom the Senator from the Twenty-second would impeach?

There is Gen. Dix, too; a name not unknown in the State of New-York; he also is a member of this Vestry. A man of letters, distinguished among his compeers, and who has already achieved an exalted place in statesmanship. And is he one whom the Senator from the twenty-second would impeach?

Aye, but will the Senator say, "these are not the men—I do not impeach these." Then I reply that they demand, and their fellow Vestrymen demand, that those who you do intend to impeach you shall impeach by name, and not attempt to cast a stigma upon all who in temporal or spiritual affairs administer to the Church.

The Honorable Senator would not disturb the clergy; the clergy who he admits have been so constant in their ministrations at the altar, and in their attendance at the homes of the poor, although by the provisions of his bill he would let loose upon these pious and devoted men an unbridled power which would drive them out to starve. But he only desires to disturb the Vestry—the corporation—and his charges are only levelled at that corporation, who in the exuberance of what is itself an insane frenzy, the Honorable Senator declares, are "not fit for a madhouse." I concur with the Honorable Senator that a Vestry who through nearly 160 years have administered the vast properties of this Church without the occurrence of a single malversation in office, and without the loss of a single dollar to the revenues of the Church, and under whose prudential management this property has grown from an inconsiderable estate to its present value of four to six millions of dollars—are not fit for a madhouse.

And at this point of the debate, Mr. Chairman, I desire to introduce to the Senate the successors to this ancient and honorable Vestry, through their proclamation which is even now lying on our desks. It is signed by gentlemen of New-York, who already in imagination seem to suppose this question decided by the Senate, and they about to enter upon the property of the church. It has received the indorsement of the Hon. Senator from the 22d, who by his quotations from the document has recognized its authority. It seeks to relieve the country of the apprehension which it might well entertain from the establishment of this revolutionary committee in power, by declaring in advance that the Committee believe and it has been proven that "THERE IS ENOUGH FOR ALL!"

It is clear, then, that these gentlemen who seem disposed to allow the clergy to remain, do not mean to steal that golden service long since presented to Trinity by one of the churches of England; that they do not intend to take the Communion dishes from her altar; that they do not even design to dispossess us of our parochial duties and labors, our daily ministrations to the poor. Oh, no! They simply desire kindly to relieve us of the bulk of our property? They propose to allow the church, even, to stand: it is only her patrimony they seek. They will not deprive Trinity of all, but will be content to allow her to remain as a partner with them in her own property.

Sir, the serene satisfaction with which these men have elected themselves to this vestry is worthy of especial comment. Neither Jack Cade nor Ledru Rollin ever proposed anything bolder. All Jacobinism stands without its parallel. The attacks upon the nobleass of France, when untold millions of property fell the prey of plebeian rapacity, furnishes the only fit illustration which my mind can recall to express my abhorrence of this outrageous proposition. Why, it is as much as though this Senate should wait upon Mr. Astor, and after assuring him that they did not desire to dispossess him, should modesily request to be taken in as partners in his vast property on the ground that there is "enough for all."

This Committee have, in one thing at least, given evidence of their sagacity. They have chosen a profitable time to enter upon possession; a time when two long leases are about to expire—one in 1864 and one in 1866—when two millions of property would fall into their hands for distribution. But will the Senate pause to consider where this will end? To inquire whether it will not, in obedience to moral, no less than physical laws, gravitate on—on—on, to the bottom? To-day the first two millions are divided up. Then comes the next division, and the next; and also for the Church—alas for the country when the property of ancient Trinity is thus despoiled.

Mr. Chairman, the honorable Senator does not speak for the dead, but for the future generations of mankind. If this be so, why not let this vast church property remain for the benefit of the future generations of mankind, and not disperse it to the four winds of heaven. Why does he seek by his bill to deprive this ancient and loyal corporation of its independence? Why does he seek to degrade it beneath the level of the humblest hamlet in the western wilds?—for it will be the only one that is left without independence. It will be governed no longer by its own honorably-elected vestry, but by the revolutionary Committee thrown upon it by this wave of Jacobinism that now threatens the destruction of the American Church. The whole Christian world would be shaken by her disgrace.

And again I ask, Mr. Chairman, why should this wrong be done? Trinity is rich, but her riches are of legitimate growth. She has but shared in the general prosperity which the vast commercial genius of CLINTON secured to the metropolis of the Empire State, by connecting the river with the lake, and throwing open to us the western wilds. You might as well complain of those old Dutchmen whose cabbage-gardens are now covered with palaces, as to blame Trinity because, beneath a wise guardianship, her once humble possessions have swelled into great and coveted wealth.

But the corporation of Trinity Church are further reproached for untruly returning the value of their real estate. It will be recollected that their vestry consists of twenty-two individuals, widely differing in views and pursuits and means of knowledge. It is a moral impossibility that all could unite in the same valuation. There was no common standard of value to which they could possibly refer, except the official valuation of the City assessors who are sworn to value truly all the lands in the City. If it be said that the assessors never do in fact value lands at their full market value, it may also be said that the fact is perfectly notorious to every one—and that every one is equally competent to add such proportionable rates to the assessed value, as experience may suggest. The only statement really important for the Church to return, and solely within their knowledge, is a true exhibit of the location and size of their lots—that being given, every one is furnished at once with the means of valuing each seperate lot. The Church have practised no deception in the matter. On the contrary, they explicitly state in their return to the Legislature of 1850, (Senate Doc. No. 45, page 6, line 10,) that they return the value "as assessed in 1855 by the officers of the City for the purpose of taxation." If this return does not correspond with the assessors' book, then, and then only, will the Church deserve censure.

The true object of the legislative inquiry is to ascertain, not the speculative or estimated value of the land held by the church, but what is its actual income—in a word, what are the existing pecuniary means of the Vestry, to sustain the sacred cause committed to their charge. The rent of a lot is a thing certain to be known; the value of a lot cannot be certain. The great cardinal fact necessary to be known and truly returned is the actual pecuniary income of the land; and that they state precisely, in dollars and cents, as being $71,301 97. If that fact be untruly stated, then and then only are the Church deserving of censure. They also return the amount of their debt as being $648,918, and that the interest is $41,695. If these facts be untruly stated, then and then only are the Church deserving of censure. And next as to the return of the number of corporators. The Church return that there are 213 pew-holders. It now turns out by close scrutiny, that a few of them are dead, and that some have removed from the parish. But of what practical importance is it, whether the corporators are 213 or 113, or 50?

If the corporators legally own the property, it matters not whether their number be great or small. The rights of 50 are just as sacred as the rights of 300.

And so of the communicants; it matters not whether the number be 92 or 52. The question is, have they the legal right?

If it be said that the number is too small to control so large a fund, let it be remembered that every man of full age who chooses, can become a communicant and a corporator. He needs only to take the communion and then to hand his name and residence to the minister. No man has ever yet been refused or debarred the privilege; but the contrary is open to every Episcopalian in the City.

The secret is that the communicants are satisfied with the church and its management; and although they are now eleven hundred in number, only 72 (or as is asserted only 52) have thought fit to take the trouble to quality themselves as corporators. Is the church or the vestry to blame for this?

The Senator from the Twenty-second, says that this corporation, though amenable to the Legislature like any railroad, insurance or other corporation, set themselves above the law, defy the Senate, and stalking into the Legislature, shelter themselves behind a grant from the British Crown. I would ask by what other right he would come down, like the Goths and Vandals, to take possession of this Rome of the Episcopal Church? Would it not be under the grant of the same King and Queen by whom this royal bounty was originally dispensed to Trinity? For what else but to give these claimants rights under that grant, is the present law designed?

But, Sir, the passage of the law proposed will keep open for years a bitter fountain, not only of litigation in the courts of justice, but of discord in the heart of society, permanently dividing, as it has already begun to divide, church from church, family from family, and friend from friend.

Already the newspapers teem with angry recriminations, kindling the basest passion of our nature. Both clergy and laity are rapidly rushing into the heated conflict. Is it wise to foster this state of public feeling? To add fuel to the flame? May not a prudent Senate safely decide to banish this exciting topic from the Houses of the Legislature, and send the parties to the Courts of Justice, where only their controversy properly belongs?

This controversy is purely judicial in its nature. The Senator from Onondaga admitted this, when he said that the great mass of the evidence before us bearing upon the management of the corporation had nothing to do with the question; that it was not a question of fact, but of law. Why then should the Senate usurp the judicial ermine? Do not their proper legislative functions sufficiently engross their attention, that they must spend precious days and weeks in listening to arguments proper only for the calm and sober atmosphere of a Court of Justice?

The principles involved in this discussion call for profound and deliberate investigation, which only can be secured in the tribunals constitutionally provided for the purpose.

But if it be proper to convert the Hall of Legislation into a judicial quorum, then let me say that the argument of the legal principles involved in this matter, has not even commenced. After three days' debate, the legal discussion has not even approached its threshold.

For does the gentlemen from the Twenty-second really delude himself, still more does he seek to delude us with the idea that he has argued, still more that he has established the fundamental legal proposition, that the Episcopal inhabitants of New-York, are all alike entitled to the property of Trinity Church? Has he stirred a single step in the way of removing the plain palpable legal obstacles which prevent such a conclusion? Has he uttered a word to gainsay the arguments, clear as noonday, coming from the ablest legal intellects that the State has ever possessed, conclusively limiting the said "inhabitants" to those who legally congregate within the walls of Trinity, and are duly admitted into its congregation by its legitimate authorities?

I intend not to discuss this nor any of the legal questions involved, intending and agreeing to leave them to friends in this body abler and more fully prepared than myself. I merely mean to aver that the gentleman from the Twenty-second has shrunk from their discussion, or rather that he has boldly cut the knot, by unscrupulously assuming the very point at issue, and thus clearing all legal obstacles at a bound. I deny wholly and utterly that the inhabitants of the City, not members of the congregation, have any rights whatever in this estate, and before the gentleman can take another step in the matter, is bound affirmatively to prove that they have. For my own part, Sir, I believe that law, that right, that consecrated justice, are on the side of the church.

The Senator from the Twenty-second has further found fault with Trinity for her gifts. He complains that they are bestowed upon the High Church rather than upon the Low. He has taken the trouble to examine the remonstrances that lay upon our table, and he finds that 35 are from High Churches and 6 from Low. Now what care I, who am neither High nor Low Church man, about these dogmas? and what right has the honorable Senator to introduce them into this body to influence my opinion? I can only say in my judgment that it is evidence of sound churchmanship in the country, and when the City shall have become as sound, these quarrels will prescription have ceased. I have got petitions from every Episcopal Church in Buffalo, and if they are all High Churches, then must I regard the High Church as a noble church, for well I know that they are noble churches, that their Church Wardens and Vestrymen are noble men, and that their Clergymen, to my feeble judgment, seem to be worthy Ministers in the service of their God.

The Senator complains, too, that Trinity has done but little or nothing for the cause of education. On the other hand, I contend that sound learning has found in her a constant benefactor. Did she not at an early period give to Columbia College, ninety valuable lots, worth at the present hour full $3,000,000, and making that College the richest endowed of any on this continent? And from whence proceed those shadows that at evening sunset rest upon the bosom of Seneca Lake? Are they not from the turrets of Hobert Free College, for ought I know the only Free College in the State, and was not she, too, endowed by Trinity? Has she not her parish charities for the purpose of education; her industrial schools with their thousand scholars? And yet she, forsooth, has done little or nothing for the cause of education!

A NEW BOOK
JUST READY
DR. JERRY GRINDLE, M. D.,
Philadelphia, late of New-York.
The following subjects are carefully and thoroughly discussed:—Sexual development.—The relations between [illegible] marriages physically considered; [illegible] impediments, and rules of safety faithfully [illegible].—The causes, symptoms, prevention and [illegible] of sterility, impotency, and sterility.—Horrible effects of sexual diseases; their prevention and cure; warning and caution.—Conception; when conception should be prevented; unanswerable arguments; only safe, certain and healthy means candidly explained.—The frailty of unprincipled empirics exposed.—Miscarriages and premature labors sometimes induced in legitimate medical practice.—When justifiable.—The only safety.—Lecherous immorality.—New-York morality.—Treatment for female obstructions, &c., &c.
No one can read this book without being wiser and better, for it deals in facts, not fictions. Strange things are brought to light, usually regarded as "hidden things" among eminent medical men, yet no person with his eyes open, can doubt their great utility in the present state of society.
The work is written in a chaste, yet clear and forcible style, and much abstruse medical technicalities as would [illegible] and confuse the general reader, are not introduced. The whole work is the result of cautious and perplexing research into the hidden mysteries of our profession, and well calculated to supplant that loose, indecorous trash proceeding from vile quacks, and scattered broadcast over our country. Read and ponder! study the [illegible] rules, and learn to shun the evils that the [illegible] cross in your path.
The book is printed in the neatest and best style; prices [illegible] at our office and laboratory, No. 25 North 12th-st., between Filbert and Arch, and several publishing [illegible] in this town; it is also placed in a wrapper, and sent by mail with perfect safety, to any part of the country on receipt of the price, and four letter stamps, or 12 cents to pay the postage.
Agents wanted in every State. All letters must be directed, DR. WESLEY GRINDLE, Philadelphia, Penn.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, and Comptroller, and the Commissioners for the removal of Quarantine, visited Seguine's Point on Saturday last. They have concluded to purchase the Point as soon as possible. They intend, at first, to make temporary accommodations there for yellow fever patients, and then, at their leisure, to turn the whole establishment into a permanent Quarantine. Some doubts exist in the minds of the State officers as to the propriety of making the Point a permanent Quarantine—first, because there is some question as to whether the anchorage in that portion of the Lower Bay is sufficiently safe and deep; and, secondly, because of the distance from the Point to the main channel. We understand that the whole question is to be settled at Albany very soon—soon enough to meet the wants of the port. In view of the safety of the public health, we are glad to know that something will be done promptly.

By the steamship Asia, which left Liverpool on the 21st ult., and arrived at this port on Saturday morning, we receive four days' later news from Europe. The English papers are filled with election addresses and intelligence. Six candidates are in the field for London. Sir JOHN PORTER and the Right Hon. ROBERT LOWE are the Palmerston candidates for Manchester, and Mr. COBDEN, the cause of the dissolution and all the excitement, is obliged to abandon the West Riding of Yorkshire and look for a more friendly and less important constituency. The issue in the approaching contest seems to depend as much on the personal popularity of Lord PALMERSTON as on the merits of the China question, and there is every reason to believe that the Premier will be sustained by the people. At a grand Ministerial banquet given by the Lord Mayor of London on the 20th ult., Lord PALMERSTON delivered a most effective speech in vindication of his policy with regard to China and the dissolution of Parliament. Mr. BUCHANAN'S inaugural address has been received in Europe. It is regarded favorably by leading British journals. Large reinforcements from both France and England had left, or were about to leave, for the seat of war in China.

From the Continent we have nothing of special importance. The Neufchatel Conferences at Paris were progressing, and with better prospects of a peaceable termination. Austria and Piedmont are said to be on the eve of quarreling. Enemies they are, and must be as long as the one is the oppressor and the other the champion of Italian liberties. There is also a report that a reconciliation of France and England with Naples is highly probable, but upon what terms we are not advised. People are getting tired of hearing about the "Spanish preparations against Mexico," and some think there will be no war after all. It looks now very much as though the storm would blow over.

Elsewhere we publish extracts from private letters received by the Texas, concerning the movements of Gen. WALKER in Nicaragua. They are confirmatory of the first reports of Gen. WALKER'S success at Rivas, and speak hopefully of his ultimate success.

Various matters of interest were acted upon in the State Senate on Saturday. A bill was reported providing regulations for the port of New-York,—it being one of a series recommended by the Harbor Commissioners. It is intended to provide against the filling up of the rivers and harbor by ashes and other rubbish. Bills were reported creating a uniform standard of gas, and providing for the appointment of a Gas Inspector; but as this session is so far advanced they will not probably be acted upon until the next. A report was made relative to the condition of the Savings Banks in the State, in which a high compliment is paid to their management generally. The bill abolishing days of grace on sight drafts was passed. The New-York Charter bill was referred to a Committee of eight to perfect.

Advices from Fort Dodge, in Iowa, state that a settlement of twenty families at the head-waters of the Des Moines River had been attacked by a party of Indians, and the supposition was that all had been murdered, or carried into captivity. Some had been shot, and others clubbed to death. A company of whites had been organized to pursue the Indians and take vengeance upon them.

The Sachems of Tammany Hall are continuing their labors of love, towards harmonizing the somewhat distracted elements of the City Democracy. A private meeting was held on Saturday, at which some of the sachems backed out from the scheme previously promulgated for new primary elections of members of the Democratic Committee, and offered a substitute, by which each of the two Committees should nominate one member, and the Sachems a third, in each Ward, to constitute the new Committee. Another meeting for the discussion of the matter is to be held to-day. In another column, we give a detailed account of the political contest by which the peace of Tammany has been at various times disturbed, and of the present action of the Sachems. It will repay perusal.

On Saturday, the new Rabbi, Dr. ADLER, was installed over the congregation of Reformed Jews worshiping in the synagogue in Twelfth-street. The services, which occupied over three hours, were of a very interesting nature.

TIMOTHY MORIARTY was sentenced in the United States District Court to pay a fine of $10 for embezzling mail bags. The lowest sentence was given allowed by the law, because it appeared doubtful whether the prisoner knew that they were mail bags, or had any guilty intent in receiving them at his junk shop.

NOEL BROOKS, one of the crew of the bark N. W. Bridge, was also sentenced to pay a fine of $10 for an endeavor to make a revolt, and to pay a fine of $10, and be imprisoned for 30 days, for an assault upon the mate of the bark with a block.

The United States Grand Jury enter upon their session to-day. The case of Ex-Consul FABENS and Captain BOLTON, the fillibusters, is the leading case of importance to be acted upon. Aside from this the only charge of interest to be examined into is the charge of murder of the Captain and cook of the brig General Pierce preferred against four of the brig's crew.

There were only 411 deaths in the City last week—a decrease of 34 compared with the returns of the previous week.

Rev. Dr. CHEEVER delivered, last night, "by request," another sermon on the duties of the people in reference to the recent decision of the Supreme Court as to the civil rights, or, rather, want of civil rights of the colored race in this country. His discourse was based on the text "The Powers that be are ordained of God." In its general scope and tendency it was essentially similar to lectures which have been heretofore delivered by the reverend gentleman on the same subject. His argument stated syllogistically would run thus: Major—God never meant that we should obey the powers that be when they pervert their authority by the enunciation of unrighteous law. Minor—The Supreme Court by its late decisions declaring that negroes had no rights which a white man ought to respect, enunciated unrighteous law. Conclusion—Therefore, God never meant that we should obey the Supreme Court.

The new edifice of the Reformed Dutch Church of Jersey City, situated on the site of the old edifice in Grand-street, between Washington and Warren, was dedicated yesterday.

The Republicans of Jersey City will hold a mass Covention at Park Hall this evening to nominate a candidate for Mayor.

On Saturday Mr. BURDETT STRYKER received official notice of his appointment to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of JEROME RYERSON, Sheriff of Kings County. He will fill his bonds to-day, and enter upon the duties of the office to-morrow. Mr. STRYKER was the Republican candidate for this office when RYERSON, was elected and his appointment now meets the entire approbation of all true Republicans.

A man named ANDREW RUSSELL, residing in the Third Police District of Brooklyn, on Saturday evening knocked his wife down stairs, breaking one of her legs and fracturing her skull. She was taken to the Hospital in a dangerous condition by an officer, who also arrested RUSSELL, and committed him to await the result of the injuries to his wife.

The Police of Pestilence.

The season is close at hand now when the alarmists may begin to be busy again, and rumors of coming evil and of inevitable calamity will fill our hearts with uncertainty and our homes with terror. We shall hear intolerable things of the condition of our streets, and of advancing "cycles of contagion," and all kinds of precautions will be suggested, and the Quarantine question will be debated with renewed fury, and then nothing will be done, and the Summer will come and go, and those of us who survive into the Fall will forget how badly we were frightened in the Spring, the anxieties that came up with the first blades of grass withering away at the first touch of the frosty fingers of Winter.

New-York concerns itself about its health, as it concerns itself about almost everything else, simply under the spur of a "sensation," and wastes upon a vague emotional excitement about possible "yellow fever," the public feeling which should concentrate itself for the control of the present and permanent pestilences of filth and neglect, which are not only the continual affliction, but the certain stronghold of whatever epidemic may in the course of time and fortune invade our City limits.

No population in the world is more charitably disposed, as we firmly believe, than the population of New-York, and no people claim for themselves so high a rank as we in the matter of public spirit and practical ability; and yet our charities are more imperfectly organized, and our public interests more clumsily and carelessly administered than those of any second-rate European capital.

This we say not in the way of mere declamatory fault-finding, but as a prelude to a positive illustration which is furnished us by the condition of our Dispensary system. In the police of pestilence the Dispensary fills a place analagous to that of the reformatory prison in the police of crime. The physicians of the Dispensary are the preventive officers of our sanitary system—it is their function to arrest all diseases, whether of local or of foreign origin, in the beginning of their career; and among those classes of the population who are too poor to command the services of the paid physician, but not too insignificant to serve as the besieging lines of the terrible army of Death, from which, as from a vantage ground, the batteries of the plague may be opened with irresistible fury upon the whole community. The higher or lower average condition of the public health is one of the most essential elements to be taken into the account in estimating the probability of the approach of any pestilence, and the extent of the danger to be apprehended from it; and the average condition of the public health is influenced to an almost incredible extent by the sanitary state of the technically "lower" and most numerous classes. A large proportion of these classes must depend upon the service of the Dispensary for that prompt and efficient supervision of their health which it is easy for their more fortunate fellow-citizens to command, but which is needed by none so much as by those who are least able to secure it for themselves. Yet what is the actual dispensary force of our great City, and how faithfully is it supported by our citizens?

The City is divided into five Dispensary Districts, all of which are served by private Societies independent of each other, and only acting in concert so far as may seem desirable to their respective officers. Objectionable as is this absence of unity in the operations of a system so vitally essential to the public welfare, it might yet be compensated for, in a great measure, by the activity of the individual Institutions, were these Institutions severally maintained at the point of proper efficiency by the citizens of their several Districts. That such, however, is not the case seems to us sufficiently clear from a perusal of the annual report of the "New-York Dispensary" which has been recently issued. This Dispensary, which was the first established in the City, having been founded in 1790, was, for more than forty years, the only institution of the kind, and still extends its ministrations over a larger district than any of its present coadjutors; its present condition may, therefore, be fairly enough taken as a type of the actual state of the Dispensary interest in New-York.

In the district served by the "New-York Dispensary," are included some of the most dangerous portions of the City—the Five Points, and the waterside on both our eastern and our western limits, below Spring-street and Pike-street—that is, just those portions of the City and just those classes of our population most exposed to the first attack of a pestilence and most likely to afford it a fatal lodgment. That these most dangerous quarters of New-York are also the most suffering quarters of New-York, that these crowded and filthy streets which invite death from abroad are the homes also of misery without a name, we should be sorry to forget, or to suffer our readers to forget—but our object now is rather to dwell upon the general importance to the general welfare of a proper preventive medical police in these uncleanly and degraded regions of our metropolitan world, than to call the attention of Christian citizens to the pressing personal wants of their inhabitants.

Within these limits swarm some hundred thousand human beings, whose sanitary condition may be roughly inferred from the fact that more than twenty-five thousand of them annually appear as patients at the Dispensary, while over fifteen thousand annually require the services of the Dispensary physicians at their homes. The reader who will give himself the trouble to imagine the probable state of such a population if deprived of the gratuitous services of a competent medical staff, will form some adequate conception of the importance of the work done by this single Dispensary. He will not, however, form any adequate conception of the work which remains to be done—for that which is accomplished is accomplished only by the partial devotion of twenty physicians, whose constant services are imperatively required by the state of the District, but cannot be commanded by the Dispensary from the want of adequate pecuniary means. Ten of these physicians indeed receive no salary at all, while the six "District Physicians" who have the care of the patients in their homes, and discharge the wearing duties of a medical police, are magnificently recompensed with a sum which we are almost ashamed to mention. Two hundred dollars per annum are allotted to each of the men who, by night and by day, are engaged in defending these sanitary outworks of our City! while the entire annual income of this particular Dispensary amounts to less than six thousand dollars, and one of its officers has actually been obliged, during the past year, to advance from his own pocket a portion of this paltry sum to meet the necessary expenditure of the institution!

Is it not utterly discreditable to us that such statements should be presented to the world? Every citizen has it in his power, by a small annual subscription to the Dispensary of his own particular District, to do his share towards increasing the efficiency of these invaluable institutions—but the force of public opinion ought to be brought to bear upon the City Government so as to elicit positive assistance from the municipal income, to a system which should not be left to rely entirely upon private benevolence for its support. That the police of the public health in a city like ours should be handed over to private hands is just as disgraceful to us as it would be to confide to private hands the police of the public peace.

Progress and Promise of the Street-Cleaning Reform.

The attention of those who are interested in the health and cleanliness of New-York City cannot be too earnestly directed to the fact, that to-day is the day when the contracts which have recently been made by the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps, under the superintendence, and with the sanction of the Mayor and Comptroller, are to be submitted to the Common Council for approval. Section 12 of the Act of April 12, 1853, to amend the charter of this City, provides that all work to be done for the Corporation shall be done by contract, and that "all contracts, when given, shall be given to the lowest bidder with adequate security." It is also provided that such contracts shall be submitted to the Common Council for approval. In the case of street-cleaning, the express condition is attached to the tax-bill, which recently passed the Legislature, that the $250,000 appropriated shall only be expended under contract. This was intended to shut off the possibility of frauds, similar to those which were practiced by certain Aldermen, in collusion with Mr. EBLING, subsequently to July, 1855.

If the protestations of Mr. EBLING upon the subject are to be credited, he is really anxious at the present time to do justice to the City. As it is next to impossible for him, in this instance, to evade the law, he is desirous of letting it take its course. He has signed the contracts under which the gentlemen who are now in charge of the streets are acting, and has not hesitated to say, in public and private, that their character and zeal are unexceptionable, and that the security they have given is as good as could be offered. The Comptroller is also convinced that a fair prospect for the coming year is opened by the arrangement which has been made, and so is the Mayor. Moreover, the citizens of New-York can bear witness that they have begun, during the past week, to enjoy the novel spectacle of cleansed thoroughfares. The mob law by which Mr. REYNOLDS was interrupted on Monday and Tuesday, the continuance of the conspiracy, by which he was rendered unable to procure laborers and carts on Wednesday and Thursday, and the immense amount of work to be done, are sufficient reasons why some portion of the mountains of mud, garbage, refuse and offal, which rendered the pavements in many places invisible, still remain; but, in spite of every obstacle, much has been already accomplished. Broadway, Maiden-lane, Broad, Wall, Nassau, Beekman, Pine, Liberty, Cedar, Greenwich, Cortlandt, Fulton, Spruce and Pearl streets, and others down-town, as well as whole Wards in the upper part of the City, have been gone over, and thousands of loads of abomination have been dug out and taken away. Certain parts of the City have been cleansed for the first time within the memory of man. We learn, also, that Mr. REYNOLDS promises, in order that the progress of his dealings with the City may be manifest to every one, to publish henceforth a weekly account of the number of loads of dirt removed in his thirteen Wards. The machines will come into action during the present week, and the streets already in order, he says that he will keep so.

Notwithstanding these facts, we regret to learn that the most violent opposition with a sole view so spoils has sprung up among members of the Corporation against the new contracts. We are willing to believe that the refractory individuals are few in number, and that their conduct is discountenanced by the gentlemen who preside over the two branches of the Common Council. The Mayor has also exerted his influence towards securing the welfare of the City. The memory of past times revives, however, such strong temptations in the minds of those City Fathers, who "toil not, neither do they spin," but simply vegetate upon the rich soil of the Treasury, that they act from simple natural impulse, in laboring for the restoration of the dishonest days in which corruption has thriven, and they have prospered with it. They consider the words "reform," "retrenchment," "the public good," as insulting to their character, and as an encroachment upon their prerogatives. They will be prepared to rise up as one man to night and protest against the usurpation of the Mayor, and of Comptroller FLAGG, in taking the bold step of insisting that the streets of the City shall be cleaned, and that the Treasury shall be no longer swindled. The order, efficiency, and system which are beginning to spring up, they will condemn as an organized conspiracy against their law—that is, their inalienable privilege of stealing, robbing, log-rolling, and being bribed.

The sole and only object of the statute, in providing that contracts shall be submitted to the Common Council at all, is that the Corporation may judge whether the security provided is adequate. In the present case, there is no room for caviling whatsoever upon this point. In past days, care has been taken that the security offered should be wholly worthless. Good security would have frightened the plundering members of the two Boards into something like refractoriness. It may do so now; but it will be the duty of the public to watch their course, and to secure at all hazards that the public welfare shall be no longer sacrificed. It is literally now or never, in relation to the sanitary state of this metropolis.

The Four Great Pictures.

We alluded last week to the remarkable commissions given by a gentleman in the neighborhood of New-York to four of our eminent portrait painters, for a picture by each containing the portraits of thirty illustrious cotemporary Americans. We believe it is no longer a secret that the liberal patron of art who gives the order is Hon. WILLIAM WRIGHT of Newark, N. J. The magnitude and singularity of the commission have caused a good deal of talk among our artists. Mr. HUNTINGTON is to paint the men of science, Mr. HICKS the illustrious literati, Mr. BAKER the artists, and Mr. ROSSITER the magnificos of the mercantile world.

It will be no very difficult matter to get together thirty men of science, of literature, and of art, though there may be some difficulty in grouping them; but where are the thirty eminent merchants to be found, and what is to be the standard of greatness with merchant princes? How many millions must a merchant have accumulated to entitle him to pictorial honors? Every man should be painted with his bank book in his hand, in which his wealth should be inscribed. Of all human greatness there is none so brittle as that of a merchant; he may be the greatest man in Wall-street to-day, and a nobody to-morrow. We have a few eminent men who have amassed fortunes by trade, but they have achieved greatness by other deeds than those connected with their calling.

As Mr. WRIGHT is himself a mechanic, and made his money which he expends so liberally by the useful business of a saddler, he should appropriate one picture to great American mechanics, of whom we have many bright examples. And as he has been a Senator, why not give another to illustrious cotemporary statesmen? It would, to be sure, involve the necessity of putting men together in one frame who were never in the same frame of mind, but Art and History know no prejudices; and they group their subjects without any consideration for their affinities.

TRINITY CHURCH MATTERS—THE QUESTION OF TITLE.—The onslaught upon Trinity Church continues to engage the attention of the Legislature, and, to a very considerable extent, that of the people also. The importance of the action which may be taken cannot well be exaggerated,—but it is one of those cases in which the Judge is even more interested in the issue of the trial than the prisoner at the bar. The Legislature and the political power represented by it, will be far more profoundly affected by the result of the contest than the Corporation of Trinity Church can possibly be. The latter—if the case goes against them—can appeal to the Courts of law:—the former, if its action shall trample upon those principles of justice which lie at the basis of individual property, must pay the penalty.

If Trinity Church has a valid legal title to her property, she will hold it—in spite of clamor, whether embodied in Legislative enactments or not. Almost every other question but that of title has been loudly and vehemently discussed:—yet this point, upon which the whole case must ultimately turn, seems quite as clear as words can make it. The property in question was granted in the first years of the last century to "the Rector and Inhabitants of the City of New-York in communion with the Protestant Church of England." Now if the grant had been without any reference to a pre-existing state of things, and merely to "the Inhabitants of the City of New-York in communion with the Protestant Church of England," there would be no doubt, that all such inhabitants would now have a right in the property so granted. But the grant was made in those terms, because that was the name of a corporate body, and that body consisted of "the Rector and Inhabitants," aforesaid. Now what is the force of the important word "rector" here? A rector, according to all the authorities legal, canonical, and lexicographical, in the English language, from 1600 to the present day, is "a parson or clergyman who has the charge of a parish church, and has the tithes," &c. This Rector of New-York then was necessarily the rector of a parish. That parish was made by the then supreme power coextensive with the City, but knows not, even in law, called the parish of the Rector and Inhabitants, &c., of New-York; neither was the parish created, except in a purely legal and technical sense, by its charter. It had a recognized existence before the charter was granted; and in that very charter, this parish—of which the rector in question was made the head—is specifically named as "the Parish of Trinity Church;" and it is to the rector of this parish, in terms, that the grant was made. To that parish, then, and not to any number of individuals, as such, was this property granted; and while that parish exists, to it that property belongs.

It is difficult too see how any church corporation can hold the ground on which its place of worship stands by a clearer title; and no less difficult to understand, why the movement to deprive Trinity Church of her property should be in a great measure sustained by gentlemen whose worldly interests would be much damaged were all titles to real estate treated with as little consideration as they would have shown to that by which Trinity Church holds hers.

REMOVAL OF BARS IN THE HUDSON RIVER.—A bill is now before the Legislature appropriating $25,000 for the improvement of navigation in the upper Hudson. The session is so near its close that there is considerable doubt about its passing. A good deal of money has been expended in years past for this purpose, but without any permanent benefit. The United States Government has made two appropriations of $50,000 each, but two-thirds of that sum was consumed for surveys—each succeeding engineer unnecessarily going over the same ground. The State has also contributed a few thousands.

At least $100,000 is believed to be requisite to make the proposed improvement stable and permanent, with the addition of, perhaps, $5,000 per annum thereafter. The plan would be to stop up the north ends of the islands and force the water at all times to run through the same central channel. Twenty-five canal boats, filled with stones and sunk, would give eight or nine feet on the bars at low water. This would be amply sufficient, as the largest boats when loaded seldom draw more than seven feet of water. Of course, $25,000, if obtained from the Legislature, will be only sufficient to remove the bar, and answer as a temporary expedient.

This is an unpromising time to go to Albany for State aid, as the Treasury, already depleted, is sorely pressed by all manner of projects; but the friends of the bill are willing to accept of little, it seems, rather than get nothing.

THE SOUTH MANUFACTURING FOR THE NORTH.—The Savannah Republican contains the following paragraph:

"It is rather strange to see printing paper sent to the North; but, singular as it may appear, such is the fact. The Pioneer Paper Factory at Athens, Ga., is shipping paper to Philadelphia for the use of the Philadelphia Inquirer. It is a very superior article, and reflects credit on the manufactory. A lot goes forward by the next Philadelphia steamer."

For the last year a considerable portion of the paper on which the DAILY TIMES has been printed has come from a manufacturing establishment in North Carolina;—and the only reason why we do not use more of it is, that we cannot get it. It is fully equal, and in most respects decidedly superior, to any we can obtain at the North for the same price. We trust we shall not bring anybody into peril by thus revealing the fact that we are in part supplied with printing paper from the Slave-holding States. There is no reason, but their own negligence and lack of enterprise, why our fellow-citizens of the South should not wage successful competition with the North in this and many other branches of manufacture. We shall be happy to "encourage" them by our "patronage"—whenever we can make anything by it.

Installation of Rev. Dr. Adler, the New Jewish Rabbi.

On Saturday morning, the Synagogue in Twelfth-street, between Third and Fourth avenues, belonging to the Emanuel Congregation of Reformed Jews, was the scene of a very interesting ceremony,—the installation of a new Rabbi, long eminent for his learning and high position among the Hebrews. The Synagogue was crowded by its usual congregation, by members of other Synagogues, and by not a few Christians, who were anxious to witness a ceremony to them so novel, and, in its associations, so venerable and solemn. The Rabbi to be installed was Rev. Dr. ADLER, who arrived a few days since from Prussia, in the steamer Arago, to succeed the late Rev. Dr. MERZBACHER, whose sudden death took place last year. The observances in this Synagogue are somewhat peculiar, differing from those of the "Orthodox" Hebrew in several particulars. For instance, males and females are permitted to sit together, as in Christian churches, and are not divided as in other Synagogues, the men occupying the body of the edifice and the women the galleries. The reading-desk, pulpit, ark of the covenant, scroll of the law, are placed at one end of the temple, instead of the reading-desk being in the centre of the Synagogue. The men do not use the blue-fringed white praying veil, which is considered indispensable to decorum among the unreformed Jews.

The services on Saturday were conducted in Hebrew and German. Rev. Dr. ADLER preached a long sermon, in German, taking for his text the 33d chapter of Exodus, 34th verse, which reads as follows in our English version: "Therefore, now go lead the people into the place of which I have spoken to thee. Behold, mine angel shall go before thee." The discourse seemed largely to interest the congregation who are henceforth to be under Dr. ADLER'S charge, and who, we understand, are all Germans. The finances of the Synagogue are in a very flourishing condition.

Dr. ADLER was somewhat unfortunate on his arrival in this country. A trunk containing a quantity of silver-ware, and several valuable Hebrew and German manuscripts, was stolen from aboard the steamer, as she lay at her dock. The reverend Rabbi regrets the loss of the manuscripts far more than the property which to the thief is most valuable.

Yellow Fever at Rio.

The bark Nameaug came into Quarantine night before last from Rio, making the passage in fifty days. The Captain reports that yellow fever, in its worst form, is raging there, and that very few of the crews of northern vessels, trading there, escape an attack of the pestilence. The crew of the Nameaug were all taken with the disease and sent to the hospital, which rendered it necessary for the Captain to ship a new crew before he could sail for this port. Some of the vessels, finding the pestilence raging, took in cargo in a hurry and put to sea, hoping thereby to escape the scourge; but, alas, they were not out many days before they were obliged to put back again with all hands disabled or dead with yellow fever.

☞ The firemen are becoming obstreperous. Rival companies are constantly coming in hostile collision, and for some weeks past they have indulged in a fight at almost every fire. They had two pretty "musses" yesterday, though none of them ended seriously. This business should be nipped in the bud. Let the Commissioners, the Police and locusts act quickly.

There were in this port on Saturday 583 vessels, including 31 steamers, 111 ships, 81 barks, 86 brigs, and 274 schooners.

[illegible] Democracy of the City, [illegible] Mall.

The approaching annual [illegible] of the Tammany Society [illegible] excitement among members of the Democracy in this State and City, and it is predicted that a severe and active struggle will take place at the meeting of the election, which is fixed by the statutes of the Order for the third Monday of April, the 20th instant. The venerable age of the Tammany Society, its great influence in the deliberations of the party, and the prominence of the politicians who visit and control it, all contribute to render it an object of singular respect and awe among the rough-and-ready Democracy of the City, who, while they keep up a constant murmur at its policy, scarcely ever dare to question obedience to its edicts.

The Tammany Society claims to date back, in existence to the days of the American Revolution; it actually sprung into existence in the [illegible] strange era—a few years later—when Democracy and Royalism were combatting [illegible] plains of Europe, when French Liberalism [illegible] ing saturnalia over the proclaimed Rights of Man, and when the Goddess Reason was [illegible] the mad rabble of Paris. The Tammany Society, in its early day, had much to say of the Rights of Man and the Fraternity of the People—phrases [illegible] what uncouth and unmeaning in this [illegible] to the earlier apostles of the faith [illegible] water. In its rituals and emblems, [illegible] the monuments and triumphal [illegible] in France, there is still extant [illegible] phraseology of the first French Revolution.

The Tammany Society is a [illegible] which, in order to gain admission, [illegible] be first adopted by vote, and then [illegible] certain solemn, and more or less terrifying, [illegible] As the customs of the Society purport to be [illegible] from the Indian tribes, these initiatory ceremonies are supposed by outsiders to consist in scalping and tattooing the rash intruder, by way of preparing him for the important duties of membership. Other rites include the dancing of the grand war dance, the chanting of the battle song, the smoking of the pipe of peace, the building of the Council fire, and, last but not least, the quaffing of the waters of the great spring. This last observance is generally translated by the non-initiated to mean the drinking of champagne; but, from the poetry which has come down to us from ancient days, it is but reasonable to infer that the brethren do not always regale themselves upon so expensive a beverage; for thus runs one of the old "croaker" rhymes:

"There's a barrel of beer in Tammany Hall,
And the Bucktails are swigging it all the day long."

Be this as it may, there certainly have been potations deep in quantity, and not, perhaps, unmixed in quality, consumed in the great wigwam of the Democracy, and there is a prevalent idea abroad in the community that the "fire water" in use there is not a liquid entirely in accordance with the Maine Law. But MIKE WALSH says there is a natural affinity between rum and Democracy—so let that pass.

Upon admission to the Society, the neophyte is only nominated a Brave, and as there are no degrees in the Order, all the Braves are all equals and peers, unless elevated to the post of Sachem or other [illegible] There are thirteen Sachems, elected each year by [illegible] eral ticket; and these thirteen choose a [illegible] who is the Grand Sachem of the Society. The thirteen Sachems also choose one of their number to be the Father of the Council of Sachems. [illegible] Grand Sachem, (who is the President,) the Society has a Secretary, a Sagamore, and a Wiskinkie, which latter offices are simply those of doorkeeper and keeper of the regalia and properties. The Council is officered by the Father and the Scribe. The Council is the Board of Trustees, Managers or Directors of the business affairs of the Society.

Probably no man has been initiated into the Tammany Society for fifty years past, who was not a professing Democrat at the time of his initiation, though very many who belong to it are now, by the modifications of politics, transferred to other political organizations. A large number of its old members are now Republicans—among whom we might name JAMES WATSON WEBB, ANTHONY J. BLEECKER, JOHN A. KENNEDY, PHILLIP S. CROOKE, of Kings County, &c. But as there is no method of ejecting a member of the Society who has once been duly admitted, so no change of party allegiance ever divests [illegible] of Tammany of his membership in the sacred order, and the names of these gentlemen (and there are many) still appear on the books, although in the flesh they never make their appearance at the council fires.

For forty years the Society remained quietly and exclusively in the control of the Democrats. Under General JACKSON'S Administration it became more intensely partisan, even, than it had been in JEFFERSON'S time. It supported the hero of New-Orleans with energy and determination, hailed him as the great chief of its tribes, and rallied all its forces in his support. It was the no less steady and enthusiastic supporter of President VAN BUREN, who had, himself, been a member of the Society for many years, and who had very many personal adherents in its ranks. During TYLER'S and POLK'S Administrations, the patronage of office had much effect in the Society, and frequent disturbances and rivalries attested the existence in its bosom of the feud between the Calhoun and Van Buren wings of the party. When the latter were finally defeated at the Baltimore Convention which nominated CASS and BUTLER in 1848, the Tammany Society almost swung from its Democratic moorings. Doubtless, a majority of the members strongly sympathized with the Buffalo platform and the Free-Soil organization; but the potency of patronage saved the Society to the party and smothered the discontent for a time.

The union of the Cass Hunkers and Van Buren Barnburners in this State in 1852, led to the nomination of a union ticket for Sachems, in April of that year, at the head of which stood Grand Sachem ELIJAH F. PURDY. Besides the "old war horse" were Messrs. ISAAC V. FOWLER, JAMES CONNER, and others, who had been Van Buren men, and who, the Hard Hunkers claimed, were not yet purged of their dark associations. The Hards therefore put up another ticket, upon which were CHARLES O'CONOR, FRANCIS B. CUTTING, ULYSSES D. PENDLETON, JOSEPH L. MARSH, WM. B. AITKEN, &c. A spirited struggle ensued: both factions were heated and laborious, and the sick and the lame were brought out in great numbers. Never was there such a contest: more votes were polled than ever before in Tammany Hall. The Sachems refused to declare the result that night, and when the ballot-box was closed at a very late hour, both parties left the field, ignorant of the issue of the battle. Subsequently it was announced that the Softs had triumphed: the old Sachems held over another year, and the discomfited Hards had to content themselves with the entertainment so common in "our army in Flanders."

Nothing daunted, however, the incorrigible Hards tried them again, in 1851. Their ticket was headed by JACOB BRUSH, and the remainder of the names were pretty near the same as in the previous year. The Softs were generaled, as usual, by PURDY, FOWLER & Co. In this year AUGUSTUS SCHELL, now the collector appointed for the port of New-York, signalized himself by his labors in behalf of the BRUSH ticket: but the Society was still strongly Soft and Barnburner, and PURDY and his associates were re-elected.

In 1852, the same wing of the party again triumphed and the Council of Sachems included in that year, twelve Softs and only one Hard, JOSEPH CONNELL.

In January, 1853, occurred the difficulty in the Democratic General Committee in Tammany Hall which led to the organization of two bodies, one Hard and one Soft, each maintaining its sole claim to the occupancy of the building, to the absolute exclusion of the other. The Tammany Sachems were opposed to, to say which was the regular Committee. The Council got together and resolved that the Soft Committee was the regular one, only one vote (Sachem CONNELL'S) being given for the Hards. The latter faction thereupon departed from Tammany, and took up their quarters in the Stuyvesant Institute building, in Broadway.

The next election, (April, 1853,) took Sachem CONNELL out of the Council, and for the years 1853, 1854, 1855, and 1856, the organization of the Tammany Society has been exclusively Soft. The new Sachems have been elected pretty much every June, and the Council chosen in April, 1856, were:

WILLIAM D. KENNEDY, Father of the Council,
Elijah F. Purdy,	Daniel E. Delavan,
Isaac V. Fowler,	John Graham,
Thomas Dunlap,	George H. [illegible],
James Conner,	Richard [illegible],
Andre Fromont,	Joseph [illegible],
John Kelly,	Thomas [illegible],

This Council elected Lorenzo B. [illegible] Corporation Counsel, the Grand Sachem [illegible]

In the course of the Summer a violent [illegible]

...which ... United and ... the resolve of the members, resolutely filled, leaving vacant ... of Grand Sachem. The majority of the thir... these elected Col. D. E. PRENTAR to the ... Grand Sachem—the acceptance of which va... at the Council. A special election was ... held, to elect one Sachem, in December ... and Jeremy H. MARSH, an Anti-Woon man, and ... first Hard chosen since 1853, was elected. The ... Sachems then stood as follows:

... Sachems Cochrane, Purser, Connolly, ... and Adams—6.

... Sachems Kennedy, Purdy, Fowler, ... Conner, Froment, and Marsh—7.

... Wood soon found that a majority of the ... Sachems are a troublesome set of Indians ... encounter, and that when they have a mind to be ugly, they can be very ugly indeed. It was to no effect that, by sundry weighty inducements, he enticed JOHN SCHERMERHORN over to his side; in doing so, he had lost Sachems PURDY and CONNER. By angering the Hards, in the making up of the regular Democratic ticket in this City last Fall, (which had not a single Hard upon it,) he had driven them also to act against him in a body, and to that was due the election of MAHER. The seven Sachems set to work to give him trouble in never so many ways. They took hold of that excellent stick to beat a dog—the cry of party "proscription." They wanted purity in primary elections, duly-constituted Committees and Conventions, disappointed delegates, and fifty other preposterous unimaginable things. When Mayor WOOD's friends ... the primary elections for the choice of a ... General Committee, last December, and ... having fixed everything in their own way, as they ... supposed, took up the papers next morning ... about their triumph while they sipped their ... coffee, they found to their horror and dismay, that the friends of the seven rascally Sachems were contesting every Ward in the City, and claiming that they had carried them. Then came the two Committees, the "Small Committee," belonging to Mayor WOOD, and the "Savage Committee" devoted to the seven Sachems. The lessees of Tammany Hall admitted the former to hold its sessions there, and expelled the latter: the Sachems rebuked the lessees and closed the door upon both, giving the wink, however, to the Savages, to come in the back way. But that was a trick both could play, and so both the "Savages" and the "Smalls" have, spits of all fulminations of proprietors and lessees, been holding occasional sessions there for two months past.

Meanwhile the seven Sachems have gone on to declare both committees irregular, and neither entitled to be recognized as entitled to the use of the Hall, which belongs only to a regular committee. They next invited both these irregular committees to unite with them in naming inspectors to hold new primary elections on Thursday, the 9th inst., for the choice of a new Committee. The "Savages" agreed to this, of course; but the "Smalls" generally declined. Things were in this condition when two important matters occurred. One of these was the passage of the New-York City bills through the House of Assembly, and the other was the appointment of Mr. SCHELL as Collector of the Port. The first annihilated the influence of Mayor WOOD, who, stripped of his power and patronage, is no longer to be feared by those to whom he has been so long a terror. The second elevated a new authority among the Democracy, in the person of the veteran Hard leader, and at once struck a terrible blow at the influence of the Softs and Hard Shells, including FOWLER, SICKLES, BUTTERWORTH, TIEMEN, SAUNDERS, HASKIN, HART, & Co., who had so pertinaciously opposed the appointment of Mr. SCHELL, at Washington.

The immediate result of these occurrences was the formation of an alliance, offensive and defensive, between a portion of the seven Sachems and Messrs. HART and SAUNDERS, the new Surveyor and Navy Agent. This compact has its friends and fellow-workers among the Softs of the rural Districts, most of whom, headed by Dean RICHMOND, CASSIDY of the Albany Atlas, Lieut.-Gov. CHURCH, &c., were very hostile to Mr. SCHELL's appointment. On the other hand, Mr. SCHELL, backed up by the Hards, and strengthened by the Custom-House patronage about to be put into his hands, is in a position to make desperate fight against this formidable combination. Some of Mr. SCHELL's friends who have been very ultra and hostile against Mayor WOOD, and had thus far followed the course of the seven Sachems, were very much concerned at the appearance, in a caucus of the Anti-Wood members of the Tammany Society, held last week, of the three Anti-Schell Federal officials recently appointed—Messrs. FOWLER, HART and SAUNDERS. It was an indiscreet parade of official dignity.

On Saturday last the Council of Sachems was called to meet together in Tammany Hall, for the purpose of hearing propositions for the settlement of the entire difficulty. All the Sachems being present, the Council did not sit; but an informal meeting of members of the Tammany Society was held instead, which was presided over by Father KENNEDY, EDWARD COZZENS acting as Secretary. Sachem JOHN KELLY introduced a resolution recommending to the Council of Sachems to recede from its action in ordering the primary elections for the 9th inst., and that, in place of this, the Council enjoin upon each of the General Committees, Savage and Small, to appoint five members from each Ward, to whom the Council will add a fifth, and that these 110 delegates sit as a Convention for the reorganization of the party and the reform of its abuses. The debate on this proposition ... which appears to have been made as a sort of compromise—showed that "the seven" no longer agreed together. Sachems PURDY and DUNLAP give it an entire, and Sachems CONNER and MARSH a partial approval. There remain Sachem FOWLER, who was absent, and Sachems FROMENT and KENNEDY, who decidedly disapproved it. The latter declined to put the question to the meeting on the adoption of the resolution, and left the Chair; whereupon Sachem KELLY took it, and the resolution was adopted. The meeting then adjourned.

This (Monday) evening the monthly meeting of the Society is to be held, at which the Sachems, braves and warriors will doubtless muster strong. This is the last Society meeting before the Sachems' election on the 20th inst., and each faction will of course labor to get any advantage that may be secured in advance. As to the election of Sachems, it will doubtless be the most hotly-contested struggle ever known in the annals of the Society. The new Collector is to be reckoned on one side, and the new Surveyor, and Navy Agent, and the old Postmaster on the other; and Greek will meet Greek, and office-seeker encounter office-holder. Meanwhile, the interests of the old, inveterate, Dickinson and Buchanan Hards in the Society look brighter than they have for years. Instead of claiming one representative only on the ticket, they insist upon having a majority of the Sachems—the magic number seven. As both sides seem inclined to court their influence, it is altogether possible they may obtain their demand. But a Council of Hard Sachems in Tammany Hall would be almost a laughable thing. Only four years ago, a Hard could not be coaxed to enter the building, even to take a drink at the bar. But politicians are desperately uncertain fellows, and it would be the height of presumption for unconcerned and philosophic spectators, like the DAILY TIMES, to venture any prediction as to the result. We can only imitate an ancient ornament of the Press, and exclaim—as he was accustomed to do under similar circumstances—Nous verrons.

Letter from Matilda Heron.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Permit me to say through your columns, that I have observed, in various journals, during the last few days, an entire misapprehension of the purpose, and a misrepresentation of the purport, of the letter which I had the honor of addressing to you on Wednesday last. Nothing could have been further from my intentions than to enter the lists for a contest of words with either of my assailants, except to put myself forward as the rival of one of them; and as to criticism, even of the most censorious nature, I accept it silently, and trust to give evidence hereafter that I have endeavored to profit by it. But I had been maligned, insulted, and most gratuitously placed in a false position towards a sister artist, by those against whom my whole crime was my success; and I only wished to express to the public which had awarded me that success, and before which I had been assailed, my appreciation of the character and the motives of those who had sought to injure me. That appreciation being what it is, I cannot, of course, be expected to defend myself against further attacks from either of those quarters. They will pass by me unnoticed.

I go westward to-morrow; and although I know that, like Sir Peter in the play, when he is called away from Lady Sneerwell and Sir Benjamin Backbite, I leave my character behind me, it gives me little concern; for surely I should be the last to doubt that the respectable journals and the intelligent public of New-York are able to rate all things at their true worth; even the gross obloquy of my assailants, and the character as well as the abilities of

Your obliged and obedient servant,

SENATE....ALBANY, Saturday, April 4.

A large number of petitions were presented urging the adoption of the exterior line of the New-York Harbor Commissioners.

Mr. BROOKE presented a memorial from the Common Council of New-York, against the Metropolitan Police bill.

Mr. C. P. SMITH reported a bill providing regulations for the port of New-York. This is one of a series of bills recommended by the Harbor Commissioners to promote the preservation of the harbor. It prevents the throwing of ashes, cinders, &c., from steamboats anywhere below Spuyten Devil Creek, Throg's Nock, or inside of Sandy Hook; provides, that no rubbish or earth shall be thrown into any of the slips, or deposited on the piers or docks, except to cart away; puts all the regulations in the hands of the Board of Commissioners established in 1853, and puts Harbor Masters and Port Wardens under the control of said Board.

Mr. BROOKS reported bills creating a uniform standard of gas and appointing a Gas Inspector. He said the lateness of the session precluded the possibility of proper consideration of the bills, and the Committee, therefore, could not recommend action on them, but reported so that the parties concerned might be prepared to bring the matter up next session.

Mr. KELLY reported on the condition of the Savings Banks in the State, and paid a high compliment to the officers of these Institutions for the able manner in which, almost without exception, they had managed the trust reposed in them.

Indian Atrocities in Iowa.

MURDEROUS ATTACK ON A WHITE SETTLEMENT AT THE HEAD WATERS OF THE DES MOINES RIVER.

PITTSBURG, Saturday, April 4.

A letter received here from a responsible source, dated Fort Dodge, Iowa, March 23, says that a settlement of twenty families at the head waters of the Des Moines River had been attacked by Indians, and that it was supposed that all were murdered. Only two houses were visited by the persons bringing the news, in which fourteen dead bodies were found. Some had been shot, and others inhumanly clubbed to death. It is presumed that the whole number of persons composing the settlement were killed, or that they are now in captivity. A meeting of citizens was called on the 22d ult., and a company of fifty to one hundred men had organized to march to take vengeance on the Indians and rescue any persons that might be found with them.

Trial of Rev. Mr. Kalloch for Adultery.

BOSTON, Saturday, April 4.

The evidence in the Kalloch trial closed to-day at 1 o'clock, and the Court adjourned till Monday, when the matter will be summed up by Counsel. The continued testimony developed no material facts.

Mr. J. F. STEEN, of Brattleboro, Vt., who nine years ago married LOUISA FLYE, of Camden, Me., a schoolmate of defendant, testified that his wife was now at home very low with consumption; that she visited Boston in January last and remained from the 2d to the 10th of that month, and that he did not accompany her.

Dr. HIGGINSON, Mr. STEEN's family physician, confirmed the illness of Mrs. STEEN, which he said was hereditary in the family.

Some rebutting testimony and other collateral evidence was then put in, which closed the testimony on both sides.

THE HARBOR COMMISSIONERS.

Wharves, Piers and Slips not Property—All Lots, Stores and Houses East of Pearl, and West of Greenwich Streets, Without Title.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

So say the Harbor Commissioners. The State had no right to grant, and individuals no right to hold anything below high water mark. This is the doctrine held forth at Albany, and the Legislature is invoked to set at naught any and every grant heretofore made, to corporations or individuals, if it suits Harbor Commissioners or theoretic engineers to say that they interfere with navigation, and to make no provision for indemnifying the grantees, however great the damage done them by interfering with what has heretofore been considered vested rights. They are not content to take from us the control and management of our property, but they must cut off and destroy what they please, without compensation or award for damage. These same Harbor Commissioners unblushingly recommend that the Legislature pass laws to cut off and take up property which has been built by owners at great expense, under a grant of the highest authority of the State, relying upon its good faith, and when asked to make an estimate of what would be the probable cost of removal and restoration, or what damage would equitably grow out of such an interference with vested rights, evade the questions under the fear that it would kill their bills, and well they might fear the consequence of such a statement, for it would be strange indeed if any Legislature body could be found willing to subject the State to claims amounting to millions of dollars, for so questionable a benefit. To say that such assumptions are outrageous and immoral, "would savor much of commonplace and seem to court" discussion, but to that they indicate a want of ability in those who set them up to judge of right, or see the wrongs of that regard for moral obligation which would warrant a public trust hereafter, is to say the least that truth requires or justice calls for.

A DOCK OWNER.

We publish the above at the request of an intelligent and respectable merchant, who gives his name as a voucher for the truth of its statements. We find it very difficult to believe that the gentlemen composing the Harbor Commission hold any such doctrines, or seek to establish any such rules of action as are here attributed to them.

Taking an Alien's bed for a Militia Fee.

DENNIS MURPHY, Esq., writes to us complaining of Mr. MORRIS, of the New-York State Militia, because he wanted him to pay 75 cents Militia tax, or else submit to a fine of $3 85. DENNIS MURPHY, Esq. considers such conduct unlawful, as he has "only taken out his first papers." He states that he complied with the regulations so far as going to drill or parade on the 13th of October, 1856, as did about one hundred more. They waited at the place half a day, but neither Captain nor Marshal appeared to drill them. He asks information on the subject, and some direction as to the course most proper for him to pursue. His pressing reason is, that Mr. MORRIS says he will take the bed from under him if he does not pay him within twenty-four hours. As a bed is all the property Mr. MURPHY claims in his own right, he does not wish to lose it, if he can help it. If Mr. MURPHY is correct in all he states, we advise him to remain quiet until Mr. MORRIS calls for the bed, and then if he lets Mr. MORRIS take it without opposition, he doesn't deserve to have one.

Marine Matters.

The ship Helena, concerning which some anxiety has been felt, is reported in Wilmer & Smith's European Times as having arrived at Amoy on the 15th of October.

The United States Mail steamer Arago, Captain LINES, left Saturday, at noon, for Southampton and Havre, with 193 passengers.

Three or four sailor runners came near being drowned while towing alongside the ship Ontario, from the Quarantine, on Saturday. The boat was filled and sunk, the men having only time to escape into the ship's chains, minus boat, oars, sails and their coats.

Coroners' Inquests.

An inquest was held on Saturday upon the body of JAMES CLONONESSY, second steward of the steamship Aerial, who was drowned on Thursday night while attempting to get on board that vessel, at the foot of King-street. Deceased was a native of Ireland, and 30 years of age.

A child, three years of age, named MOSHANY, while playing with matches, set fire to its clothes, and so burned itself that it died soon afterwards.

Fires.

IN CEDAR-STREET.

At 11¼ o'clock Saturday night a fire broke out in the four-story building No. 157 Cedar-street, occupied by RECKNOW & LARNE, manufacturers of and dealers in pickles, preserves, &c., whose loss amounts to about $5,000. They are insured for $1,500—$2,500 each in the Jefferson, Hanover, and Washington Insurance Companies. The building was damaged to the extent of $1,000—insured. The feed store of JAMES DAVETT, Nos. 98 and 99 West-street, was damaged by water to the amount of about $500—insured. The store of SLEGER, RANDOLPH & Co., Commission Merchants, No. 100 West-street, was also somewhat damaged by water. The building in West-street was damaged to the extent of $500.

IN BOWERY EXTENSION.

About 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon a fire broke out in an unoccupied new building in the Bowery extension, near Oliver street. It was soon put out, and the damage done was not large. The fire is believed to have been maliciously set.

IN EAST THIRD-STREET.

About 12 o'clock Saturday night, a fire broke out in the building No. 144 East Third-street, occupied by a Mr. BAKER (the owner of the building) as a wheelwright and blacksmith shop, and by PHILIP KLAG and and JOHN SEMPT, cabinet makers. The damage done is estimated at $1,000.

IN WILLIAM-STREET.

About 10¾ o'clock last evening a fire broke out in the print store No. 22 North William-street. It was soon put out. Damage estimated at $1,000. Origin of the fire not known.

FIRE ON STATEN ISLAND.

About 12 o'clock on Saturday night a fire broke out in a bay shed at Vanderbilt's landing, (S. I.,) owned by WM. VANDERBILT. A large quantity of bale hay was destroyed. Lose about $1,000, no insurance. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

The Courts.

The April term of the Supreme and Superior Courts will commence to-day. There are no cases of particular public interest expected to be brought on this term, if we except an interesting habeas corpus case to be heard before Judge ROOSEVELT, in regard to a child named Grace M. Paulding. The facts of this case have been fully given in the TIMES. There will be two Circuits, held by Judges ROOSEVELT and PEABODY. Justice CLERKE will sit at Special Term, and Judge MITCHELL will attend to the Chamber business. Judge DAVIES will hold the Oyer and Terminer.

In the Surrogate's Court there are several important Will cases still pending examination. The first in importance in the interest felt in it by the public at large is the examination as to the alleged marriage of Mrs. Cunningham and Dr. Burdell. It is hardly probable the examination will be completed during the present month. The next will of importance, as involving the largest amount of money, is the Parish Will case. It will be probably two or three months before this case is concluded. The contested Will cases of Henry Irving, Mrs. Harriet Clayton, and Josiah B. Sutherland are expected to be terminated during the month, as also the administrations touching the Salters estate, the Bloodgood estate, the Schmidt estate, and the Guyner estate. The contested Will cases of Jonas P. Stuart and Wm. Terrell are waiting the decision of the Surrogate. They doubtless will be given in a few days.

The only case possessing any unusual interest before the United States Commissioner, at the present time, is the examination in the French Extradition case. The prosecution are nearly through with their evidence. It is understood that the defence have but a very few witnesses to examine. There is every likelihood, therefore, that this prolonged case will be shortly brought to a close

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—APRIL 4.

Before Judge Betts.

Terence Moriarty, who had pleaded guilty to an indictment for embezzling mail bags belonging to the United States, was brought up for sentence. The mail bags in this case not being worth $25, the offence did not amount to a felony. Affidavits of previous good character were read in his behalf, and Mr. Phillips, his counsel, stated that he kept a junk shop, and bought waste paper in these bags from parties who said they would call for them again, but never did so. The Court imposed upon him only a fine of $10, the lowest punishment allowed by the law; but said if any such case came before the Court, showing any guilty knowledge, the punishment should be severe.

Noel Brooks, a colored man, convicted of an assault upon the mate of the bark N. W. Bridge, with a block, was sentenced to pay a fine of $10, and an imprisonment of thirty days, and for an endeavor to make a revolt on board, of which he was convicted, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $10.

John Brown, convicted with Brooks of endeavoring to make a revolt, having been imprisoned since last November, and suffering under ill health, was also brought up, and the Court suspended sentence, and ordered him to be discharged on his own recognizance

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Duer.

DECISIONS.

Chas. Jones vs. Wm. W. Hart.—Order of arrest granted.

James C. Wicker vs. Horace Dresser.—Motion that answer be made more definite and certain. Granted in part, and in part denied. No costs to either party.

Gamaliel G. Smith and others vs. Algheus M. Smith.—Application for a Stillwell warrant granted.

James L. Cheeseman vs. James H. Sturges and others.—Motion to dissolve injunction. Injunction modified so as to limit it to $25,000 of the $150,000 of stock mentioned therein, and to restrain defendants from selling $105,000 of the residue at a less cost than may be sufficient to reimburse their advances. As to the balance, ($20,000,) injunction wholly dissolved.

Edward Le Huray and another vs. J. W. Delamater.—Case settled.

Shuball A. Darling vs. David Jackson et al.—Case settled.

Before Hon. Justice Woodruff.

OLE BULL'S JEWELRY AGAIN.

John Hopper vs. Ole Bull.—This celebrated defendant was brought before the Court on Saturday on proceedings supplementary to execution. It was alleged that he possessed personal property of considerable value, which he had fraudulently concealed from his creditors. It was also alleged that he was about to sail for Norway.

Upon the examination Mr. Bull admitted that he had three violins worth about $3,000. In the bow of one of these violins is quite a valuable diamond. He denied any immediate plan for leaving the United States, though he stated that he intended eventually to visit his native land.

The counsel for Mr. Bull, Mr. Buickley, contended that this examination was illegal, as no demand had been made on the defendant for the application of this property to pay his debts.

His Honor decided that this specific demand should have been made, and that a general demand was insufficient. He therefore discharged the defendant from the examination. The demand will probably be made, and, if not complied with, the proceedings will be renewed.

COMMON PLEAS—GENERAL TERM.—April 4.

Before Judges Ingraham, Daly and Brady.

DECISIONS.

Philip Weber vs. Frederick Reutz.—Judgment reversed with costs.

Peter R. Strong vs. The Rippowan Company.—Judgment reversed and case referred back to referee, either party to produce further testimony; costs of trial and appeal to abide event.

The Mayor et al. vs. Michael Dooley.—Judgment reversed and judgment rendered for defendant on demurrer, with leave to amend on payment of costs.

James Harris vs. Ely Hoppock.—Judgment reversed on payment of costs and order of reference.

George Young vs. J. F. Gimbrede.—Judgment affirmed with costs.

William A. Ketellas vs. Isaac C. Delaplaine.—Judgment reversed. New trial ordered unless plaintiff within ten days remits $48 50, in which case judgment is affirmed for residue with costs.

John F. Cunningham vs. David Jones.—Judgment reversed and case referred back to referee, costs to abide event, either party to be allowed to produce further testimony.

☞ The April term of the Brooklyn City Court before Judge CULVER, for civil business, will be opened to-day, when the calendar will be taken up.

HOUSE FURNISHING GOODS, No. 2.

The great Banner for capturing the wants of housekeepers was opened last week, and a month's sales without one dollar of capital. Scandal, as Pollock justly wrote—"the foulest whelp o' sin," at once was busy with her living tongue, and in words and actions said, "He gets goods on commission! Oh! folly, who will trust with property? Attempt to do business again in the City of New-York? Preposterous—the height of madness; the visionary scheme of an enthusiast," and what else I care not. While they, my enemies and jealous rivals, were talking I was working. To what purpose facts tell. Secured possession of that well-termed glorious opening for a proper development of the HOUSE FURNISHING BUSINESS.

This secured, a consignment of showcases from a creditor of the late Great Emporium, Broadway, corner of Bleecker-st., was received. The carman who delivered them could not be paid his $1 50, as the Cashier was out, and had he been in the result would have been the same, for he was not only out but absolutely out of funds. That carman called the following P. M. and received his pay.

HOW?

Another creditor consigned an invoice of chairs the following morning, and ere they were displayed one hour upon that unrivaled front, corner of 10th-st., adjoining

GRACE CHURCH,

One dozen were sold at a profit of $2. Then the cashier was not only in the store but in funds—Capital $2. Carman called—paid—looked as happy as people look when they have their just pay. Next, a consignment of feather dusters, not from a creditor, but from a good witness, at the proper time, in relation to the grand break up of

NOS. 644 AND 646 BROADWAY.

They were scarcely opened and marked but those magnificent show windows had them in their keeping; and so fine and fresh they looked that the public could not help to buy them. Result, the cash account loomed up with a fair profit. Verese 4. No. 4 was a consignment of

BIRD CAGES,

Not from a creditor, but another good witness. They were not naked before one was sold at 84 50, affording a liberal bargain and sale to buyer and seller. Next, a consignment of mats, tin ware, brushes, wooden ware, baskets,

REFRIGERATORS,
PLATED GOODS,

mattresses, hat stands, bedsteads, &c., &c., so that the great—immense—elegant big store already looks a kind of nice and somewhat full. The goods are fresh, and on sale for the benefit of the public and of the most reputable merchants and manufacturers in the City, by

SAID ROBERT DAVIS, AGENT.

His receipt book shows with what success, and those beautiful East River hank checks flying through the different banks—no kiting—solid, good as gold, give daily pleasure to the consignees, and ere long joy and happiness to the creditors of the late Great Emporium, Broadway, corner of Bleecker-st.

AND WHY?

Cash receipts over $600 last week. Gross expenses only $81. No rent until 1st of May. Profits—give a guess. Pretty good from so small a stock. No grass has grown under the feet of any of the employees of the GREAT BAZAAR FOR HOUSEKEEPERS' WANTS.

My plan of doing business is founded upon a rock. I'll open at all times to the closest scrutiny of all just and honest creditors of the late Great Emporium, as also to all consignees, and also my books. There is nothing behind the curtain. If I die (the Great Bazaar is now an emporium) it will go on under any and all circumstances. I am right and can look any man in the face. If I live I shall yet come out with an honest character, worthy of my sire, the late Nathaniel Davis, of Albany, as Albany well knows he was an honest man.

Croak on ye croakers, fire away ye bitter enemies, let the cauldron of scandal be heated hot as hot can be, and its dirty, mean, scalding vapors sucked down by the calumniators of the late proprietor of the Great Emporium. He is dead in one sense, but mighty active just about now as Agent and Commission Merchant, but in the justice of his cause is now invulnerable. A Jury of 12 men will yet pass judgment upon those 24 days of confinement in the Eldridge-st. jail. Bulletin No. 3 will be issued next week. ROBT. DAVIS, Agent.

FEARS NOT

APRIL.

The frolic mouth of April comes
And rustles through the leafy bowers,
Once more the busy wild-bee hums
Above the Spring's awakened flowers.
Long streams of light, and passing showers,
And warbling birds on every spray,
Proclaim the favorite month of ours,
The jocund herald of sweet May.

The long, dark Winter-glooms have passed—
The long, bright Summer lies before us;
The beds are reappearing fast
And cloudless skies smile kindly o'er us;—
All nature in a panting chorus,
Proclaims the time of MUFFLING gone—
And Earth, the Mother Earth that bore us,
Prepares her new SPRING STYLES to don!

Let us be true to Nature still,
And do as she so wisely teaches—
While Spring re-clothes each plain and hill,
Let us put on new coats and breeches!
And heed ye him who boldly preaches—
"Go where SMITHS' ensign stands unfurled,
Their fame o'er all creation reaches,
As the BEST CLOTHIERS IN THE WORLD!"

HALLOTYPES.—During the past week, the beautiful gallery of GURNEY'S has been even more thronged with visitors than usual. This gallery, filled as it is with exquisite works of art, is free to the public, and many conceive its choice exhibition fully equal, if not superior in interest, to most collections requiring tickets of admission. But what exacted the most universal and unqualified attention and comment, were the gems of portraiture executed by means of the lately-discovered process of Hallotyping. Some of our best artists have pronounced them unequaled by any other known method of portraiture. The impression conveyed to the mind by this process is that of the most exact effect of similitude, with the most artistic blending of light and shade, the most delicate finish, the most perfect tone and truthfulness of color, together with that softness of outline and tout ensemble peculiar to any elaborate and highly-finished painting on ivory. GURNEY'S Hallotypes promise to entirely supersede, in the estimation of the public, the heretofore favorite inventions for delineating the human face divine. No. 349 Broadway.

THEY ARE FINDING IT OUT!

People are just discovering that one-half the people die, not of disease, but of medicine! That the poor die of too much physic, and the rich die of too much food. "Licensed to kill" should be the sign over many a physician's door, for the bills of mortality, if properly examined, would show more actual murders through the ignorance of some of the faculty, than through the acts of all other kinds of assassins extant. Nine-tenths of all who die of consumption are deliberately murdered. So, too, of those who die of rheumatism, of palsy, of scrofula, of fever complaint and heart disease. The only thing that will certainly cure all these maladies is ANDRUS' Liquid Iodine, or Pure Iodine Water. Sold at $1 a bottle, by ANDRUS & FOSDICK, No. 3 Second-avenue and No. 862 Broadway; and C. H. RYNO, No. 192 Broadway; Mrs. HAYES, Brooklyn, and all druggists.

MONDAY, April 6—A. M.

The European market accounts by the Asia, arrived at this port on Saturday from Liverpool, are to Saturday, March 21. The Cotton market was steady at Liverpool, and the trade at Manchester looking fair, although public attention was much engrossed in the approaching general election. At London, the Funds were ¼@⅜ ₰ cent. higher, and Money in less pressing demand, particularly on the Stock Exchange. The Bank return was regarded as favorable, the difference in the Bullion, notwithstanding some heavy withdrawals for the Continent, being only £60,000, and the reserve of Notes on the increase. The market altogether had assumed a more steady appearance, and the news is the best for English financial affairs we have had for several weeks. The French Funds keep up to 71 for the 3 ₰ cent. Rente, and Bank of France and Crédit Mobilier shares had advanced over the previous weekly quotations. The condition of the Bank was constantly improving. The monthly statement of March 12 shows a stock of Bullion of £44,457,000, and a further increase of £400,000 was realized the week following. In American Stocks in London, some considerable sales of Illinois Central shares were made at 133@134 sterling, 135 asked at the close, and of the Construction Bonds at 90@91 ex coupon, 92 asked at the close. The sales of other descriptions were unimportant, though prices are quoted steady.

We copy, in another place, a leader from the London Times on the American Railway system, the flattering tone of which will, no doubt, strike the reader on this side as in striking contrast with the unfair, not to say malignant spirit, shown toward this property in certain circles in Wall-street, which, for the time being, unfortunately domineer over the whole market. The basis of the English article referred to would seem to be the recent report to the British Board of Trade, made by Captain DOUGLASS GALTON, of the Royal Engineers, who was in this country last Summer, but it is quite evident that the principal editor of the London Times himself, has not only profited by this document, but drawn many of his very liberal conclusions, in regard to the extraordinary developments of the material prosperity of the United States, from his own personal observations during a brief visit to New-York and the Great West about the same time. We have little hope, in calling the attention to such evidences of the respect in which our system of Railways is held abroad, of diverting from their course the gentlemen of the Stock Exchange who rejoice in the name and purpose of consistent Bears against all Railway Securities. Their fresh career in this direction must needs be run, either to their own discomfiture as in December last, or to the annihilation of all public confidence, one by one, in the corporations against which their attacks are now leveled. This last is their prime object, of course, and they have not, in the opinion of a portion of the public, been without the aid and virtual coöperation of certain parties who, in the double capacity of Railway treasurers and Stock jobbers, have been willing to avail of the assaults upon the credit of their own companies to turn a penny in operating upon the distrust thus wickedly created. We have been loth to give credence to any such charge, but, even if well founded, the fault is not in the property itself. It is to be found in a laxity of mercantile principle which overrides all delicacy, or in the remissness of stockholders is not promptly dispensing with the services of such officers. We leave others to determine which. It is not too much to say, however, that the public are becoming exceedingly restive under the state of things in Wall-street, and the issue must sooner or later be made between the power of reckless and unprincipled Stock-gambling to ruin the credit of a system which is challenging the admiration of Europe, while so wickedly assailed at home, and the ability of good men out of this Bearish circle to rescue it from such control. No reasonable man can doubt the latter, if once exercised to practical action. It has scarcely been four months since an illustration was afforded of the ease with which the most formidable attempt ever yet made to crush out values on the Stock Exchange, was itself signally floored. That it has been renewed, with the aid of other licentiates from the same school, and in a spirit even more unscrupulous, is not to be denied. The evidences of the fact the past week have been abundant. Thus far, success appears to attend it; though the end is not yet.

The latest discovery of this party is that a considerable number of the American lines are embarrassed in their finances, or fail to pay an income to the stockholders. In a system embracing twenty-six thousand miles, built up, as it were, from six to twenty-six in half a dozen years, it would be surprising if such were not the case. In the same period we have seen a considerable number of Banks explode or liquidate as unprofitable. Yet the American Banking system is sound. In the same period we have seen five or eight millions of steamship property, belonging to this City alone, fall into almost hopeless embarrassment, their shares running down to 30 ₰ cent., as the Erie road shares did about the same time, yet the same species of property have made half a dozen gigantic fortunes, and part of that which was embarrassed in 1854 is now highly productive—as instance the Pacific Mail line. In the same period too, immense mistakes have been made in City and manufacturing property, in great hotels and greater warehouses and factories, yet the proportion of embarrassment is not such as to put the ban of public confidence upon the credit of these important interests.

But we go further, and availing of the occasion of copying what our English cotemporaries and an English engineer, reporting to his own Board of Trade, say of our railways. We point to their system in comparing the faults, mistakes and embarrassments, if you please, as well as temporary unproductiveness of a portion of our lines. We have 26,000 miles,—the English 8,500 miles. The list of their Railway stocks, as daily quoted on the London Exchange, shows a larger proportion of low-priced values than ours. Many of the lines were embarrassed by the back-set of 1847, as ours were by the mistakes of 1854. But for this the whole system is not black-balled on the Exchange, nor is there an English journal so poor and degraded in reputation, or lost to every sense of shame and decency, as to dare to impeach the credit and integrity of the Railways of Great Britain as a system to further the speculations of the Exchange, if such speculations were really directed (as they are not in London) to break down confidence in all values of this nature, much less to gloat over its own love of mischief and destruction.

On the contrary, the poor roads are cared for and constantly reformed and improved in management, and their shares brought up in market worth. The good ones are cherished and their Stocks, though paying only 2½, 3 or 4 ₰ cent. per annum, held as valuable investments at from 68 to 85 ₰ cent.; while the very best, paying only 5½ or 6 ₰ cent. per annum, are made to rule at or above par. The 4 ₰ cent. Midland Road of England, is appreciated here at 82 ₰ cent., while our 8 ₰ cent. New-York Central is borne down here to about the same figure.

The Foreign Trade at the port of New-York the past week shows the Import entries to amount to $5,046,232, including the Dry Goods table in our last paper. For the week ending the 5th of April last year, the total was $6,304,978. The list of general merchandise for the week includes as much as $859,312 in Sugar and Molasses. The Export of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods for the week, amounted to $1,795,749, against $1,600,874 same week last year. The Export of Specie, more than half of which was in Foreign Coin recently received here and sent to the West Indies, amounted to $742,000, against $1,248,922 for the week ending April 5 last year. Every one of the items of Foreign Trade, it will thus be seen, compare favorably with the movement for the same week last year. The Arago, for Havre on Saturday, took bnt $12,000 in Specie. The Fulton on the 5th of April, 1856, for the same destination, carried out $562,000. The Asia, from Liverpool, brought in $875,000 in Spanish Gold. The Sub-Treasury disbursed, during the week, $191,508 in excess of its receipts; the balance standing on Saturday afternoon, $15,289,566, against $15,481,074 at the close of the previous week. The Bank average for the week, to be made up this afternoon, is not likely to show any important difference from the average of last Monday, which stood $11,325,733.

The following is a comparative statement of the export, hence, of the leading articles of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods, for the week and the corresponding week of last year:

	1856. Quantity.	1856. Value.	1857. Quantity.	1857. Value.

* These items were included in miscellaneous goods, in our export statement every week of last year. Hence, we cannot furnish comparative figures in detail, this year. Next year we shall be enabled to do so regularly, by keeping up the record as now arranged through the current year.

We are yet without the official Custom-House returns of the Foreign Trade at this port for the month of March, owing to the particularity with which the details are required to be made up at the close of the fiscal quarter of the year for transmission to Washington. They are promised, however, in a few days; so we again prefer to omit our usual comparison by weeks.

COURSE OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

The market through the week was irregular on part of the Railroad list, but generally lower at the close. The extreme fluctuations in Southern Michigan were from 74½@69¾, and then to 71@70⅝ at the close; Erie varied about 1 ₰ cent.; Reading, 1@1¾ ₰ cent. closing the same as on Saturday week. Rock Island fell off 3 ₰ cent. after the high rate paid to meet contracts maturing or called in for the closing of transfers. Illinois Central Scrip fell off 1½ ₰ cent., Panama the same, and Galena 1 ₰ cent. There was some firmness shown on New-York and Erie on Friday and part of the day on Saturday, but after the close of the Second Board Street sales were made as low as 52⅝, on the calculation, we understand, that the Assembly at Albany may yet be induced, for the accommodation of the Bears, to refuse the Company the bill heretofore passed unanimously by the Senate to authorize the diversion of the Sinking Fund. The bill has already been reported and passed to a third reading in the Assembly, and there is little question that it will be finally granted, without serious objection, as the nature of the privilege asked for really involves none. The legal right of converting the Bonds of the Company, originally made convertible into shares, already exists, and a resolution of the Board of Directors now to authorize the conversion of the Bonds of 1875, of which over a million dollars have been bought in for the stockholders, in lieu of paying them cash dividends, would be as effectual as further legislation on the subject. But the other course was deemed more respectful, and the petition of the Company was at once granted by the Senate. The power and influence of the New-York Herald and the gentlemen in Wall-street who sell this and other New-York road Stocks by the five or ten thousand shares, short, to break them down, over the House of Assembly, are yet to be tested. The latter have made their boasts—we shall see in a few days with what authority.

The Money and Exchange Markets during the week worked in favor of increased means for employment on the Street, and a reasonable measure of ease was experienced by both Stock and Discount Brokers in borrowing money. The rates, at call, 7 ₰ cent., and on prime paper, 8@9 ₰ cent. The Foreign banking houses, since successfully advancing their Sterling bills to 108⅛@108¾, have been more disposed to lend Money for temporary employment.

Messrs. LE HURAY & Co., No. 9 Wall-street, quote Land Warrants as follows:

The gross receipts (before settlement with the connecting Roads) on the New-York Central line are reported over $650,000, and on the Erie $600,000, for the month of March, being over $100,000 in excess of the same month last year in both instances.

The following figures will show the gradual increase of tonnage over the Pennsylvania Railroad for the first quarter of each of the last five years:

Anthracite Coal Trade.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

The Anthracite coal trade is gradually increasing, though the Lehigh Navigation Company has not yet commenced business. During the week ending on Saturday last, the Lehigh Valley Railroad brought down 7,733 tons, making for the season 54,734 tons. Last year the first published report of tonnage by this road was on the 12th of April, and the first by the Lehigh Navigation on the 19th of April; consequently the reported tonnage this year from the Lehigh mines is wholly in advance of tonnage to corresponding time last year. The Reading Railway brought down for the week ending on Thursday last 27,614 tons, and for the year 447,850 tons, against 415,461 tons to the same time last year, being a gain of 32,389 tons. The Schuylkill Navigation Company has shipped for the week ending on Thursday 18,176 tons, being for the year 35,773 tons; all of which is in excess of last year's tonnage to the same time. The whole Anthracite tonnage thus far is 152,886 tons in excess of tonnage to corresponding date last year.

FREE-SOIL SCHEME OF EMIGRATION—LETTER FROM ELI THAYER.

WORCESTER, Mass., Thursday, March 19, 1857.

DEAR SIR: I thank you for your lucid and able analysis of the plans and purposes of the North American Emigration Company, as given in the Herald of Feb. ... of January 10.

...have shown a true conception of the project, ... seems to me an accurate appreciation of its ... and its probable results.

...assure you that it is our purpose to be strictly a ... organization.

...shall abide by the laws, State and National.

...shall adhere with wonderful tenacity to the Con... and the Union.

...shall purchase large tracts of land at Slave... prices; shall give away to actual settlers about ... fourth; shall sell about one-fourth at cost, and ... remainder at Free-State prices—thus probably ... our money on each operation.

...is no chance for such speculation except in ... States, and even in them only in proportion to ... extent of Slavery. For example: There will be ... inducement for us to buy land in Hancock, Brooke, ... or Ohio counties, in Western Virginia, for in ... counties it is worth from $20 to $27 per acre. ... counties, and the bulk of the others in Western ... are essentially free. Our chances would be ... better in Dinwiddie, Southampton, Accomac, ... other exhausted counties, where we can obtain ... for from $3 to $5 per acre—such being the average ... in those localities where the slaves are a majori... of the population. Now these lands are more de... than those of the counties first named, and by ... them free white colonies we can make ... more valuable. It is too much, therefore, for ... Virginia neighbors to expect of human nature—... especially of Yankee human nature—that we ... forego any such chance as this of securing ... and ample dividends, especially when this can ... in a manner perfectly legal and constitutional.

...Carolinas, and also to our sister States of the South, demands that these Yankee immigrants under ELI THAYER, be repulsed from the soil of Virginia. No nice technicality of legal form can fetter a people in protecting their essential interests. A government cannot be destitute of the power of resistance to an enterprise which strikes at the foundation of society. We have a Governor whose antecedents and character forbid the idea that he will quietly suffer a colony of Abolitionists to plant themselves upon our soil. We have a people whose sensibility to aggression from the North, has been exasperated by a succession of insults and outrages, and who are in no mood to bear with composure such a wrong and indignity as Mr. ELI THAYER meditates. So we warn Mr. ELI THAYER to stay at home; or else conduct his colony in another direction. At the last session of our Legislature, an act was passed for the punishment of Yankee emissaries. If Mr. ELI THAYER wants to test its efficacy, let him come with his hungry crew of rogues and vagabonds.

SOMETHING SENSIBLE FROM A SOUTHERN QUARTER, WHICH VIRGINIANS WILL DO WELL TO CONSIDER.

From the New-Orleans Bulletin, March 27.

COLONIZING VIRGINIA.—The papers of late have given prominence to a scheme alleged to be on foot to colonize the northern part of Virginia by free laborers from Pennsylvania and New England. A company has been projected, it is said, with a capital of three or four millions of dollars, which either has purchased, or will, large tracts of worn-out land in Virginia, and will re-sell it in small farms to emigrants who will be induced to settle there. This is certainly a significant sign of the times, and may well attract public attention. Some of the Virginia papers, we notice, grow furious about it, and invoke the Legislature to take measures to prevent the "assaults of Abolition upon the institutions of the South!" Characteristic enough! We reckon it would be like "calling eolrite from the vasty deep!" If they call the settlement of the worn-out sedge patches of Virginia which Gov. WISE says "outshine the sun," by emigrants from New-England or anywhere else, an assault upon the institutions of the South, we fear there will be no defense against the said assaults. A greater power than any Legislature is vested with must come to the rescue, or there will be no defence. It would be a spectacle decidedly rich and refreshing to see a Legislature of any State undertake to prescribe to its own citizens to whom they should dispose of their lands, barren or otherwise, who should and who should not settle upon and cultivate them, or to prevent the citizens of any other State from entering it and making it their permanent abode. The Legislature of a State is not quite competent to overthrow the Constitution of the United States. If the institutions of the South cannot be defended in any other way than this, then they are not susceptible of any defence at all. Such a mode of warfare would be in the first place, unconstitutional, in the next, utterly impossible of execution, and, lastly, it would subject all concerned in it to boundless ridicule, would make them a target and a laughing stock to the whole country. Quixotic as it is however there doubtless may be found persons crazy enough to advocate it.

We refer to this matter simply because there is a principle involved in it bearing upon the Southern States, and in which, consequently, we are interested, though perhaps not to the same extent as the people of Virginia. Why is it that the latter State has been degenerating, its soil becoming exhausted, and its whole affairs going to waste and poverty? That she is going down hill and has been so for years, let her own press testify.

What is the cause, we ask, of all this? Instead of invoking the Legislature or the Giraffe to erect barriere against the inroads of the Yankees and Dutch, the "first families" would be more profitably employed, we suhmit, in obtaining an answer to this question, with reference to some sensible efforts to inaugurate a new and more encouraging order of things.

The whole secret of the wasting away of the Old Dominion, of its poverty, worn-out soil, dilapidated old fields, sedge patches, briar patches, waning power and influence, lies undoubtedly in the fact that her press, public men, and leading citizens generally, have devoted their attention from time immemorial, almost exclusively to politics. The rights of Virginia, the mother of States and of Statesmen, the rights of the South, the Virginia and Kentucky resolutions of '98–'99, the Democracy, etc.—these have been the burden of the Virginia press ever since we can remember. The attention of her people has been directed to hair-splitting dogmas, about abstract State rights, the genius of Democracy, and President-making. The consequence has been that victory has always perched upon the banner of the said Democracy, "Federalism" has been whipped clear out of the State time and again, the people have been sound to the core in the faith of the most approved political orthodoxy, and—the State has been running down hill every day, too, having had twenty-three Members of Congress, in 1830, and thirteen now? Any lesson to be drawn from this? While "the rights of the South" have been vigorously defended, the wooden horse has entered through innumerable gaps in rotten fences, and grazed in thousands of dilapidated, worn-out old fields, wherever, in fact, he could get a bite, finding the grass, however, generally, we must say, so stunted as nearly to starve him to death. Internal improvements have been ignored, as rather too plebeian in character to occupy the attention of men of enlarged capacities: public schools—which always afford, of course, the life blood of a State—have been almost entirely neglected. The rich were able to educate their own children; and as to the poor, what need had they for education? Has it not been held by some of the great lights of its press that knowing how to read is rather a disadvantage? Consequently, great numbers of her people have grown up in ignorance of the merest rudiments of mental culture.

The very Presses that have been directing the attention of the people of Virginia to far-off, abstract matters, which, however true or false they might be, only served to divert them from practical, home subjects of the greatest importance to their real interest and improvement, now seem very much surprised upon waking up to find the State dwindling down to nothing comparatively, and about to be taken by the Freesoilers. If they had thought about this twenty years ago, if they had let the "Virginia and Kentucky resolutions" alone, if they had urged the people to build a school-house at every cross-road, and to go to making railroads, hats, shoes, shirts, plows, hoes, cloths, gimlets, clocks, pins, &c., &c., Virginia now might have been just what New-York is, or considerably ahead. What a powerful argument in favor of internal improvements, of the development of home resources, and home industry, does the example of Virginia, with its results, afford. Let the Southern States profit by it.

Naval.

IMPROVEMENTS IN THE WALLABOUT.

The filling in of the section to be devoted to the barracks will be completed by September, when the work of erecting the buildings will commence. The bottom being of soft mud, all the foundations will be laid upon strong piles. The whole area of this section is 700 feet long by 400 wide, and the barracks to be erected will furnish accommodations for 350 marines, besides the necessary houses for the officers. The plans are not yet entirely perfected, but will not vary essentially from the following: The main entrance building will occupy the centre of the plot, upon the avenue line, which will be divided into a room for the officers of the day on the left, and an armory on the right of the arch. The officers' quarters will occupy the South-east corner, with all the requisite rooms, and the Commandant's house the southwest corner of the ground, having stables and coach-house to the northward, upon the west line, and a garden 140x88 feet attached. The prison building, 48x43 feet, will occupy the northwest corner, and the north side will be devoted to a line of barracks, of two-story elevation, divided as follows: Six dormitories, 22½x30 feet, a dining room 120x22½ feet, to which will be joined a kitchen, bake-house, store-room, and pantry: this line will be completed by a garden in the form of a parallelogram, with the out-houses behind it. The Hospital building will be placed low down on the east side. The parade ground in the centre will be 492x266 feet, with a graveled walk 14 feet wide all round it, separated by a line of posts and chains, and a series of grass plots will ornament the front, or avenue line. The work has not yet been advertised for contract, but will be, soon. The remaining portion of the flats will be improved by the erection of other buildings as they are required, by the construction of timber basins, &c., all which, when completed, will obliterate the recollection of the unsightly and malodorous Wallabout Flats, and materially enhance the value of house lots in that vicinity.

WASHINGTON, Monday, April 6, 1857.

Dr. PARKER, estimable as he is acknowledged to be in every respect, and invaluable as his services have been to our merchants in China, is scarcely considered here to be precisely the man whom the exigencies of the moment require as our Plenipotentiary in China. My opinion is that he will be speedily replaced by some one of much superior ability and nerve, and who shall be better fitted to encounter emergencies as they may arise, in the complicated state of foreign relations in the Celestial Empire. Our representation abroad is everywhere extremely weak; but it is particularly necessary that new arrangements should be made for those pointe where the property of our merchants is unusually exposed. Urged at home, as the United States Government is by England, to follow her belligerent initiative in relation to China, under pretext of civilization and progress, it cannot be doubted that every pretext will be used on the spot to force us into hostilities. Under such circumstances we require a "first-rate man"—one alike endowed with prudence and force of character—to prevent needless outbreaks, make capital for increased commercial privilegee out of the folly of Great Britain and France, and, at the same time, not offend the latter powers by impertinent interference with their concerns. The question of a Minister to China and his duties, will doubtless be settled ere the close of this week.

Before the TIMES of to-morrow is distributed among its readers, Mr. ROBERT J. WALKER will probably have reached your City, and have settled, for the few remaining days of his sojourn in the East, at the New-York Hotel. The industry which he has brought to bear, since his acceptance of the Governorship of Kansas, in studying up the details of affairs in that Territory has been next to unexampled. His desire is to commence his administration, not only thoroughly booked up as to men and things, but as far possible with a "sliding scale" plan for every contingency. No other kind of plan could properly be deemed a wise one. It is not easy to foresee what the action of any of the parties in Kansas will hereafter be in relation to the Slavery difficulty. If the Convention which meets in September shall fairly represent the views of the majority of the inhabitants, the course of the Governor will be comparatively clear and easy. But what colored delegates will appear at that Convention? Will the Free-State population throw away their vantage ground, and abstain from action in the premises, or will they strain every nerve so to expose fraud in the census returns as to secure a proper election of Delegates? Can Border Ruffianism be efficiently discouraged, or must it ride rampant over all obstacles, as the bloody-eyed Missourians, at BROWN'S Hotel, lately threatened? If, when the census is laid before the Governor, he is convinced that gross wrong has been perpetrated, will he divide the aggregate amount by 60, and abide the consequences; or will he refuse to perform the part assigned him by the late law? If he does not perform it, who will? And how will his implied veto be received and overcome? To what point will aggression be allowed to go, before it is met and put down by force of arms? Clear-headed and energetic as Governor WALKER has always proved himself to be, the embarrassments of his position justify him fully in taking sufficient time to pause and reflect. The whole country looks to him with a degree of confidence which must be agreeable to himself, and powerful as an incentive to such a display of vigor and independence as shall cast the memory of his predecessors into the shade.

Now that the worst worry, hurry and hustle of appointments is over, the whole attention of Mr. BUCHANAN is being turned to our foreign relations. They will occupy most of his time for some days, and ere the close of the week, I shall have much that is interesting to communicate. It may be doubted whether more industry has ever been displayed by an Executive, during the first month of his official career than has been exhibited by the present Chief Magistrate. This is partly owing to the fact that long experience has caused him, as well as most members of his Cabinet, to have such settled convictions upon most subjects of public interest, that consultation is facilitated and speedy decision are insured.

It is, as yet, uncertain what disposition will be made of General THOMAS, but it is generally understood that he will be given a foreign mission, for which he is eminently qualified by his past position. Mr. APPLETON, whose health is still far from good, has entered upon the dutise of his office, much to the satisfaction of the President, who reposes in him the fullest confidence, and can consult with him with even more freedom than with General CASS. In every respect the appointment of Mr. APPLETON is deemed highly significant of what relations are likely to subsist hereafter in the State Department.

Relief is afforded to a certain class of our industrials by the suspension of the meetings of the Court of Claims until the first Monday in May. They need the recess, in order to consider sundry important cases which demand their full and exclusive attention.

The Nicaragua news is partially credited, though all reports of WALKER'S victories must be taken cum grano salis. He has, undoubtedly, obtained more or less important successes, but they will doubtless be diminished in proportion as the details shall be wholly known.

[FROM OUR REGULAR TELEGRAPHIC REPORTER.]

WASHINGTON, Monday, April 6.

Two Naval Boards of Inquiry have been ordered to be instituted here in addition to the one now sitting. The names of the officers have not been divulged. The order of the cases has been changed. Those of furloughed and on-leave officers are to be taken up before proceeding further with the cases of dropped officers. The case of Lieut. WAGER was finished to-day and the decision forwarded to the Secretary of the Navy.

Captain STRINGHAM, a member of the present Board, has been ordered to the command of the Charlestown Navy-Yard.

Our affairs with China continue to occupy the attention of the Administration, since it has been known in Washington that the British Government has appointed Lord ELGIN as Minister Plenipotentiary to China. Our Government has determined to send one thither at an early day, but owing to the great distance of China, and the time that will necessarily be involved in receiving and transmitting official communications, the Administration is solicitous in selecting a minister in whom the utmost confidence can be placed, and who will be governed by a wise discretion, considering the general interests involved, including our increasing commerce in that part of the world.

It is erroneously stated in the newspapers that Col. E. E. LANE, the nephew of the President of the United States, who recently died at Lancaster, Penn., contracted his disease at the National Hotel, in this city, about the time of the Inauguration. So far from this being true, he was in good health for several weeks after his return home, and his death was occasioned by the effects of a severe cold.

JAMES TYSSOWSKI, an eminent Pole, died suddenly last night of disease of the heart. He had been for several years an Assistant Examiner at the Patent-Office.

The President has made the following appointments: JAMES B. REYNOLT, Receiver of Public Moneys at Hudson, Wisconsin, vice HOYT, resigned; WM. T. GALLOWAY, Register of the Land Office, and NOBLE BYRON BRYDEN, Receiver of Public Monies, at Excelsive, Wiechusin.

The President has appointed and reappointed the following Postmasters;

John Frazer, at New-Bedford.

Thomas Y. Young, at Saratoga Springs, vice Mr. Close, whose commission has expired.

John M. Talbot, at Indianapolis, vice Mr. Wick whose commission has expired.

The Circuit Court made a decision to-day, sustaining the Building Associations charging more than the legal rate of interest, on the ground that their loans to members are in the nature of a contract; and are, therefore, not usurious.

Mr. STANTON, the newly appointed Secretary of State for Kansas, left this afternoon for that Territory.

THE TEHUANTEPEC ROUTE AND THE SLOO GRANT—GOV. WALKER AND KANSAS AFFAIRS—DR. PETER PARKER AND THE CHINESE—THE UNION, ETC.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, April 4, 1857.

It was recently announced with much pomp and circumstance, that the road at the Isthmus of Tehuantepec had been completed within the prescriptions of the Sloo Grant, and a wagon had been driven over it, before the expiration of the time limited by the contract. Following close upon the heels of this statement, assurance was given to the public, that a regular mail would be immediately opened by that route. Interested parties may be justified in giving the best possible coloring to their own projects, but as this matter concerns the whole community, and may involve the interests of others, and besides those directing a large speculation, it is proper that exaggerations should be exposed. In the first place, Congress did not authorize a mail to be transported by the Tehuantepec route, and, therefore, no contract can be made for any such purpose. A memorial was submitted by Gen. RUSK, containing a proposition on this subject, but no action was taken upon it.

That point being disposed of, the next question is, how Mr. SLOO, and the parties operating with him, fulfilled the condition of the grant which he obtained from Mexico? This is answered distinctly in the negative here, and by those who not only claim to be well informed, but who have access to the best intelligence. The opinion is predicted, however, upon the extent of information which has reached Washington. The contract expressly stipulated that a plank road on the Isthmus should be constructed within a given time. It is not claimed in the accounts which have been published, that any such road has been built, and it therefore remains to be seen whether Mexico will accept the driving of a horse and buggy across as a satisfactory execution of the obligation. What has been done now, was done before by others; and the pretence then exposed itself. Hence, a repetition of the experiment would not seem to be very encouraging, unless Mexican eyes have become suddenly blinded to their own rights.

When Mr. SLOO obtained this grant from Mexico, the arrangement was that a share of the benefits should be appropriated to that Government, and $600,000 paid down as an advance upon the prospective interest. Mr. LOK, who acted as the agent of Mr SLOO, made a negotiation through Mr. FALCONET, agent of the BARINGS, for the sale of drafts upon Mr. SLOO, by which this consideration should be paid. It was understood in Mexico that Mr. LAW and other capitalists of New-York were interested in the enterprise, and when, therefore, Judge CONKLIN, the United States Minister to Mexico, was called upon for an opinion in regard to the solvency of the parties, he did not hesitate to assure Mr. FALCONET he thought that the drafts would be paid. Mr. HARGOUE, of New-York, was introduced into the money negotiation, and became the assignee of the lien on the grant, made by SLOO'S attorney as security for the advance. The drafts were not paid at maturity, and are still believed to be held by Mr. HARGOUE, who now stands in the double capacity to the Tehuantepec route of being a contestant against SLOO under the grant to GARAY, and an assignee under SLOO himself.

There are indications that the Mexican Government will not take the nominal connection between the two Oceans as a substantial or fair fulfillment of the stipulation, and may resume its original authority over the route in consequence of this failure. Should that course be taken, then it would become necessary to refund the advance of $600,000, which, it may be supposed, would be readily assumed by parties who would rejoice at the opportunity of standing in the shoes of Mr. SLOO. This subject is likely to be involved in some complication before it is all over, and it is not an improbability that the Government may step in finally and negotiate Tehuantepec into its own hands, notwithstanding the terms of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty concerning the Isthmus passes. We will see, when the present pressure is relieved, in which way the Administration will strive to untie this knot, or whether, imitating the example of ALEXANDER, it will cut it.

Although Governor WALKER'S proclamation touching Kansas was pacific, and designed to address the "intelligence and patriotism of the whole people" in that Territory, it must not be understood that it is either his purpose, or that of the Administration, to withdraw the military forces, or to hesitate in appealing to that resource should the necessity be apparent and urgent. The head quarters are transferred from Leavenworth to St. Louis, and a portion of the troops will be changed in order to disconnect the new Governor with any of the former prejudices that may yet linger, and remove associations that might be disturbing. The aggregate force at the command of the Governor will be slightly increased, and he has full authority to employ it in any exigency that may require such interposition. All these contingencies were fully discussed in Cabinet in Mr. WALKER'S presence, and with his full communion and concurrence.

Mr. STANTON, the Territorial Secretary, will start for Kansas on Monday, and with the expectation, which is countenanced here, and may have been among the reasons for acceptance, of being one of the first Senators from the new State. It is within the range of common possibilities, notwithstanding all the parade made over the appointments, that Mr. WALKER may see reasons for reconsidering his determination, and be very willing to get the chance of transferring his energies and ambition elsewhere. Mr. STANTON will have been on the ground nearly a month before he proposes to leave here, and within that time, developments may take place modifying the views of himself and the Administration. He desires the Chinese mission, if advantages can be connected with it, which the present law does not afford, and which, if agreed upon, would require the assent of the next Congress. Mr. WALKER is a man of splendid visions, and the Flowery Kingdom offers a field for their indulgence.

Dr. PETER PARKER is considered behind the times by our progressive young President, and our energetic young Premier. The Chinese, who draw their social distinctions finer than we do, look upon a man who cuts the wens of the canaille and administers potions, as incompetent to embody diplomatic dignity. Hence, it is said, his official influence is circumscribed, and the public interests thus suffer, through a functionary who is divested of power to serve them, through a false personal prejudice. If these reasons did not exist, others would be found for "rotating" the Doctor. His place is wanted, and the Administration has got the idea of playing a strong card among the Celestials. As for Chinese, any man who can read his alphabet backwards, will answer. The late Attorney-General, (KOOSHING,) who is supposed to be of Chinese derivation, has been suggested with others in this connection, and is recommended by the fact that he handled the cross-sticks with Gov. KEYING during the Tylerian era. By the way, KEYING was something of a wag, and when KOOSHING, who was not then so proficient in Chinese as he afterwards became—at a State dinner, pointed to a savory dish which had partly tickled his palate, and said, inquiringly, "Quack, quack," the Governor shook his head, and replied, with much gusto, "Bow, wow," very much to the ease of the Commissioner's stomach.

Three or four days ago it was understood to be ... as we Americans say, that Mr. APPLETON ... matters in the Union, as all causes of differ... had been accomodated. Suddenly, however, the ... efforts became tangled worse than before, and failed. Then Mr. BUCHANAN turned his back upon the whole concern, and told the managers they might go—to Paradise if they could. In this emergency, Mr. HARRIS, now residing in one of the Border-Ruffian counties of Missouri, formerly a member of Congress from Virginia, formerly an editor of CALHOUN'S paper, the Constitution, in this city; and afterwards Chargé d'Affaires, by CALHOUN'S appointment, to Buenos Ayres, was pitched upon by the proprietors as an acceptable person to serve their interests and to relieve them of a bad odor which other connections had occasioned. There will be a nominal transfer of ownership in order to justify the declaration that the paper has changed hands; but those who know WENDELL, MCGUIRE, and the other jobbers who bought it to be used as a profitable auxiliary to their schemes, will believe the story, just as they did that put out under NICHOLSON'S, régime, when he assured the public they held no interest, and while As in fact was their instrument. Mr. SMITH, of Virginia, who was connected with TUCKER'S Sentinel here, is to officiate as Assistant Editor. So the organ will begin by playing "Old Virginny never tire." Both these gentlemen are conceded fair parts, but the Potomac is not considered in danger of conflagration by their contact. Mr. HARRIS is an amiable and excellent person, charged with Virginia abstractions, and armed with the Resolutions of '98 against all dissenting opinions. Every reader of the Union should be provided with a microscope to discover into what minute particles it is possible for a real Virginia editor to split fine hairs.

Connecticut State Election.

PROBABLE SUCCESS OF THE UNION TICKET.

NEW-HAVEN, Monday, April 6.

The election returns are scattering, owing to the storm, which has also diminished the vote. The opinion is that the Union State ticket will be elected.

The Union candidates for the Legislature are probably elected.

To Congress, Mr. CLARKE, in the Hartford District, and Mr. DEAN, in the New-London District, both Union, are elected. The Fairfield District is doubtful, nothing having been heard from the Litchfield part of it, but it is supposed that Mr. ARNOLD, Administration, is elected.

Of the three Senators in this county, the Union Party have probably elected PETERS in the Sixth District, and the Administration Party ENGLISH in the Fourth District, and perhaps SPENCER in the Fifth District.

The chances for Sheriff of this County are in favor of the Administration candidate by about 100 majority. The Administration Representative is chosen from this city by about 200 majority.

Hartford elects two Republican Representatives, and gives on the State ticket 50 majority to the Democrats.

EZRA CLARK, Jr., opposition, is reelected to Congress.

The Democrats have elected their Senator in the First District, and the Republicans in the Second. The Third District is very close.

The House and Senate are believed to be Republican.

Enough has not yet been heard in regard to the State ticket to form any opinion as to the result.

GEN. WALKER'S LATE VICTORIES—IMPORTANT LETTERS INTERCEPTED—INTERFERENCE OF THE BRITISH IN THE TRANSIT.

ST. NICHOLAS HOTEL, Monday, April 6, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Your reporter has omitted one point in my remarks with respect to the news from Gen. WALKER. I stated, and repeat, that Don FERMIN FERRER, the Minister from Nicaragua, and other gentlemen besides myself, who had particular reason to expect letters from the seat of war, had failed to receive them. I was much occupied with several friends then present, and was disinclined to give names, but I distinctly informed him that some letters had been received.

I did not enter into any particulars as to how, where or by whom we believed our letters had been intercepted, and am not disposed to enter into any discussion at present; but I will observe that Mrs. HENNINGSEN received a note from her husband, Gen. HENNINGSEN, last Saturday evening—directed to her under cover to a friend—and dated March 19. In this letter Gen. HENNINGSEN refers to a letter written the day before, giving a detailed account of the battle of the 17th, which letter has not come to hand. I saw the note of March 19.

I also received at the same time—the 4th inst.—a letter from Gen. WHEAT, dated from the San Juan River, Feb. 25, purporting to have come by the Tennessee, which arrived here about the 20th ult.

The Jury were then discharged until to-morrow, and the Judge then took up a motion for an injunction in the case of Gustave Struve vs. Frederick Schroedler and John F. Pople.—This is a copyright case, the plaintiff claiming that the defendants are selling a History of the World in German, written by the plaintiff, in violation of his copyright.

The defendants claim that the plaintiff, before obtaining the copyright, made an agreement with Wilhelm Schulter to publish a book, which is the same book as the one in question; that Schulter did publish the books until, becoming unfortunate in business, he did make an assignment; that he had executed a chattel mortgage upon the stereotype plates of the book in question, with other things, and that they were afterwards sold at public auction, and purchased by the defendants, and that there was no copyright of the book up to that time. Judge NELSON, after hearing argument of counsel, denied the motion for an injunction.

For complainant, Mr. White; for defendants, Mr. Hadley.

Decision in Admiralty.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge Betts.

COLLISION—DUTY OF VESSELS FOLLOWING EACH OTHER.

Cornelius Vanderzee vs. The sloop James Henry.—The libel in this case was filed by the owner of the sloop Advocate, to recover the damage occasioned to her by a collision with the James Henry, which occurred March 10, 1853, on the North River, near the mouth of Spuyten Duyvil Creek. Both vessels were beating up the river in broad daylight on a floodtide, with a fresh breeze from the north. Both vessels were on their tack towards the east shore, when the James Henry being the farthest north, and having approached so near the shore as to justify her in considering that stretch to be run out, though some witnesses testified that she might have gone a few yards further, she came about on her starboard tack, and immediately the two vessels came together, the bowsprit of the James Henry striking the starboard bow of the Advocate.

Held by the Court—That the Advocate could not lawfully press upon the James Henry or drive her to a dangerous proximity to the shore, nor place herself in a position which would prevent or impede the action of the James Henry in getting about upon the opposite tack.

That the James Henry was entitled to change her tack when her master or pilot, in the exercise of a sound discretion, deemed she had gone as near the shore as was prudent, but she could not lawfully be brought suddenly about on the opposite tack in the path of the Advocate, or in such manner as to disable the latter from avoiding her.

That where the libellant had ample breadth and depth of water at his command, he cannot justify crowding the opposite vessel to the nearest practicable point from the shore, but must leave reasonable room for her pilot to determine the proper point at which to bring her about.

That the James Henry was kept upon her tack as far in shore as was required under the circumstances, and that the primary fault was with the Advocate in not coming about when the James Henry did, or bearing away under her stern.

Libel dismissed with costs.

For libellant, Messrs. Beebe, Dean and Donohue. For claimant, Mr. Morton and Mr. Haskett.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT—April 4.

Before Hon. Justice Clerke.

INSURANCE NOTES—LEGALITY OF TRANSFER.

Alanson Marsh vs. J. E. Brett et al.—The defendants gave their note to the International Insurance Company, of which the plaintiff was president, for the premium on a policy of insurance on a vessel. Subsequently the president loaned the company some $3,000 and, without any resolution on the part of the directors, took this, with other notes, to reimburse himself. The notes, however, were regularly indorsed to him by the company. The defendants refused to pay their note on maturity, setting up illegality of transfer, and denying the legal organization of the Company.

For plaintiff, J. W. Stevens; for defendant, G. Dean.

Judge CLERKE rendered the following decision:

CLERKE, J.—I do not think that the defendants could have availed themselves of any of the alleged defects in the incorporation of the International Insurance Company, in an action commenced by the Company. It would have been sufficient for them to prove the charter and the uses under it, and if the plaintiff in this action was a bona fide holder, he would have been entitled to recover, notwithstanding such defects. But I have as little doubt that he is not a bona fide holder, or rather he is not legally a holder at all of this and other notes. Gillett vs. Phillips, 3 Kernan 116, settles the question. Marsh, the plaintiff in this action, was the President, and a Director of the Company, and took notes, of which this was one, in the whole exceeding $1,000, sufficient to satisfy his claim against the Company, $1,700 or $1,800 for money therefor advanced to them.

This was clearly in violation of the statute, (1 R. S., sections 8, 9.) It was "a transfer not authorized by a previous resolution of the Board of Directors," and it does not fall within the exceptional clause of the section, for the notes were not transferred to "a purchaser without notice." A President or Director is presumed to be cognizant of the absence of such authority, and this will be presumed in an action brought by him against a party to the note, as well as in an action commenced against him for the recovery of the note by a receiver. Judge Gardiner in delivering the opinion of the Court in Gillat vs. Phillips says that the contract in "that case was not only unauthorized but illegal. No action could have been sustained by Phillips against the Bank for the price paid by him for the note, although he had sold the notes to redeem the circulating paper of the Bank. A transfer of this kind is expressly prohibited by statute, is therefore absolutely void, and no right to or property in the thing transferred accrues to the offending party. Judgment for defendants with costs.

The Balance Docks Declared Nuisances.

Before Hon. Justice Roosevelt.

John and George V. Hecker vs. The New-York Alkience Dock Company.—This case, the facts of which were fully reported in the TIMES at the time of the hearing, was decided yesterday. His Honor rendered the following opinion, which sufficiently explains itself:

ROOSEVELT, J.—The plaintiffs, who are the owners of the Croton Mills, and a large amount of other real estate in the neighborhood of Pike-slip, on the East River, complain that the defendants, about a year ago, stationed in the slip a floating dock, permanently secured to one of the piers, greatly incommoding the plaintiffs' business, increasing the expense of cartage and impairing the value of their property, and they ask for a judgment of the Court to abate "the said nuisance," as they call it, and to restrain the defendants, by injunction, from further obstructing or incumbering "the said basin, or said bulkheads or piers."

The Dock Company, in their answer, among other things, deny that their works are an obstruction to the public highways, or that they are a public nuisance, or that they are "productive of great injury to the plaintiffs or any other citizens;" on the contrary, they insist that their occupation for the lifting, raising, and sustaining vessels which require repairs, is a lawful commercial use of the pier, basin, and bulkhead."

On the trial, which consumed the larger portion of a week, a great number of shipowners, mechanics, and other persons, were examined as witnesses, on both sides of the controversy; the result of whose testimony shows clearly that the dock, to some extent, is the cause of special injury to the Messrs. Hecker, for which, if it be a public nuisance, not authorized by law, they have a special right individually, on their own separate behalf, to ask relief at the hands of the Court. For altoough a public nuisance may be abated by anybody, and without suit, (5 Rep. 101—Cas. Mar. 134) the more orderly mode is by application to the courts and the officers of the law. The question, then, to be determined is whether the dock of the defendants, moored and permanently established in one of the public slips is, in legal contemplation, a public nuisance.

To place a floating dock in the river, it is said, in a note to Hawkins' Pleas of the Crown, (vol. 2, c. 75, sec. 11,) although beneficial in repairing ships, is a common nuisance. So a common wagoner, however useful and necessary may be his occupation, who continually obstructs the passage of a street in the exercise of his business, may be indicted as a nuisance. (3 East's Reports, 427.)

Where the inhabitants of a town had by custom a watering-place, in common, for their cattle, which was stopped by another. It was held (5 Rep. 73, 9 Rep. 109) that any one inhabitant might have an action against the usurping individual as for a nuisance. In the case of Corning and Lowerre, (5 Johnson's Chancery Reports, 439,) an injunction was granted, as for a nuisance, against a person who was erecting his house partly on the street, to the prejudice of the common right of an adjoining owner.

The evidence in the present case shows that the business of the defendants, although highly beneficial to the commerce of the port, is, in fact and in its very nature, a monopoly. It is an exclusive appropriation to the few of rights belonging equally to the many.

The slip is part of the common highway. It is a continuation either of the street or of the river. The piers are its incidents, and necessary to its enjoyment, as a place for loading and unloading. The case, therefore, comes within the authorities cited, in both respects—as a land highway, and as a water highway. It is a permanent exclusive appropriation by the defendants of the south half of the pier and the north half of the slip. No vessel can enter to load or discharge, or for any other purpose, or repairs, and then only on paying such toll as the defendants may [illegible] to property, [illegible] pediment which [illegible] pier, obstructs the [illegible] to and from the [illegible] A monopoly is thus in effect established for one use and for one person.

The assumption of a franchise or exclusive privilege, or, in other words, the setting up of a monopoly, unless sanctioned by the Legislature, is in law a nuisance. The recent case of the Ninth-avenue Railroad, (3 Abbott, 962,) decided at General Term, is a direct authority to that effect. Now, the defendants do not pretend to hold a legislative grant. They do not possess even an ordinance of the Common Council. Their only warrant, as the proof shows, is the permit, and that not in writing, of a dock-master—an officer "legally authorized," the answer alleges, "to assign slips and other vessels to berths and locations," but certainly not intrusted with the sovereign power of granting monopolies. The object of the dock master's office, however much perverted, is to secure, not to sell or infringe the equal rights of all; to prevent encroachments, and not to create or defend them. His duty it is to see, from time to time, that equal justice is done between contending applicants, and not to relieve himself from recurring labor by assigning the whole, or the greater part of a slip at once and forever, to a particular favorite. It is obvious, besides, that a floating dock, immovable except in a perpendicular sense, could never have been intended to be embraced in the terms "ships or vessels." The whole scope of the ordinance shows that those words had reference to steamers and sailing craft, whether small or large, which had occasion to load and unload freight or passengers, and which were constantly coming and going. A floating dock, firmly moored to one place, is a stationary structure. It rises and falls with the tide, but has no horizontal motion. By a bold figure of speech, and in a figurative sense, it may, perhaps, be called a vessel, as the human structure itself, in the same manner, is also sometimes designated by that appellation. But the dock is no more a vessel, in the sense of the ordinance, than the man or the woman. And even if it could be so considered, no officer, as was held by Judge Mitchell, in the case of another of these docks, (13 How., 40,) has the power to allow even a ship to lie permanently in any place needed for the accommodation of vessels in active employment.

Floating docks are no doubt needed. They must be moored somewhere. The evidence shows that they can be placed elsewhere in the harbor without injuriously obstructing the ordinary operations of loading and unloading.

Other locations perhaps may, in some respects, be less convenient. That is a consideration, however, to be brought not to the courts, but to the Legislature, the body which alone represents, and which, to attain a greater good, can alone, within certain limits, regulate and even waive the common rights. All that a judge can do is to pronounce upon the claims of the defendants under the law as it stands—those claims permanently to monopolize a large portion of a number of the public slips, forming part of a great maritime highway, and, indirectly, without the sanction and without the safeguards of law, to levy such tolls for a special use as the Dock Company may see fit to exact, cannot be sustained. And above all, the plea of a dockmaster's fiat as the warrant for their commencement and continuance, can never be accepted. The despotism, as it is, is sufficiently obnoxious extended to the proposed limits it would be intolerable. Even the Common Council have no such power. By the act of April 16, 1830, they were authorized to pass ordinances designating, from time to time, particular wharves, piers and slips for the particular use "of particular classes or descriptions of ships or vessels." But no authority was given to favor one particular ship or vessel to the prejudice of every other of the same class. So that, even were we to regard a floating dock as a ship or vessel, the Common Council would have no power to give it an exclusive privilege as a permanent stationary fixture. But a dock, as we have seen, is not a ship or vessel, and the Common Council, as its ordinances show, have exercised no such power and made no such grant. Shall one of their subordinate officers, then, be permitted to assume a jurisdiction which his superiors do not claim? The late report in the Legislature of the State, on the subject of Harbor Masters, is not calculated to encourage advances in that direction. Nor is there anything in the history of monopolies in general to make it proper that Courts should particularly favor them. Their natural tendency is to generate corruption, which, in its turn, accelerates the growth of its parent. Even in royal hands the power was found too great for human virtue. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth, its exercise had become so ruinous, and had attained, as the law books tell us, such "an enormous height," that Parliament, at length, was compelled to interpose, and to declare that all monopolies, however sanctioned, except in certain special enumerated cases, unless granted by express statute, should be null and void. (21 James I., ch. 3.)

If a dockmaster may grant the exclusive use of one pier and slip, he may also of another, and another, until the whole, if properly applied for, shall have been parceled out to his liberal favorites, who will then be invested with the sole privilege of repairing all the ships and vessels in the harbor of New-York, with no restraint as to price except such as their own interest may dictate. Eleven such exclusive appropriations, by dockmasters' fiats, have already taken place, and some millions of property, it is suggested, are thus depending on a dockmaster's will. We may well ask, can this be law? Can it be that the common rights of all may be thus invaded, or the special rights (if rights they be) of the few thus secured? To answer the question, it would seem, needs only to state it.

I have delayed the decision of this case in the hope that the whole subject of floating docks in the harbor of New-York would be brought before the legislature, which had been in session for the last three months. To that body, as already stated, it properly belongs to allow and regulate such structures, to fix their location, to prescribe and define their duties, and to limit the tolls they may exact.

The officers of the company not having seen fit to make any application in that quarter, the court has no alternative but to apply the law as it stands, and to direct a decree to be entered for the removal of the defendants' dock within six months after due notice given, but without costs to either party.

Before Judge Culver.

THE ROGUS WEBSTER FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.

George W. Brown vs. Loring Pickering and wife and Charles N. Bean.—This case, the trial of which was commenced in December last and ended on the 4th of March before the Court, and reported in full in the TIMES at that time, was decided to-day in favor of the plaintiff. The action was brought to set aside a sale by plaintiff of house and lot located on the corner of Lafayette-avenue and St. Felix-street, Brooklyn, to defendent, Pickering, in the month of April, 1855, on the ground of fraud. The deed was made out in the name of the defendant, Bean, who subsequently transferred it to the wife of defendant, Pickering.

The property sold was valued at $7,200, subject to a mortgage of $3,550. Plaintiff received in payment for the property 71 shares of the stock of the Webster Fire Insurance Company, New-York, upon the representation of defendants that it was at par in the market; that all the capital was paid in, and the Company was in successful operation. The gist of what was proved upon the trial is thus graphically set forth in the Judge's minutes, which explains the whole transaction:

1. Representations proved substantially as charged.
2. Plaintiff was induced thereby to convey.
3. The representations were false and the Company a swindle from the beginning. The mortgage, the satisfaction of, and the checks were fraudulent.
4. Bean & Pickering knew the stock was worthless, (one was a stockholder; had some of stock and sold it; said it did not cost him anything.) The other was boon companion of Dr. Blaisdell—the leading spirit in the affair was a broker; said he knew all about the Company from the start. If so, he knew it was a swindle.

It seems that the stock was not tendered to defendants until this suit was commenced, and the case will be carried up to have that knot untied.

For plaintiff—Messrs. John P. Troy and Isaac Van Wagoner. For defendant—L. R. Marsh.

The Trust German Williamsburgh Building Fund and Accumulating Association vs. John Ruppel and wife and others.—For plaintiff with $90 allowance. G. Miller, for plaintiff; J. Lox for defendants.

Same vs. Joseph Gross and Mary his wife and others.—Decree $80 allowance. Same attorneys.

Townsend vs. Townsend.—Motion for security for costs denied without costs.

Same vs. John Ruppel and wife and Adam Schlegel and wife and others.—Tried by court. Judgment for plaintiff for foreclosure. The $130 costs in former suit to be allowed. Referred to Samuel L. Harris, Esq., to compute amount due, including $130—10 per cent. allowance. Same attorneys.

Same vs. Ignatius Holzer, Mary Gross and others.—Decree, $45 allowance. Same attorneys.

Same vs. Elizabeth Neiss, widow, &c., and others.—Decree allowance, $60.

Joseph P. Cropsey vs. The Fulton Fire Insurance Company.—New trial denied with costs. For plaintiffs—S. D. Lewis. For defendants—Jared Sparks and J. V. Loomis.

S. Theodore Duchey vs. R. F. Bipdenberg.—Judgment for plaintiff. $500, with interest from Nov. 11, 1856. Let plaintiff's attorney draw up written decision. Defendant to have 20 days to make a case Plaintiff's proceedings in the meantime to be stayed.

Wm. H. Howard vs. Robert Prince.—Motion for new trial denied.

Asahel Soper and others vs. Charles T. Crom.—Order of referee to Hon. John Greenwood.

James H. Watson and Gordon C. Adams vs. Catharine Quinman.—Order of referee to Samuel L. Harris, Esq.

Charles Burrall vs. Thos. Sharp and John J. Mahoney.—Judgment for plaintiff, $100, with interest from March 15, 1856, together with costs—$10 allowance.

LEGEND.—The mountain forests of Pastoria are inhabited, it is said, by Fixies, Sprites and Elves, who, like the Phantom Dancers of Germany, delight to entrap travelers into their realms and torment them with their mischievous antics. NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Connecticut State Election took place yesterday, and the returns already received indicate the success of the Union Ticket. The storm, however, diminished the vote considerably, besides interfering with the receipt of the returns. The result will probably be known to-day.

We learn from Washington that two additional Naval Boards of Inquiry have been ordered to be instituted at that place, although the names of the officers have not yet been divulged. The order of the cases has also been changed—those of furloughed and on-leave officers taking the precedence of the cases of dropped officers.

The telegraph informs us of two dreadful casualties by fire in this State. The house of Mr. GRIMSHAW, near Cape Vincent, was burnt on Saturday morning, and Mr. GRIMSHAW, his wife, and six children perished. On Sunday morning a dwelling in Oswego, occupied by a French family named PLEONTA, was burnt, and three children, one 17 years old, perished.

It is stated on the authority of letters from missionaries of the Methodist Episcopal Church that a furious war is raging in Liberia, in the vicinity of Cape Palmas, between the colonists and the natives. Thirty-seven American houses and much property are stated to have been destroyed, and twenty-eight lives had been lost. All missionary and business matters were at a stand.

A summary of the business done in the Legislature yesterday, will be found elsewhere. There was nothing of special interest.

Strenuous efforts are being made, it is said, to defeat the Anti ticket swindling law now before the Legislature.

The Tammany Society met last night and mustered strong. Our report of their proceedings states that nearly 300 members were present, and that the utmost harmony and enthusiasm prevailed. The general sentiment of the Society was in favor of the plan of providing for reforming the primary meetings, which was presented at the last meeting of the Sachems by Hon. JOHN KELLY;—but it was deemed advisable to leave the whole matter to the free and untrammeled action of the Sachems who meet to-day at noon.

The steamship Illinois left yesterday for Aspinwall, with about six hundred passengers. She anchored below on account of the storm, and probably went to sea this morning.

It is reported that the steamers of the Nicaraguan line have not only given up carrying Filibusters to WALKER, but have withdrawn from the California passenger trade also; the Tennessee will probably be put on the Galveston and New-Orleans route.

The April term of the United States Circuit Court was opened yesterday morning by Judge NELSON. A motion for an injunction involving the copyright of STRUVE'S Weltgeschichte was heard and denied.

Capt. RYNDERS, the U. S. Marshal, appointed four Deputy Marshals yesterday. He has eight appointments still to make, which he expects to make to-day. He intimates that he will probably oust all the former Deputies.

The Councilmen's Special Committee on the Relief of Broadway presented their report last evening, asking leave to sit again, but terminated their existence somewhat ingloriously—the Board accepting their report, but discharging them.

WILSON SMALL, Esq., was last night nominated by Mayor WOOD, and confirmed by the Aldermen, as Receiver of TAXES, in place of HARRY HOWARD—gone up higher.

No move was made in the Common Council last night towards confirming the street cleaning contracts.

The Board of Health held its first meeting of the present year yesterday. The subject under consideration was a proposition from the Philadelphia Board of Health to hold a Quarantine Convention in that city, on the 13th of next May. The Convention is to comprise delegates from the various Boards of Health in the maritime cities of the United States, to confer in relation to the establishment of a uniform system of Quarantine laws. The Board voted to send seven delegates to the Convention.

In the Supreme Court, yesterday, Mr. Justice ROOSEVELT decided that the New-York Balance Docks of this City are, in their present position, nuisances, and must be removed. The suit was brought by JOHN and J. V. HECKER vs. the New-York Balance Dock Company. The case, of course, will be appealed, and probably will be taken to the Court of Appeals.

The court of Oyer and Terminer opened yesterday, and adjourned till the first Monday in May, at 10 o'clock, A. M. Mrs. CUNNINGHAM BURDELL and JOHN J. ECKEL, it is expected, will then be arraigned for trial, for the murder of Dr. HARVEY BURDELL. The District Attorney asked the Court for an order for a panel of 500 jurors.

The Parish Will case drags slowly on. MOSES H. GRINNELL, Esq., and Dr. MARKOE were examined yesterday, and their testimony is to be continued to-day.

An old man named STEVENS was burned to death yesterday morning, in a building at the foot of Thirty-ninth-street, in which he lodged. It is supposed that while intoxicated he set fire to his bedding. The building was damaged to the extent of about $3,000.

The wind blew heavily from S. E. to S. throughout the day, yesterday, and it rained without intermission from early morning to about 9 o'clock P. M., when the wind changed to the N. W., and snow fell for an hour. By 11 o'clock there were no traces of it left. Snow also fell at various points to the westward of here.

The large ocean steamer, built by WESTERVELT & SONS for CHAS. MORGAN, is to be launched tomorrow morning at 8½ o'clock.

ALEXANDER H. WALLIS, Republican, was last evening nominated for Mayor of Jersey City by the American and Republican Union City Convention. A separate Republican Convention nominated DUDLEY S. GREGORY for the same office, but it is uncertain whether he will consent to be a candidate.

Virginia Frightened.

The designs of the "North American Homestead Company," and their benevolent intention of resuscitating the old and exhausted lands of Virginia, appear to have created a tremendous consternation among the sea-board inhabitants of the Old Dominion. The landing of CORTEZ in Mexico, or of the valiant ADELANTADO in Florida, did not cause half the terror among the simple aborigines of those parts that the anticipated descent of ELI THAYER upon Eastern Virginia has done among the chivalry from Richmond to Accomac. The bare prospect of an irruption of industrious Yankees, with an army of shoemakers, blacksmiths, carpenters, wheelwrights, and school masters at their back, coming into the quiet old counties on the James River, and building up populous towns and busy villages, quadrupling the value of land and increasing the population of the State, has given some of our Virginia cotemporaries a tertian ague. Mr. PRYOR'S new paper, The South, has been thrown into horrible spasms of fear by merely reading the programme of the Homestead Company, whose stockholders he mildly denominates "panpers and prostitutes."

The South counsels immediate and sturdy resistance to ELI and his hard-fisted myrmidons, who propose to overturn the existing order of society in Virginia by improving its waste lands and making its deserts to blossom like the rose. Like that noble English poet who sang:

> "Let laws and learning, arts and commerce die,
> But let us keep our old nobility—"

The South means to sacrifice everything to its slave pens and the old unprofitable trade in niggers. Like Rolla they want no change, and least of all such change as ELI THAYER and the North American Homestead Company can bring them. Our Virginia cotemporary is savagely facetious at the idea of the Yankee invaders coming to the eastern shore with the base design of getting a good dividend for their investment. Like Pistol, he evidently entertains the opinion that base is the land or investment that pays in the shape of a dividend.

Among our extracts in another column upon this subject, will be found an exceedingly sensible article from the New-Orleans Commercial Bulletin, which we respectfully commend to the attention of The South. That able journal—which can hardly be suspected of Abolition or even of Anti-Slavery tendencies—takes the liberty of saying that Virginia owes her steady material decline and degradation to the fact that all the energy, ability, enterprise, and industry of her sons are wasted upon Federal politics, instead of being devoted to the development of their own resources and the improvement of their farms, the building up of their manufactures and the enlargement of their commerce. If Virginians will quit office-hunting, and grow more ambitious of prosperity and development than of place and plunder, their lands will no longer be desolate and dependent upon Yankee "panpers" for the labor that is to make them valuable.

But, in default of all more rational resources, the hope of The South is in Governor WISE, who will permit "no nice technicality of legal forms" to stand in the way of the expulsion of all Yankee-land speculators from the worn-out soil of the Old Dominion. Upon this point also the New-Orleans Bulletin gives The South some good advice. It does not see any more clearly than we do how the Chivalry of the Order of the South is going to help itself. The owners of land in Virginia will be likely to sell it to the highest bidders, and no questions asked; but, even though they should object, the mortgagees might not, and those who buy the land will be likely to do as they please with their own; and even Governor WISE could not prevent them from deep plowing, which is the most treasonable act that will probably be attempted. But the Virginians may, if they are resolved upon it, by the most simple process in the world, prevent these contemplated Yankee invasions. All they have to do is to put their land at so high a price that it cannot be profitably purchased, and ELI THAYER and the North American Homestead Company will let them vigorously alone, they may rest assured.

Relieving Broadway.

We publish in another part of this morning's paper the report of the Special Committee of the Board of Councilmen, upon relieving Broadway. It is a careful, sensible and interesting document. The Committee recognize fully the importance of affording some relief for this blockaded thoroughfare, while they are at the same time too judicious and practical in their views to give any countenance to the various chimerical projects which have from time to time been proposed for the accomplishment of that end. They have evidently given a good deal of attention to the details of the whole subject, and their recommendations are entitled to respectful consideration.

The first point to which their attention is directed, is that of increasing the capacity of Broadway. The average width of the sidewalks in Broadway is nineteen feet and a half, and that of the roadway forty feet; but this is so reduced by hydrants, posts, projecting stoops, and other permanent incumbrances, as to leave an available average sidewalk of but ten feet wide, and in some places of little over nine. They recommend, therefore, the removal of the hydrants, posts, &c., and a reduction of the projecting stoops to a uniform width of five feet, which will give a space for foot passengers of thirteen feet six inches, and a roadway of forty-three feet—a gain of over three feet for the former, and over two for the latter. They advise, also, that eight feet be taken from the walk on the west side of the Park, so that hacks may be accommodated without trespassing so seriously upon the street itself. The Committee state a variety of facts, and refer to various City ordinances, to show that all these changes may be made without any violation of law, or any considerable expense, either to the City or to individual owners. The hydrants can be located in the side streets. The gas lights can be suspended from brackets on posts set within the line of the stoops and platforms, and all the awning posts and trees can easily and profitably be removed from Broadway.

The next topic discussed is the manner in which temporary obstructions occur in Broadway. All incumbrances arising from the piling of bricks, mixing of mortar, &c., for buildings, ought to be confined within the limits of the building lot. The sewerage of the street should be completed as speedily as possible:—the Croton water and gas connections can easily be made;—the privilege now accorded to processions of occupying the whole street should be greatly curtailed;—the number of stages running the whole length of Broadway should be reduced;—and Whitehall-street, State-street and Battery-place should be widened. These are the leading suggestions of the Committee in regard to these matters. The Report embodies the draft of two ordinances by which its recommendations are to be carried into effect. In regard to the diversion of travel from Broadway, the Committee promise a further report hereafter.

Those who are at all interested in this subject, which is one of marked importance to the whole City, will find various other statements and suggestions in the Report which are well worthy of consideration.

It will be observed by our report of the proceedings of the Councilmen, last evening, that upon the reading of this Report, the Committee was discharged from the further consideration of the subject. What was the particular motive for this summary action, we are left to conjecture. If the Committee had recommended some gigantic scheme, involving the expenditure of an enormous sum of money, its report would probably have been treated with more respect.

Counterfeiting Bank Notes.

There was a time when everybody had faith in bank notes—no matter where they came from, or what was their individual appearance. So long as the strips of pictorial paper, folded away in the people's wallet, performed all the functions of money, and so long as a belief existed in the people's mind that the said pictorial paper could be easily exchanged for gold and silver,—on an emergency—bank notes were regarded as something very desirable to have and to hold. Be they adorned by the engraver with Vulcans or Venuses, depicting allegorical stories of angels or devils; be they clean and wholesome in their person, or ragged, dirty and odoriferous,—the public smiled on them benignantly, cherished an unwavering faith in their virtue, and considered them competent to command all the necessities and luxuries of life. A bank note was a bank note until the counterfeiter struck down this faith of the people; who, being frequently cheated by the imitation, began gradually to suspect the genuine; and, at last, became so confused and confounded between the two, that, to reject everything in the semblance of a bank note which is not certified to be genuine is now a very common habit.

The bank-note circulation of the United States, at the present time, is estimated to represent about $190,000,000. In this estimate are included only genuine bank-notes, which daily pass from hand to hand in the exchanges of trade. In addition to these, there is in circulation a vast number of counterfeit bank-notes, whose representative value cannot be computed, and which perform all the functions of money; the holders of each being, for various reasons, unable to distinguish the one from the other.

The increasing circulation of these counterfeit notes is a just cause of alarm, and how to prevent it, or to secure ourselves from its effects, is a subject for serious consideration. The attempt to insure this protection, by some peculiar quality or style of paper, has often been made, and has always failed of success. Paper manufactured with "water marks," which express the denomination of the note to be printed on it, and the name of the bank issuing the note, has been tried. But the magical "water-marks" were immediately counterfeited, not only in some other paper mill, but by means of embossing plates applied by the counterfeiter to his paper, both before and after the paper was printed. A threaded paper has also been tried; large threads laid in the paper, while in process of manufacture, running lengthwise of the note, and corresponding in number to its denomination. But the threads soon wore through the paper, they could be easily drawn out, and their appearance on the note was imitated in the same manner as the water-marks were.

All protective or detective plans of this kind in bank-note paper are useless, for two reasons:—they are too simple to evade the imitative skill of an ordinary rogue, and they are too minute in their character to attract the attention of the people, for whose benefit they are intended. Any protective quality in bank-note paper, to be effectual, must have features so prominent as to arrest immediately the eye of a casual observer. A thread, or a water-mark, or anything of that kind in a bank-note, must be hunted out—a long and perplexing operation at any time, but especially when the note is as foul and ragged as are most of our bank-notes now in circulation.

The art of Photography has recently multiplied the dangers by which our bank-note currency is surrounded. The counterfeiter need no longer be an engraver or a lithographer. He now succeeds best as a photographic artist; and, as such, defies the skill which has heretofore been employed to prevent the success of his imitations. Photography now reproduces any engraving so perfectly, in outline, in detail, in tone and effect, that it is often impossible to say which is the original and which the duplicated impression. By this art our bank-notes are liable to be duplicated to an illimitable extent; and, indeed, they are now duplicated so skillfully and numerously, that bank officers in this City have been confounded, when called upon to decide between the genuine note they have signed and its photographic imitation!

But as long as photography can copy only one color, and that black, there is an easy method of preventing its use in counterfeiting our bank notes; which is to print the notes in more colors than one. This method has already been introduced by printing a bright and delicate tint over the note, from a steel plate, covered with fine eccentric lines, skillfully engraved. So long as this tint preserves its identity, the bank note is secured from an imitation by photography. But when the note has, from use, become soiled and ragged, its fine distinctive features of line and color are lost, and an imitation is easily produced; for the rogue has only to take a poor counterfeit of the note, cover it with a dirty tint printed in lithography, give it the appearance of hard usage, and the majority of people will suppose it to be only a genuine note which has been a long time in circulation, and as such they will receive it.

In considering these facts, it becomes evident that the security against counterfeit bank notes does not lie in any particular quality or style of paper. It already lies in the present system of engraving and printing our notes; but it cannot be perfected except by the aid of a law requiring of our banks two things: first, that all bank notes shall be printed in more than one color, and these colors shall have such a chemical affinity, that one cannot be removed from the paper, without removing the other; and, second, that every bank shall renew its small notes once in every six months. The first requirement will protect our notes from photography, now the only dangerous system of counterfeiting; and the second will give the people clean money, in place of those ragged, dirty and infectious notes with which parsimonious banks offend the community, and which, from their degraded appearance, are naturally suspected to be counterfeits by most of us.

The City Finances.

The Comptroller's Annual Report was submitted to the Common Council last night. The larger part of it is devoted to details of no special interest to the public at large. The expenditures of the City Government proper for the year 1856, which are the main matters of general concern, will be found embodied in a table, which we publish in another part of this morning's paper. The aggregate is $4,589,925. The payments from the Treasury for all purposes, except for the Sinking Fund, amounted to $17,228,724, which was an increase over the preceding year of $8,123,012:—this increase being principally made up of the following items:

Almshouse	$311,550 00
Blasting Diamond Reef	15,000 00
Building Court-House Third District	27,000 00
Interest on Revenue Bonds	63,524 68
Interest on Assessment Bonds	35,133 29
Lamps and Gas	66,265 97
Police	15,685 11
Paving Bowery and Chatham-street	33,305 97
Salaries	62,453 99
Surgical Department of Police	4,995 41
Common Schools for State	52,289 87
State Mill Tax	263,147 89
Judgments on Contracts on Central Park, &c	75,915 98
Commissioners of Records	100,000 00
Central Park, on account of debt	1,242,837 29
New Reservoir	10,322 64
Total	$2,383,490 69

A very large portion of the increase in the operations of the Treasury arises from the receipts and expenditures on account of awards for land taken for the Central Park, and for opening and extending the Bowery and First-avenue. The total amount awarded for damages to parties whose lots were taken for the Central Park, is $5,111,426:—there has been received from parties assessed for benefit the sum of $640,000. The Comptroller states at considerable length the embarrassments that have arisen from the inability to pay these awards in cash. The total sum awarded for lands taken for the new Croton Reservoir, is $708,000. The construction of the Reservoir will cost $1,200,000.

The Comptroller devotes a large portion of the report to the exposure of the serious damages to which the City has been subjected in several cases of arbitration under resolutions of the Common Council:—but as the details of these same cases have been given, and the character and extent of this enormous abuse have been fully exposed in the TIMES within a few weeks past, it is not necessary to repeat them here. They ought immediately to receive serious attention from the proper quarter.

The Corporation Piers used for commercial purposes, are valued at $1,026,000, on which the total rent received is $186,631. The piers used for ferry purposes are valued at $1,617,000, on which the rent received is $99,805.

The Comptroller closes his report by sundry suggestions concerning the use of the Battery grounds, which, when enlarged, will cover an area of 24 acres:—and a variety of cogent reasons are given why a considerable portion of them should be devoted to the demands and necessities of commerce. Two capacious slips for the accommodation of ferries are needed at the southeast corner and two also at the northwest corner:—and the Comptroller strongly intimates that it may be advisable to make some new disposition of the whole of this ground, which has now become utterly useless, so far as the purposes for which it was originally laid out, are concerned.

South American Explorations.

Geographical explorations have become so common that even the sluggish States of South America have been awakened to the importance of a better understanding of their own Continent. We notice that, in the Chilian Congress, a sum of money has been granted to explore the sources of the Rio Negro—a branch of the Amazon—under the supposition that a river communication may exist between the Atlantic and Pacific. The idea, very likely, will be proved, by actual exploration, to have been chimerical. It has no other support than in the vaguest tradition. But the enterprise should not, on this account, be discouraged, for it will be at least a step towards opening the interior of Chili to population and cultivation, and, as such, is of sufficient importance to warrant the outlay that the Government is disposed to make for the thorough execution of the work. The National Convention at Lima has, also, voted a sum of $100,000 for the survey of rivers in order to facilitate communication between the interior Provinces of Pern and the Atlantic.

The importance of these movements to the States interested can scarcely be overrated. According to the present course of trade, merchandise from the United States is taken round Cape Horn to some Peruvian port on the Pacific. It is thence transported, on the backs of mules, across the Cordillera and the Andes to the various departments of the interior and to Bolivia, at an immense cost and sacrifice of time. While all this unnecessary labor is expended, the Amazonian tributaries, which penetrate the continent to the base of the Andes, and offer so many direct and natural highways for trade, are utterly ignored. Through the selfish policy of Brazil the great Valley of the Amazon continues a wilderness, and must remain so as long as the present laws exist respecting foreign commerce and foreign immigration. But as a question of national law it is certainly the right of those States, whose only channel to the ocean lies through the Amazon, to demand and insist upon permission to navigate that stream under their own flags.

In connection with the explorations to which we have alluded, we should not omit to make honorable mention of the Iowa Expedition, organized to trace the Napo from its source in Ecuador to its junction with the Amazon. According to latest advices, the Expedition had started from Quito. These different enterprises must all be attended with results of more or less importance. They will contribute largely to geographical science, and will advance the interests of commerce and civilization.

The Opera of the Street.

From the Journal of Commerce.

The organ-grinders being occupied in cleaning the streets, have suspended their accustomed avocation, much to the relief of the afflicted hearers. The sound of their shovels and hoes is far more agreeable.

We are very glad that persons have been found to clean the streets—and we regard it as decidedly to the credit of the organ-grinders that they should have contributed to so important and desirable an object. It shows conclusively that they are not organ-grinders from any unwillingness to work—and that is more than can be said of the members of a good many other professions which are considered ornamental rather than useful.

But we are inclined to go somewhat further indefence of this aspersed "profession." It is all very well for the rich who have the Opera, and THALBERG and Grace Church to supply them with music, to disparage and contemn these street musicians; but they have their place in the amusements and entertainments of the City; and, if it rank not quite so high, we are not sure that it is not quite as important, as that of the upper circles of music. There are tens and scores of thousands of children and poor women who are quite as much delighted with them and to whom their mechanical music brings quite as much relief from gnawing care and heavy pain, as the Opera gives to its more fortunate devotees. The hand-organ is the Opera of the street,—and its audiences are infinitely larger, and more thoroughly pleased, though less critical, than those who crowd the Academy of Music. We are quite sure that the organ soothes more pain, relieves more care, brings more relaxation and delight, and so serves what the great Poet tells us is the true end of music more fully, than the Opera,—for it goes to the class which needs such relief the most, and which can find it nowhere else.

We object, therefore, to the current wholesale censure of the organ-grinder. We regard him as a useful member of society. We like his music ourselves, and feel relieved whenever we hear him,—as we generally do,—under our office window at midnight. And we are very confident that nine-tenths of the community, if the choice were required, would vote for the suppression of the Opera rather than that of the Organ-grinders of the City.

CANNIBALISM—ABROAD AND AT HOME.—It is natural for man to leave, occasionally, his engrossing occupations, and turn his attention particularly to his own kindred. Our neighbor the Herald is not an exception to this rule. On Sunday it turned its attention to the heathen of the "Marquesas Islands in the Pacific." The Herald has heard from "our correspondent" that the savage men of the Marquesas are Cannibals, who eat their own wives and children; and that these Cannibals still follow the instincts of their depraved nature, notwithstanding "there is a large body of Christian Missionaries on the islands, many of them from this country." The immaculate and pious Herald receives this information with joy, and straightway delivers a flippant sermon, to its Sunday readers, upon Christian Missions; wherein it ridicules these benevolent enterprises of the American churches in a spirit of profanity becoming its reputation. To slander Christian Missionaries in foreign lands is as naturally the duty of the Herald, as it is to slander good men at home. In either case the effect is the same. The subjects of the slander are unharmed; but another laugh at morality and religion is raised by that reckless and abandoned crew which haunts the outskirts of our society, and receives the Gospel only as expounded by "JAMES GORDON BENNETT, Editor and Proprietor."

We don't pretend to reason upon Christian missions with the Herald. That would be useless; for it is necessary, in any discussion of moral questions, that the person to be convinced of error should possess some moral susceptibility. Nor do we propose to accept the statement of the Herald in regard to the Marquesas islands as the truth. It may be the truth. But, from what we already know of the "historian" of that print, it is safe to conclude that it is not the truth. This, however, is nothing to our present purpose. We only wish to submit that the fact that cannibals are still found in the Marquesas, or in any other land where the Gospel is preached by Christian missionaries, is not half so strange an anomaly as is the fact that there still exists, in the civilized City of New-York, a cannibal of a different sort, one that feeds upon the character and reputation of our citizens, that is destroying morality and virtue, and is developing the most depraved appetites of human nature, wherever its influence is felt. The Herald should not be concerned about the cannibals of the Marquesas; the missionaries will take care of them. It should rather be concerned about cannibalism at home, and hasten its own conversion to civilization; for a cannibal that feeds upon the souls of men is twice as dangerous as one that feeds only upon their bodies.

CENTRAL PARK POLICE.—The tax-levy which, over a month ago, was authorized by the State Legislature, includes an appropriation of $29,000 for the payment of arrearages to the Central-Park Police, Engineers, &c. Although it is notorious that the families of many of the members of this branch of the Police Department have suffered severely from want during the past ten months, the money which should have been handed over to them on the presentation of the Captain's pay-roll, is still withheld. This is against law, justice and humanity. No City official has the right to assume the responsibility of such conduct. Will the Comptroller be good enough to see that a remedy is forthwith applied?

STREET CLEANING.—No action whatever was taken last evening by the Common Council, in relation to the contracts recently signed by the Mayor, Comptroller, and Commissioner of Streets and Lamps, for cleaning the streets of the City. Whether the storm, SHERWOOD'S, or a concerted plan to evade the subject altogether, had most to do with this neglect, does not thus far appear, but will doubtless transpire in the course of [illegible] wait and see if [illegible] meeting; and the [illegible] continue, as they have [illegible] probation of the community, by a faithful performance of their duty.

CORRECTION.—We are satisfied [illegible] dence of the most conclusive [illegible] the statements contained in a [illegible] vertently published in the TIMES of [illegible] last, grossly compromising the [illegible] now residing in a German city, [illegible] of the family of a well-known [illegible] chant, are utterly and [illegible] der these circumstances we deeply [illegible] publication.

The Meeting of the Tammany Society—Harmony Preserved.

The meeting of the Tammany Society held last evening was very large, there being nearly 300, out of the whole 400, members present.

The March meeting of the Society, it will be remembered, was the one at which the action of the Sachems, in excluding both the Democratic political Committees from Tammany Hall, was denounced. As this meeting was alleged to have been held without proper authority, its action has been treated as invalid and void by the Sachems. The first point, therefore, to be decided, was, whether it was or was not a regular and proper meeting. This point was substantially raised by

Ex Grand-Sachem BOYD, whose sympathies are with the Small (Wood) Committee, and who moved to dispense with the reading of the minutes of the last two meetings (those of February and March) of the Society.

Sachem WATKEBURY, who belongs to the Savage side, moved to lay this motion on the table,—his object being to avoid the issue which the motion involved.

This motion was carried unanimously.

The Report of the Sachems—a lengthy document, giving a full history of their action—was then read, accepted and ordered on file.

Sachem CONNOLLY (Savage) then offered a resolution, declaring the desire of the Tammany Society to promote, in every possible way, the harmony of the Democratic Party of the City, and recommending to the favorable consideration of the Sachems (who meet to-day at 12 M.) the plan submitted by Hon. JOHN KELLY, at the meeting of the Sachems held on Saturday last. This plan proposes that the five members of the Savage Committee, and the five members of the Small Committee, in each Ward shall each select two delegates,—and that the Sachems shall appoint one,—making five in all from each Ward:—that these delegates thus selected shall meet in Convention, and devise a plan for holding the primary meetings of the party:—and that thereupon a new Democratic Committee shall be elected at primary meetings conducted in accordance with that plan.

Mr. WATKEBURY offered an additional resolution pledging the Society to sustain the Sachems if they would adopt the plan thus recommended to their favorable consideration.

Hon. JOHN KELLY hereupon rose and made a long speech, saying that every man pretending to be a Democrat must be in favor of some effectual reform in the mode of conducting the primary meetings, and declaring his desire that all personal feeling should be sacrificed to the good of the party. He appealed to both the gentlemen who had offered resolutions to withdraw them, and thus leave the Sachems free to act untrammeled upon the whole subject.

Both Sachems CONNOLLY and WATKEBURY at once acquiesced,—and withdrew their resolution, whereupon the meeting adjourned.

Personal.

The valedictory of Mr. JOHN APPLETON appears in Sunday's Union. Mr. APPLETON says:—"We had intended to increase somewhat the size of the Union, to clothe it in a new dress, and to enlarge the sphere of its correspondence and its contributions. The idea, however, which we have seen mentioned, of making it compete with the double sheets of the London Times, never occurred to us. There is no place in England where the Times could sustain itself except London, and there is no place in America where a similar journal could possibly succeed except New York. But in Washington there ought to be, as we thought, a political journal of the first class.

The oldest person present at the recent festival of the "Sons of Connecticut," at the Revere House, in Boston, was JOSEPH T. BUCKINGHAM, formerly of the New-England Galaxy, and the Boston Courier. This veteran editor is seventy-eight years old. Mr. BUCKINGHAM has resided in or near Boston since February, 1800; the first day he arrived, he heard FISHER AMES pronounce a eulogy on GEORGE WASHINGTON, who died a few weeks before.

Mr. NATHANIEL WILLIS, who has been in the editorial harness for the long period of fifty four years, has recently sold his paper, the Youth's Companion, and is now an associate editor, instead of sole conductor of that journal. Mr. WILLIS has started three newspapers, which are continued to this day, viz.: The Eastern Argus, at Portland; the Recorder, and the Youth's Companion, published in Boston.

RICHARD BOYLSTON of Amherst, N. H., is an occasional visitor to Boston. He was a graduate of the Columbian Centinel office under Major BEN RUSSELL, and in 1809 purchased the Farmer's Cabinet, a weekly paper, published at Amherst, N. H., with which he has ever since been connected.

The Springfield Republican of Saturday announces the retirement of SAMUEL BOWLES from that paper, to enter upon his new duties in Boston. Mr. BOWLES will retain his proprietary interest in the Republican. He is succeeded in the chief editorship by Mr. J. G. HOLLAND.

Mr. YERGER, in announcing through the New-Orleans papers, his acceptance of the Presidency of the Southern Pacific Railroad, declares that he would not have done so had not the road been placed under Southern control and direction.

The Springfield Republican says, Hon. RUFUS CHOATE was asked the other day what he thought of Judge TANEY'S opinion in the Dred Scott case. He replied, "My dear Sir, I pay $7 50 per volume for the reports of the United States Supreme Court, and no power on earth can compel me to read them in the small type of the newspapers."

The Catholic Telegraph announces that the Right Rev. JAMES FREDERICK WOOD is appointed coadjutor Bishop of Philadelphia, with the right of succession.

Immense Emigration to Kansas.

From the St. Louis Republican, March 23.

The trains Saturday, Sunday, and yesterday, brought in large numbers of travelers for Kansas. The Chicago, Alton, and St. Louis trains brought down a company of eighty, men, women, and children. The latter half of the company came in yesterday, and this morning, with others, take the train to Jefferson City. The Ohio and Mississippi train last night brought one hundred and fifty passengers, many of them on their way to Kansas. Every train reaching the city swells the stream flowing towards the Territory. If the present flood continues through the spring, there is no extravagance in the estimate of those who anticipate the arrival in Kansas, this season, of seventy thousand, as a portion of the permanent population of the Territory.

...Legislature.

...Albany, Monday, April 6, 1857.

The House still busies itself with the third reading of bills, and the Senate discusses the incompetency of the judiciary—the wrongs and the rights of Trinity Church. Out of them, what shall make up the budget of a daily letter? Nothing on the face and there but everything if one could get behind the scenes and hold up a mirror wherein should be truthfully reflected the machinery—the bands and cogs, wheels and pulleys, that drive forward this business of legislation. It takes time and study to construct such a mirror that I have not, and study for which I have little inclination. And yet sometimes the spirit compels me strongly to fathom these depths, from which swell up the waters that turn all this machinery of Government. But then I run across such counter-currents—should have so often to turn aside into side-channels and still eddies, to avoid a collision with those who, under friendly flags, sail through the main waters, that with perhaps more prudence than modesty, I shrink from the risk of a collision, and let known pirates sail on, without ever firing a signal gun, for fear that friends may be among the crew.

The New-York Charter was to be the special order in the Senate, at 11½ o'clock this morning. When it came up, it was discovered that the amendments proposed by the Senate Committee had not been correctly printed. It was finally sent to the Committee of eight—or the Grinding Committee—to be reported complete.

The death of Mr. Babcock, member of Assembly from the Second Assembly District of the County of Oneida, was announced in the House, last evening, by his colleague, Richard U. Sherman. In brief but fitting terms, Mr. Sherman paid tribute to the fair name of his late associate. He submitted a series of resolutions expressive of condolence with the family of the deceased, and ordering the customary token of respect—the badge of crape, that symbolizes the gloom of the grave. Messrs. Ingraham, Paul, Foote, Talcott, Hogeboom, Lewis and George, spoke warmly and with eloquence of their associations with Mr. Babcock, and the House adjourned its session.

In connection with the vote in the House, on the New-York Charter bill, I think it but justice to make a statement. It should have been made at the time, but perhaps it is not now out of season. It will be recollected that five Republican members voted against the bill on its final passage. Without indorsing the statement that the passage of the bill was decided upon in caucus of the Republican members of the Legislature, I am at liberty to say that neither Messrs. Hyde, Cameron, Purdy or Wooster were parties to any arrangement involving a moral obligation to vote affirmatively on the bill.

The death of Judge Watson, announced in the papers yesterday, relieves the Legislature from the performance of a duty that must be unpleasant, and seldom profitable to the public—while it devolves upon Governor King the responsibility of pointing out a proper person to execute the duties of the office of Judge, vacated by Mr. W. Who will be appointed, is as yet matter of conjecture—if that expression may be tolerated. Hon. Ambrose L. Jordan was the last nominee of the Republican party of the district in which the vacancy occurs. I do not know that he is now a resident therein, or that he would accept the position, but I hear his name mentioned in connection with the appointment in such a manner as to induce the belief that probably the honor will be conferred on him, in case he is eligible.

The weather is again like Spring, and the air from the hills brings with it an odor of the earth, earthy. The springing grass and the bursting buds of the lawn and forest that border the capitol makes one anxious that this aggregation of the State wisdom shall speedily resolve itself back from whence it came. It seems like wasting one's life to linger here amid this incessant strife of interests, unmindful or unheeding the sweet music that swells through the valleys and over the hills of our homes. Mr. Speaker, I move that we do now adjourn. We are called to another sphere of duty. We are called to the enjoyment and the study of the great lesson which nature is teaching in the fields and gardens. We are called to administer the laws enacted for our existence. Wherefore, put us on our final passage, and declare us carried—home.

LEO.

NEW-YORK LEGISLATURE.

SENATE....Albany, Monday, April 6.

Petitions were presented against and in favor of repealing the law of 1814, relative to Trinity Church; against discrimination in Canal tolls.

REPORTS.

Mr. Upham, relative to the enlargement of the Cayuga and Seneca canal. Third reading.

Mr. Bradford, in relation to dividends to stockholders of Academies and the distribution of school moneys. Third reading.

Mr. Madden, to incorporate the People's Steam Ferry Company. Third reading—Special order for Wednesday at 1 P. M.

Also, to regulate the use of Slips and Wharves in New-York City. Third reading.

Also, to amend Chapter 62 of Laws of 1857. Third reading.

A communication was received from the Commissioners of the Land Office relative to the purchase of the Boys' Academy for a Governor's Mansion. Referred to Finance Committee.

The Senate concurred in the amendments of the Assembly to the bill relative to the Allegany River Slack Water Navigation Company.

The following bills were passed:

To authorize the Green Point and Newtown Road Company to collect toll on their bridge.

To amend the act to incorporate charitable, benevolent and religious societies.

To incorporate the Geneva Hygienic Institute Company.

To modify the exemption laws in the matter of labor performed in a family as a domestic.

Relative to the preservation of Deer.

To provide for the preservation of Trout in the inland waters of the State.

To change the name of the town of Linden, Cattaraugus County, to Elgin.

To amend the charter of the Chemung Railroad Company.

To incorporate the Fire Department of the Eastern District of Brooklyn City.

To amend Chapter 62 of the Laws of 1857.

The Senate in Committee of the Whole, Mr. Dareine in the Chair; considered the bill to amend the charter of Trinity Church, but no one being prepared to speak—Mr. Sickles, who had the floor, being ill—progress was reported, and it was made the special order for 4 P. M.

Mr. Upham had consent to introduce a bill to fix the number of the Canal Appraisers.

Mr. Upham, in introducing the bill, said that the State would be greatly benefited if the Canal Appraisers went out of office as the Canal Commissioners did, one in each year. He thought it was a damage to the State to have all these officers go out at once as they now do, and this bill was to remedy the defect in that respect. Bill referred to Canal Committee to report complete.

The Senate, in Committee of the Whole, considered the following bills:

Relative to Divorce. Progress.

To organize an Insurance Department, and to regulate the business of Insurance. Progress.

ASSEMBLY....Albany, Monday, April 6.

Mr. Lewis moved that the House shall proceed on Wednesday to the third reading of bills, under the joint rule.

Mr. Leavenworth moved Friday.

Messrs. Varnum and Jones reminded the House that the most important bills yet remained unacted upon, and no order should be fixed until those bills were considered.

The amendment was adopted, and so amended, the resolution passed.

Several private claim bills were ordered to a third reading.

Mr. Hoffman, on a question of privilege, called the attention of the House to an act, passed some days since, to legitimatize the children of Marcus C. Stanley. That act legalized a great wrong. It allowed a vile man, whose history he recited at length, to take the children from their mother. This was a violation of well settled law; but when the history of the man was known, it was a piece of monstrous legislation, which should at once be rectified. After a detailed statement of facts—which placed Stanley in the light of a great villain, guilty of almost every conceivable crime—Mr. H. brought in a bill to repeal the law referred to.

A long discussion ensued, when Mr. Woods moved to order the bill to a third reading.

Mr. Foot objected, and gave his reasons at length.

A further discussion followed, and much excitement ran through the debate, when

Mr. Wooster moved the previous question.

Mr. Foot withdrew his objection, stating that he concurred with the House in its opinion that the principle of the bill to be repealed was wrong; and that these children, and all similarly situated, should be left with the Courts.

The bill was then passed—Ayes 85.

Stringer & Townsend offer at Trade Sale to-day a very large and valuable collection of their stereotype plates, wood cuts, &c. Their announcement in our advertising columns is worthy of attention.

The next anniversary of the American and Foreign Bible Society is to be held in Boston on the 16th, 17th and 19th days of May next.

Laura Keene's Theatre.—The excellent little comedy called "Living the Past" was produced here last night with complete success. It has been played before in New-York, and it is unnecessary therefore to repeat the plot, which simply turns on the inconveniences, troubles, and humiliations which beset an estimable young couple in consequence of their living too fast. The dialogue without being brilliant is natural and vivacious. Rendered mainly by Mr. George Jordan and Miss Kate Reignolds, it is sufficient to interest and satisfy the audience. Both these artists played with marked ability; ably supported by Mr. Stoddart, and indifferently so by Mr. Lingham. The most difficult of all accomplishments has yet to be acquired by the last-named gentleman—stage ease. With excellent natural powers, he mars much that would be good by an embarrassed and awkward bearing. The afterpiece was the "Elves,"—the popularity of which does not seem to be on the decline.

Burton's Theatre.—Mr. Burton, who enjoys a merited reputation for his Shakespearean revivals, availed himself last night of the opportunity afforded by increased facilities to reproduce the "Winter's Tale," which, our readers will remember, was brought out triumphantly at the Chambers-street Theatre two years ago, and at the time received our warmest praise. The present occasion enables us to say that he has profited by his opportunity, and in scenic effects exceeds even the expectations of what he would do. Excellently cast, excellently placed upon the stage, every one should see this admirable version of one of Shakespeare's masterpieces.

Niblo's Garden.—A new grand ballet of an Asiatic character was produced here last night. The piece is from the head or the heels (it is difficult to determine which) of Mr. Bartholomin, and rejoices in the title of "L'Almee, or An Oriental Dream." We do not pretend to the mysteries of the Terpsichorean art, and are slow to interpret its language. We shall not, therefore, attempt a description of the plot. As a vehicle of much excellent scenery, much excellent dancing, and many excellent dresses, this ballet will, we fancy, compare favorably with any of its predecessors. We can praise everything but the music, which was badly played. It is a valuable addition to the already extensive repertoire of the Ravels, and so far as we are capable of judging, merits success.

Broadway Theatre.—Old New-Yorkers will remember the excitement created some years back by the production at the Bowery Theatre of the scenic drama of the "Last Days of Pompeii" The vast stage and equally vast resources of that establishment were exhausted in the pictorial and dramatic effects for which the piece gives scope and purpose. Hamblin, Ingersoll, Gates, Mrs. Flynn, Mrs. Herring and other well-remembered names were in the cast, and by their exertions secured for the "Last Days of Pompeii" a run of nearly a year's duration. The powerful impression it made endures to the present day, and old theatre goers delight to speak of Hamblin in his great character of Arbaces the Egyptian Priest. The rising generation are also familiar with his glory. He has been immortalized in theatrical prints—a penny plain or two pence colored.

To produce the "Last Days of Pompeii" was a happy idea, which could only be perfectly realized at the Broadway Theatre, an establishment devoted to such laborious and expensive tasks. The result was a success which will reward the management and gratify the public. Some excellent scenery has been prepared, not always new, but good, picturesque, and effective. The costumes are rich, and as appropriate as such doings can be. Good situations, tableaux, processions, delusions, &c., complete the catalogue of merits.

More than most spectacle pieces, this version of Bulwer's powerful novel admits of acting. The characters are well drawn, and the action is well sustained to the end. The hero, Arbaces, necessarily has the most important rôle. Mr. Loraine did not impress us favorably in it. The Egyptian priest did not bluster like a Cheap John at a fair, nor could the multitude have been led away by a person of such apoplectic tendencies. In spectacle pieces a little exaggeration of style seems inevitable—the actors appearing to struggle with the scenery, as with a deaf, but powerful rival. Mr. Loraine possesses more than an average of physical power, and he exerted it last night with an exultant relish, which was fierce and terrible, but not pleasant. We are surprised that an artist of intelligence can so far overlook the obvious bearings of the character—so entirely misconceive it. Mr. A. H. Davenport as Lydon was careful, and consequently good. We recognize in this gentleman an artist of rising ability. Mr. Groevenor as Glaucus, stiff, but alive to the requirements of the text. The remaining parts were filled ably—Mr. Seymour being, perhaps, the least efficient; a funny man who can't be funny is a sorry spectacle.

The character of Nydia, the blind flower girl, is the best drawn, and most human in the play. It was admirably sustained by Mrs. A. H. Davenport—delicately, touchingly, admirably sustained. Mme. Ponisi was, of course, the victim, (she always is, poor thing!) and played Ione with her usual ability.

The piece was entirely successful, and will be repeated every night this week.

Wallack's Theatre.—A glorious performance of the "Rivals" took place here last night, as an inauguration of a short season of sterling comedy. It is unnecessary to praise the performance. We will merely give the cast; every one who knows anything about theatricals will at once see its immense strength. Sir Anthony, Mr. Blake; Capt. Absolute, Mr. Lizeter; Sir Lucius, Mr. Brougham; Falkland, Mr. Dyott; Acres, Mr. Walcot; David, Mr. G. Holland; Lydia Languish, Miss Gannon; Mrs. Malaprop, Mrs. Vernon; Julia, Mrs. Hoey. All these artists were received with appropriate honors. The house was quite full,—a great compliment to the comedy and the manager, considering the night.

MARINE MATTERS.

Weather, Wind, &c.

A heavy blow, which set in from the South early yesterday morning, continued throughout the day and late into the night, accompanied by a copious fall of rain. Several accidents occurred among the shipping in the River and Bay, and it is feared that the gale may have been destructive to vessels on the coast. The steamtug Schultz had her pilot-house blown away. The ships Tarelinta, for New-Orleans, and S. Crowell, for Liverpool, while at anchor off Quarantine dragged the anchors and came in contact. The Tarelinta lost head, cutwater, rails, &c. The S. C. lost head rails and had bulwarks damaged.

The ship Southampton, lying at Pier No. 16, East River, broke loose from her moorings, but received little damage.

An unknown schooner drifted foul of the ship Aurora, lying in the North River, and bound to San Francisco. The schooner was considerably damaged, having her forward rigging and bulwarks carried away. The ship was not damaged.

The brig Crawford, of Machias, Small, from Nuevitas 15 days, with a cargo of molasses and melado, consigned to Zenaga del Valle & Co., when coming in the Hook about 8 yesterday morning, struck on Romer Shoal and started her stern post, causing her to leak badly. When off Buttermilk Channel she filled and rolled over. Her crew were taken off by steamtug Hector and brought to the City. Captain Francis, of the steamtug, offered his services to tow her, but was refused until the water was above her deck, and then, while getting a hawser to her, she rolled over and sunk. The Captain, one passenger and seven of the crew came up in the Hector. One man was saved by a barge from Governor's Island. She had no pilot.

Messrs. Johnson & Higgins, Insurance Brokers, have contracted to raise her, and operations will commence as soon as the weather will permit.

The frigate Niagara went into commission yesterday, and is now ready for sea, with everything on board except her 12 swivel guns. She carries four 32's, as signal guns, merely. Owing to the heavy storm that prevailed yesterday, her sails were not bent, and as it will be desirable to allow the swell on the bar, caused by the blow, to subside, she may not go to sea until to-morrow.

The steamers of the Stonington line now leave this City at 6 o'clock P. M., instead of 5, as heretofore.

The fine 3,000-ton steamer Queen of the Pacific, built for Charles Morgan & Sons, by J. A. Westervelt & Co., will be launched from their yard to-morrow (Wednesday) morning, at 8½ o'clock.

The United States Mail steamship Illinois left her dock yesterday at 2½ o'clock, P. M., for Aspinwall, but owing to the severe storm she anchored in the stream until the weather should clear up. The Illinois carries about six hundred passengers; so great has been the demand for passages, the tickets were all sold two days prior to the day of sailing, and many who delayed coming to the City until the last day or two, failed to secure their passage, and were obliged to wait over until the 20th of the month for the George Law. The Nicaraguan or Morgan line of steamers has been hauled off the route. It is reported that these steamers have sunk the Company upon an average from fifty to seventy-five thousand dollars a trip, making an aggregate loss of nearly a million of dollars since the unfortunate difficulties commenced in Nicaragua. The carrying of passengers to California, at low fares, has never been a paying business, and nothing but the support derived from the Government for carrying the mails has kept the lines in existence.

The usual amount of swindling was practised upon the passengers in the sale of tickets by the Illinois. Some cases of great hardship occurred. A one German woman, who purchased a ticket of one Stellwagen, in Buffalo, went on board the steamer just before she started, and learned that she had only a receipt for money paid, for which she was to call on Mr. P. E. Lorscher, in this City, for a ticket. She had scarcely time to go to his office before the steamer left, but she got no satisfaction, and will have to be detained here upon expense, or be compelled to find her way back to her friends as best she may. It is estimated that 300 persons are swindled every month in this City, in the purchase of tickets for California alone, the aggregate of their losses being some $6,000 per month.

The particulars of the loss of the bark H. H. Crapo, of Dartmouth, Mass., with twenty of the crew, off the Coast of Natal, Africa, on the 19th of January last, have already been given, with the narrative of Capt. Baker's sufferings for two days and nights floating upon a raft, previous to his being rescued.

The following is the copy of a letter addressed by Captain Baker to the captain, officers, and passengers of the England:

To the Captain, Officers, and Passengers of the Royal Mail Steamer England.

Gentlemen: I make use of this my first opportunity to return publicly my warmest thanks and acknowledgments for the many and sincere kindnesses I experienced at your hands while on board, the mail steamer England. I do not wish this to be understood as a formal expression of my feelings, but as a warm-hearted avowal of my appreciation of your noble and unremitting generosity, and record, with deep feelings, this, another instance of the many now bright in history, of the liberal-heartedness of the gentlemen of the English naval and marine service. I have, &c.,

ARCHILAUS BAKER, Jun.,
Captain of the late bark Henry H. Crapo.

There were more emigrants in Liverpool, up to the 20th of March, waiting passage to America, than were ever known in previous years, except in 1854. The price, which had averaged, up to that time, £3 to £3 10s., was raised to £4 and £4 10s. The fact that there was a scarcity of ships contributed to this rise in the price of passage.

The ship Ontario, Captain Wood, which arrived on Saturday, in 56 days from Liverpool, reports having lost two men on the passage. Feb. 23, Charles Wear, of Sussex, England, fell overboard and was lost; and, on the 16th of March, Edward Blisson, of Newport, N. S., fell on deck from aloft and was instantly killed. On board the bark John Hermann, from Newcastle, one man had a leg broken during a heavy gale of wind.

The United States steamship Supply sailed for the Brazil station on Saturday.

The "People's Line" was organized in 1835, but became independent of all other proprietorship only in 1842. During the fifteen years since that time, it is said no person has been injured on board these boats: the whole number of passengers which they have carried is estimated at 8,600,000, and the whole distance traveled 121,000 miles, mostly in the night. The sinking of the Newton is said to be the first accident of any importance that has happened to them, and this is not chargeable to official neglect. Ample provision is made to guard against fire and shipwreck. The compensation of the first pilots for the season is $1,200.

NEW-YORK CITY.

Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen held the first meeting of the April session last evening—Alderman Chaney, President, in the Chair.

A communication was received from the Mayor, submitting the following appointments for confirmation:

Wilson Small, to be Receiver of Taxes, in place of Henry H. Howard, elected Chief Engineer of the Fire Department.

John P. Hane, to be Deputy Receiver of Taxes, re-appointed.

Charles Fletcher, to be Inspector of Vessels, in place of Wm. L. Wiley, whose term has expired.

The first two were confirmed unanimously.

When that of Mr. Fletcher was proposed for confirmation, Alderman Wilson said he was not aware that that nomination would have been submitted; and that he had a petition of Mr. Peter Duffy, for the same office, presented to him, which had been signed by several members. He proposed its reference to a special committee.

Aldermen Steers, Fulmer, and others, who had signed the petition, opposed the reference, and intimated that they had acted under a misapprehension when they signed the petition. The nomination was finally laid on the table.

The following petition was read and granted unanimously:

New-York, April 6, 1857.

To the Honorable the Board of Aldermen—Gentlemen: Having resigned the office of "Receiver of Taxes," a position in which millions of dollars belonging to the people passed through my hands, I most respectfully petition your honorable body to appoint Alderman Tucker, of the Eighth Ward; Alderman Brown, of the Fifteenth Ward, and Alderman Fulmer, of the Sixteenth Ward, a Committee to examine my accounts with the City, and report the result to your honorable body, in order that if found correct my bondsmen may be discharged, and your petitioner, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

HENRY H. HOWARD.

A resolution was adopted directing the Corporation Counsel to inform the Board, at its next meeting, whether the Common Council have power to change the route of any stage line, without being liable to said line for damages, if any loss should be sustained.

Alderman Tucker offered a resolution authorizing the Governor of the Almshouse to take charge of the building being erected for the Third District Prison. The resolution was adopted.

The following preamble and resolution were adopted:

Whereas, In regulating Fiftieth-street, and widening Fourth-avenue, the Contractor has opened and exposed the old "Potter's Field" so that the remains of the dead are lying scattered over the ground; therefore,

Resolved, That the City Inspector cause measures to be taken to protect said burial ground, and also the neighborhood, from the evil effects of exposing decaying bodies to the open air.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the Street Commissioner to advertise for proposals for an iron railing around Tompkins-square.

After transacting it some additional business of a miscellaneous character, the Board adjourned to Thursday next.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met pursuant to adjournment on Monday evening,—the President, J. N. Phillips, Esq., in the Chair.

A petition was received and referred from John L. Brower and others in favor of a new avenue west of Broadway. Also from certain parties in favor of widening Frankfort-street, and its extension through Dover-street to East River. One from several property owners for the opening of what is to be named "Broadway-avenue," vid Wooster-street, was referred to the Committee on Streets. Several other petitions were presented of no general interest, for remission of taxes and in relation to individual matters.

POTTER'S FIELD.

The question of the erection of a temporary fence round Potter's Field being brought up on the presentation of the report of the Committee on Public Health by a vote of 41 to 8, the motion for a fence was carried, the expense not to exceed $200.

RELIEF OF BROADWAY.

On the presentation of the report of the Committee appointed to investigate the best means of relieving Broadway, Councilman Haswill asked leave to sit again.

The motion that the report be accepted, the Committee be discharged, and the further consideration of the matter be referred to the Committee on Streets, was carried without a dissentient voice.

A most unusual number of documents were acted upon by the Board, but the majority of them were of no general, but rather of individual interest. In one, the worthy Clerk to the Common Council had a special interest, the adoption of a resolution awarding him $1,000 for compiling the Manual for 1857.

After sitting more than three hours the Board adjourned.

Board of Supervisors.

The Board of Supervisors held the first meeting of the April session yesterday afternoon, Alderman Jackson in the Chair. A bill of Solomon Kipp, amounting to $1,150, for supplies furnished the Eldridge street Prison was referred to the Committee on Criminal Courts. A resolution was adopted directing the Comptroller to pay the amount due the public Court Clerks for services under a resolution of Dec. 13, 1855, and legalized by an act of the Legislature, March 10, 1857. The Board then adjourned to Thursday next.

Meeting of the Board of Health.

PROPOSITION FOR A QUARANTINE CONVENTION IN PHILADELPHIA.

A special meeting of the Board of Health was held, yesterday, at 1 P. M. in the Chamber of the Board of Councilmen. In the absence of the Mayor, President Ulshoeffer of the Aldermen was called to preside.

The following communication from the Philadelphia Board of Health was read:

The necessity and importance of an entire revision of the laws of Quarantine in this country has long been felt and acknowledged. Among the great commercial nations of Europe the paramount significance of the subject having arrested the attention of their leading men, a conference sanitaire was held at Paris, 1851 and 1852, where the whole question was ably discussed, and revisions suggested that were intended to form the basis of a uniform and improved system of external health laws. Since that period, the question of their entire abrogation, especially in England, has been learnedly and minutely investigated. No one who has made himself familiar with the existing system of existing segregation as set forth in the antiquated Quarantine laws which, with few exceptions, prevail throughout the United States, or has either directly or indirectly been made the unfortunate victim of their overbearing interdictions, but must admit that in many of their leading features, insufficiency, oppressiveness, and inconsistency far outweigh the benefits which a well ordered code of regulations would confer upon any community.

Nor is the exclusion of uniformity in the laws of our State over those of another, a less objectionable element. The enforcement of an indiscriminate quarantine in one State is calculated to operate with serious embarrassment upon another, recognising and acting under principles at variance with the former, and it is in vain we can expect any change in the policy of quarantine restrictions as at present adopted and enforced by the different sea-board cities, for the purpose of establishing a uniformity of laws, unless by a simultaneous movement of the several municipal corporations or Boards of Health, indorsed by legislative enactments.

In a sanitary as well as in a commercial aspect a change is alike desirable and politically demanded in the fundamental principles on which all our Quarantine laws are based. As regards the former, they have by no means kept pace with the rapid strides recently observed in the science of public hygiene; and with respect to the latter, they are singularly burdensome by clogging the wheels of a foreign trade whenever and wherever enforced. The commercial, the political and the social interests of the nation cry alond for a remoulding of these external health laws, while the voice of humanity may be heard pleading for the adoption of measures less oppressive to the dictates of benevolence. No State or sea-board city is entirely satisfied with its existing Quarantine laws, owing, in part, to the great diversity of sentiment and uniform prejudices among those especially who are the custodians of these laws. Frequent and loud also are the complaints urged by others equally interested, of their onerous and unequal character, mischievous where they should be harmless, and disadvantageous where they should be protective. Governed by these views, and desirous of beholding "a code of laws (uniform under all circumstances if possible) as would offer the fewest interruptions to an act of commerce, and at the same time guard that commerce so that it may not become a channel for the introduction of any agent which might affect the health of those dwelling in the sea ports." The Board of Health of Philadelphia in October, 1856, appointed a Committee to correspond with the Boards of Health of New-York, Boston, Baltimore and New-Orleans on the propriety of calling a convention of delegates from the various Boards of Health in the maritime cities of the United States, for the purpose of a conference in relation to the establishment of a revised and uniform system of Quarantine laws. Receiving the hearty concurrence of the bodies thus addressed to the proposed measure, and believing the time has fully arrived when the propriety of such a deliberative assembly will recieve universal approbation, we hereby assume the responsibility of calling a Quarantine Convention, and would invite delegates not only from the Boards of Health but also the Boards of Trade and from two regular medical societies, (as may be approved of by the Boards of Health in those cities where there shall exist more than two organizations,) in each of the seaboard cities of these United States. Should no Board of Trade or Board of Health be organized in any of the cities addressed, the authorities will make such appointments in view thereof as in their judgment may be proper under the circumstances. Said convention to assemble in the city of Philadelphia on Wednesday, on the 13th day of May next, ensuing. The number of delegates to be at the pleasure of the board or society making the appointment.

WM. BONSALL, President.

Joseph P. Cood, Secretary.

In connection with the above, a letter was received announcing that a Committee had been appointed from the Philadelphia Board of Health in conformity with the suggestions in their communication. The letter asked that a Committee be also named from the New-York Board of Health.

It was moved that a Committee of Seven be chosen from the Board to attend the proposed Philadelphia Convention. The motion was carried unanimously. After an announcement from the Chair that he would name the members of the Committee at an early day, there being no further business, the Board adjourned, subject to a call of the members.

Fire and Loss of Life.

A fire broke out, about 2 o'clock yesterday morning, in the third story of a house at the foot of Thirty-ninth-street, belonging to the Long estate. The flames were speedily extinguished, with a loss of about $3,000; but an old man, known as Pop Stevens, was burned to a crisp in the room in which the fire originated. He was seen to enter the house in an intoxicated condition shortly before the breaking out of the fire, and it is supposed that he accidentally set fire to his bed. The other occupants of the dwelling made their escape with some difficulty.

A fire occurred at 9¼ o'clock last night in the fancy store of Wm. Shaw, No. 42 Catharine-st. The damage done is estimated at $50.

The Burdell Tragedy—The Trial Postponed

COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER.—April 6.

Before Hon. Judge Roosevelt.

In the matter of the People vs. E. A. Cunningham (Burdell) and J. J. Eckel, charged with the murder of Dr. Harvey Burdell.—At the opening of the Court at ten o'clock, the District-Attorney, Mr. A. Oakey Hall, asked for a trial of the parties in this suit. The case had been set down for the third Monday of this month, but had since then been removed by an order of the Supreme Court to the Oyer and Terminer. No petit jurors had been summoned for this Court, as up to the time of the transfer of the case of Mrs. Cunningham and Eckel there was no business for a jury. As this case is a peculiar one, and has excited an extraordinary degree of interest, he would move its adjournment to the first Monday in May, and ask the Court for an order for a panel of five hundred jurors.

The Court asked if there was any other business.

The District-Attorney said there was not.

The Clerk—There is a Grand Jury summoned, but there is one also in the Sessions.

The District-Attorney—It will not be necessary to have a concurrent Grand Jury here.

Neither the accused parties nor their counsel were in Court.

The Judge granted the order asked for by the District-Attorney, and the Court was thereupon adjourned to Monday, May 4.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Hon. Recorder Smith.

The April term of this Court commenced yesterday, Recorder Smith presiding. The Grand Jury were not impanneled, a quorum not being in attendance, Dr. Alvah Blaisdell was summoned as a petit juror, but was not present. His name is intimately connected with the proceedings against Mr. Eckel and Mrs. Cunningham, and as he was subpœnaed as a witness on their trial, he could not discharge the duties of a juror in this Court.

There were no trials yesterday. Some prisoners who were not sentenced in the last term were disposed of for varying terms, the longest being two years and six months. The District Attorney announced that the third week of the term would be devoted to the trial of important cases. On the third Monday of the month, Barnes and Linford would be tried for arison. On the following Tuesday, Dening, who was tried in the February term, when the jury disagreed, would again be brought before the court. The case of Dr. Elijah Hunt, for abortion, was set down for the third Wednesday, together with that of Miller for murder. On the third Thursday of the month, Arneson, the keeper of the lager-bier saloon in the Bowery, who shot a boy through the door of the saloon, is to be tried, and on the following day, the negro D'Orsay will be tried for killing a girl in Worth-street.

NEW-JERSEY.

Nominations for Mayor of Jersey City.

The American and Republican Delegates to the Union City Convention held an adjourned meeting at the Republican Head-quarters last evening, and nominated Alexander H. Wallie (Rep.) for Mayor.

The Republican mass meeting to nominate a candidate for Mayor, met at Park Hall. Owing to the inclemency of the weather, the attendance was not large. Alderman J. S. Davenport presided, and S. A. Hopkins was Secretary. Dudley S. Gregory was nominated. A Committee waited upon him, and afterwards reported to the Convention that Mr. Gregory did not accept it, nor did he decline. He desired, if a candidate, to be a candidate of the people, and not of a party.

REBUILDING BROADWAY.

Report of the Special Committee on the Subject of Rebuilding Broadway.

At the meeting of the Board of Councilmen held on Monday, the following report of the Special Committee, to whom was referred that portion of the late message of His Honor the Mayor, designated as "Relief to Broadway," was received, laid on the table, and ordered to be printed.

The Special Committee, to whom was confided that portion of the late message of His Honor the Mayor, designated as "Relief to Broadway," having considered the subject, respectfully

REPORT:

That, entertaining the imperative necessity of some action on the part of the Common Council, calculated to afford the relief so manifestly required, and at the same time convinced of the perfect practicability of carrying out methods of effecting some benefit, they entered upon their duties with an anticipation of success which they trust the Board, by its action, will enable them to attain.

As the travel upon the roadway and sidewalks of Broadway, has very nearly reached the limit of their extreme capacity, and as, by the peculiar conformation of our City, and the permanent character of the commercial locality, the crowded occupation of Broadway must not only continue but increase, it is manifest, that without the resort to an increase of the width of the street itself, some legislation, having in view the facilitation of travel in it, is necessary to meet the case, and if so, the sooner this action is had, the less the cost thereof will be, and the sooner will our citizens be benefited by the change.

Broadway, resembling a river, into which is poured the contents of innumerable tributary rivulets and streams, presents, by that very similitude, the opportunity of being relieved of a part of its travel by a diversion of some of the sources thereof; in addition to which, the capacity of the street itself, by a judicious and practical application of your authority, may be very effectually increased.

The subject then presents itself to your Committee under two distinct features, viz.: THE INCREASE OF THE CAPACITY OF BROADWAY, essentially in the manner suggested by the Mayor, and THE DIVERSION OF TRAVEL FROM BROADWAY.

Having agreed upon this basis, and resolved to confine their attention thereto, your Committee present these subjects under appropriate heads, viz.:

THE INCREASE OF THE CAPACITY OF BROADWAY.

BROADWAY AND SIDEWALKS.

From observations of the roadway and sidewalks of Broadway, it appears that their average width from Morris-street to Fourteenth-street, is 40 feet, 9 inches for the former, and 19 feet 7½ inches for the latter. The extremes being at Rector, Tenth and Fourteenth-streets, where the sidewalks are 22 feet 10 inches at the first point, and but 16 feet 6 inches at the latter. It appears also, that the average width of space occupied by hydrants and their bases, gas and awning posts, carriage steps and trees, is 22 inches; that the average width of scoops, and of piazzas where there are no scoops, are 7 feet 6 inches for the former, and 5 feet 5 inches for the latter.

SIDEWALKS.

Although the average width of sidewalks is 19 feet 7½ inches, yet, in consequence of the abuses, of stoops being constructed without the prescribed line, and of the occupation of a portion of the sidewalks by hydrants and posts, the actual average available width for foot passengers is reduced, by permanent incumbrances, to but 10 feet 4½ inches; at some points, however, the stoops project 8 feet 6 inches, which further reduces the available width of the sidewalk to but 9 feet 8½ inches.

It is observed with surprise by your Committee, that the sidewalks of Broadway have varying dimensions, there being no less than 13 different widths, the range reaching the almost incredible distance of 6 feet 6 inches; added to which the greatest widths are at the very points where width of roadway is most required, and the widths of sidewalks could be best reduced viz.: from Exchange-place to Fulton-street.

If, therefore, the obstructions of the hydrants, posts, &c., at the outer edge of the sidewalks, are removed, and the line of the stoops reduced uniformly to 5 feet, there will be a gain, in the practicable width of the space for foot passengers, of 4 feet 9 inches; and if the average width of the walk is fixed at 18 feet 6 inches, there will then remain, after the width allowed for stoops, a space for foot passengers of 13 feet 6 inches, and a roadway of 43 feet, being a gain, in the width of each, upon each side, of 3 feet 1½ inches for the former, and 2 feet 3 inches for the latter, being a clear gain in the available width of the street of not less than 8½ feet.

In consideration, however, of the circumstance that the demands for space for foot passengers increases directly with that for a roadway, your Committee are of the opinion that these requirements should be cared for, in defining the width of the sidewalks. Thus, from Fourteenth to Canal-street, the sidewalks might very properly be increased to eighteen feet six inches upon each side, from thence to Vesey-street, to have the standard width of eighteen feet, and from thence to the Bowling-green to to be reduced six inches upon each side.

As there are neither areas nor cellars within the lines of the sidewalks in front of Trinity Church, St. Paul's Chapel, and of the Park, there is no necessity of their being of the same width from the line of the building, that there is when such obstructions do exist, and these walks might be several feet narrower than any others in Broadway, and yet of an equal practicable width to any.

HACK STANDS.

The requirements of the roadway of Broadway for vehicles in motion are altogether too great to admit of any standing obstructions, and as an allotted space is necessary for the accommodation of hacks, your Committee are of the opinion that, if 8 feet were taken off from the Park walk on the west side, and the sidewalk made 16 feet wide, that a very essential gain in the width of Broadway would be effected, without involving any comparative disadvantage.

AREAS AND STOOPS.

Unless a building is to be strictly occupied as a dwelling-house, there is no requirement for any privilege of an area, or an inclosed space in front of the lower windows, as permitted by existing ordinances defining these privileges.

Regarding the propriety of a reduction of the line of stoops, so far as the cost and inconvenience thereof to the owners of buildings upon the line is concerned, it is proper to suggest the following considerations:

The authority under which portions of the streets are taken for the accommodation of stoops, areas, &c., exists only by temporary permission. The Common Council never having legally conceded its jurisdiction over a street for its entire width, but in permitting a portion of it to be appropriated for the convenience of buildings, it enacted ordinances, (see Rev. Ord. 56; § 841, pp. 275 and 908, and 914, pp. 300 and 301,) defining the limits of its permission, simply for the purpose of restricting the occupancy of the work within a reasonable extent.

In corroboration of this, we refer to the following ordinances, viz.: (Rev. Ord. 56, chapter 2, title iii. §§ 901, 902, 903, 904, pp. 298 and 915, p. 301,) wherein the nature and limit of its permissions are fully given, which are as regards dimensions as follows:

Areas, are permitted to be one-fifteenth of the width of street, but in no case to exceed five feet from the line of the street, or 5½ feet, inclusive of the railing.

CELLARS

One-twelfth of the width of street, but in no case to exceed five feet from the line of the street.

STOOPS.

One-twelfth of the width of street, but in no case to exceed seven feet from the line of the street, or five feet in height.

It occurs, however, from very repeated observations of your Committee, that the cost and inconvenience of reducing the line of the stoops to a limit of five feet, will be far below what would be estimated, without an examination. Thus, in a very large number of cases, in consequence of the very general occupation of Broadway by stores, with low door-sills, there would not be required any reduction from the width of the platform at all, and in a great number of cases, of stores with a slightly raised sill, the reduction would involve only a very trifling cost. In many others, the cellar and area openings are within the limit of five feet, assigned by ordinance, and hence no alteration would be necessary. With the stoops, however, there would be many alterations; but, fortunately, the line agreed upon by the Committee is sufficient for any stoop, which is constructed within the limit of the ordinance, which restricts it to a height of five feet. If, then, owners of buildings have seen fit to build their stoops in violation of an ordinance, the cost and inconvenience of a conformance to the ordinance, at this time, is with them alone, they having voluntarily assumed the responsibility of the act, added to which, they are subject, thereby, to a penalty of $250. And also in those cases where the stoops project beyond the limit of the ordinance, (seven feet,) a like responsibility has been assumed, and a like penalty incurred.

If a building be designed for offices alone, such as the new constructions on the corners of Wall and Chambers streets, the privilege of an area and of a stoop of the full limit allowed is very desirable: and as this style of building is very much approved of, it occurs to your Committee, that if any action is to be taken by the Common Council regarding an increase of the capacity of Broadway, that it is proper that it should be taken at as early a day as may be practicable, to remove the objections of increased cost, consequent upon the further construction of stoops, &c., not in accordance with existing ordinances, of delay, and of inconvenience, both to the City and our citizens.

HYDRANTS.

As there is no necessity for the location of hydrants nearer to each other than the width of the blocks upon Broadway, there is no demand for their location upon the direct line of this street.

GAS POSTS.

All street lights can be suspended from brackets on posts, set within the line of the stoops and platforms; there is no necessity for their location upon the sidewalks, and, as this means of suspension will set aside the necessity of any part of the support under the body of the light, a blown glass shade can be used with a hemispherical bottom, which will combine with economy of cost, the advantage of an unobstructed light.

AWNING POSTS AND TREES.

As the space occupied by these incumbrances is in no wise required by necessity, compensated for by ornament, their removal can be advantageously effected. Awnings of a sufficient width can be supported by brackets, and as trees cannot survive the wounds they necessarily receive in Broadway, they are little more than decaying conveniences for the display of placards of questionable utility; their removal will be doubly advantageous.

NEW BUILDINGS—SEWERS—SEWER, CROTON WATER AND GAS CONNECTIONS AND RUSS PAVEMENT.

NEW BUILDINGS.

The incumbrances to the roadway and sidewalks permitted by the piling of bricks, mixing of mortar, and in many cases the actual roughing out and dressing of building stone, are not only prolific causes of obstruction to Broadway, but are coupled with the annoyance, that they are altogether unnecessary, as all work connected with the construction of a building could and should be, in the business streets of a city, carried on within the limits of a lot of ground to be built on.

SEWERS.

As there is not a continuous line of sewers throughout Broadway, and as the occasional construction of one is but a repetition of the arrest of travel during its progress, and of many of the items of its cost, your Committee are of the opinion, that if immediate steps were taken by the Common Council to cause the sewerage of Broadway, from the Bowling-green to Fourteenth-street, to be completed as early as practicable, that the cost thereof would be very materially lessened, both to the citizens and the City.

SEWER AND CROTON WATER CONNECTIONS.

Notwithstanding the enormous expense to which the City has been subjected by the cost of the pavement of Broadway, and the objections to the disturbing of that peculiar pavement, yet scarcely a day passes, without the breaking up of it, for the connection of a sewer, water or gas pipe, and the replacement of it by men, who are not only ignorant of the qualities of the peculiar construction they have destroyed, but think their duty discharged if the trench is filled up and covered over; now, as it is perfectly practicable to make connections with a street sewer or water main by a tunnel, your Committee are of the opinion, that the digging of a trench in a street pavement without the line of a curbstone, is not only altogether unnecessary, but is an operation involving great inconvenience to the public and expense to the City.

GAS CONNECTIONS.

From the circumstance of the gas mains being laid nearer to the surface of the street than the Croton mains or sewers, there is a difficulty in tunneling to them that is not experienced in the latter cases. But your Committee have authoritatively advised themselves, that there are but a very few cases, (not exceeding five,) where this connection does not exist in Broadway, and as the President of the Gas Company in the district in which these deficiencies exist, has expressed his willingness to lay the service pipes in these cases, the cost thereof to be collected by the Company when the service is required, any further breaking up of this street for purposes connected with gas connections, is not likely to occur for some years.

RUSS AND PERRINE PAVEMENTS.

In consequence of the insecurity of a foot-hold for horses upon this pavement, the individual loss and injury to horses thereby, added to the obstruction of the street, to which the repeated falling of horses gives rise, we are of the opinion that the Russ & Perrine pavements, throughout its entire line, should either be grooved, or the blocks broken into pieces, according to their size, and replaced in conformation with detailed specifications for this purpose.

PROCESSIONS, PARADES, &c.

It is quite customary for processions, &c., to be given the entire occupancy of Broadway, compelling all vehicles to turn off to a side street; now it is manifest to your Committee, that the occasion rarely occurs that so great a privilege should be accorded. Upon a late occasion, Broadway was thus allowed to be exclusively occupied by a procession, with a front of but two persons.

STAGES.

At this time there are ten lines of stages, comprising three hundred and twenty-five in number, licensed to run through Broadway to the South ferry, and an opinion was confidently entertained that the opportunity presented itself by an arrest of a portion of this number at the southern extremity of the Park; that very essential relief might be given to Broadway, below Vesey-street, which is the part most requiring it; but upon a consideration of the matter in conformance with the proprietors of these lines, a majority of your Committee deem it inexpedient to make any other than the following recommendations regarding changes in the course of these lines: ons being that asked for by the proprietors of the East Broadway line, who propose to run six stages through Madison and Pearl streets to the South ferry; and the other, that all stages running down to the South ferry shall pass on the west side of the Bowling Green and through State-street, returning through Whitehall-street, and on the east side of the Bowling Green.

BOWLING GREEN.

The space occupied by this inclosure is so great that the roadway is but twenty-five feet upon the east side of it, and but twenty-seven feet seven inches upon the west side; if, therefore, it was reduced in width fifteen feet upon the east side, a corresponding increase to the width of the roadway would be attained at a point where increased accommodation for the passage of vehicles is much needed.

WHITEHALL-STREET.

This street is quite too narrow for the requirements of travel upon it; an ordinance, however has been enacted, directing it to be widened to about sixty-five feet. The consummation of this measure, however, is delayed by litigation regarding the awards.

STATE-STREET.

This street has an average width of but 45 feet 9 inches, and as its west side is bounded by the Battery alone, a sufficient increase to its width might be had at the mere cost of removing the railing and sidewalks adjoining thereto.

BATTERY-PLACE.

This street, having but a width of 50 feet, is also quite too narrow for the travel upon it, and as it is bounded on the south by the Battery, a sufficient increase to its width might also be had at the cost of removing the railing and sidewalks adjoining thereto.

Entertaining, then, these views, your Committee submit the following ordinances and resolutions:

LAW RELATING TO BROADWAY.

Be it enacted by the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York:

SEC. 1.—That the widths of the sidewalks upon Broadway, from its commencement to Fourteenth-street, shall be as follows:

	Ft.	In.
From Battery-place to Vesey-street	18	6
From Vesey to Canal-street	18	6
From Canal to Fourteenth-street	19	0
From Reetor to Thomas-street, on the west side only	16	0
From Fulton to Vesey-street, on the west side only	18	0
For the west side of the Park	16	0

SEC. 2.—That no person shall erect, or build, or cause any stoop, or area, in Broadway, below Fourteenth-street, to be made, which shall extend beyond the line of the street more than five feet, under the penalty of five hundred dollars, to be recovered from the owner and builder thereof, severally and respectively.

SEC. 3. That no awning or sign posts, box, step or sign, wares, merchandise, manufactures, or incumbrance of any description whatever, except it shall be a package of wares or merchandise in immediate course of receipt or delivery, shall be permitted to occupy the sidewalks of Broadway, without the line of the stoops, below Fourteenth-street, under a penalty of ten dollars for each and every article, and the further sum of five dollars for each and every period of twelve hours' incumbrance from and after the time of any complaint that may have been entered, until the removal shall have been complied with.

SEC. 4. That no person shall obstruct, or cause to be obstructed, the roadway, or sidewalks of Broadway, or of any other street below Fourteenth-street, less than eighty feet in width, with any building materials whatever, except so far as it or they may be in immediate course of removal or delivery, under a penalty of twenty dollars for each and every offence; and a further sum of five dollars for each and every day's occupation, from and after the time of any complaint that may have been entered, until their removal shall have been complied with.

SEC. 5. The Commissioner of Streets and Lamps is hereby directed to order and cause the removal of all incumbrances, from the sidewalks of Broadway, below Fourteenth-street, other than stoops, platforms, or public lamp-posts, that are within a line of five feet from the line of the street, within thirty days from the passage of this resolution; and if any owner, occupant, or person having charge of any building or lot, within the limits above referred to, shall refuse or neglect to obey or comply with such order, he, she or they, shall forfeit and pay the sum of ten dollars, and the further sum of five dollars for each and every day's refusal, from and after the time limited and appointed in said order, until the same shall have been complied with.

SEC. 6. The Commissioner of Streets and Lamps is hereby directed to cause and cause the removal of all stoops and platforms upon Broadway, below Fourteenth-st., that are within a line of five feet from the line of the street, within sixty days from the passage of this resolution; and if any owner, occupant or person having charge of any building or lot within the limit above referred to, shall refuse or neglect to obey or comply with such order, he, she or they, shall forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred dollars, and the further sum of ten dollars for each and every day's refusal, from and after the time limited and appointed in said order, until the same shall have been complied with.

SEC. 7. The owners or occupants of buildings on Broadway, below Fourteenth-street, shall be, and are hereby permitted to construct from the buildings thereon, wrought iron brackets for the support of awnings; which brackets shall be firmly secured to the building, and project therefrom a distance of ten feet measured from the line of the street; and no part of them, shall be at a less height than eleven feet, measured from the upper surface of the curb stone.

SEC. 8. Whenever any article or incumbrance shall have been directed to be removed, pursuant to the fifth and sixth sections of this law, and the same shall not be removed within the time limited in such order, notice or direction, it shall be lawful for either the said Commissioner or Superintendent of Streets to order the same to be transported into the yard occupied by the Superintendent of Repairs to Public Buildings, or other suitable place.

Complaints to be made to the Corporation Attorney, and the penalties to be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction.

AN ORDINANCE

IN RELATION TO LEASING THE CORPORATION DOCKS AND SLIPS.

Be it ordained by the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York in Common Council convened:

That in all leases that shall or may hereafter be made, in pursuance of law, of the docks, wharves, piers and slips of the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York, situate and being on the North River, west and north of the Battery, there shall be introduced and inserted a provision, making it a condition of the lease, that the premises leased shall not be used as landing places, either for freight or passengers from, or to, or for any steamboats, exceeding 500 tons burden, trading or plying to or from any place in the East River or Long Island Sound, or which on their trips shall go through any part of the East River; and in all leases in the manner made of wharves, piers, docks or slips, situated on the East River, east or north of the Battery, a similar provision shall be introduced, making it a condition of the lease, that none of said last-mentioned premises shall be used as landing places of freight or passengers from, or to, or for any steamboats plying or trading, or going to or through any part of the North River.

Resolved, That the Street Commissioner be, and he is hereby directed to advertise for proposals, and report the same, when received, to this Board, to repave and repair the roadway of Broadway and Whitehall-street, from Fourteenth-street to South Ferry, in accordance with the following general specifications, viz:

I. RESETTING CURB AND GUTTER STONES.

The curb stones, for the entire length, to be set to the lines of the streets, as required by the preceding law, and all gutter stones to be removed. Price to be given per lineal foot.

II.—GROOVING RUSS AND PERRINE PAVEMENT.

The upper surface of the blocks of these pavements to be cut in grooves, the cross section of which shall be either that of a triangle or parallelogram, each having a base of one inch and a depth of half an inch, and the line of the grooves to run at an angle of forty-five degrees from the line of the street. Preference will be given to the groove having the section of a parallelogram. As the purpose of the grooving is that of affording a surer foot-hold to horses than now exists, the number and frequency of the grooves to be cut, is to be thus determined: There is to be no part of this surface that is without the running of a groove or the occurrence of a joint for a space of four inches, to be measured from the centre of the grooves or the joints.

III. PAVING AND REPAVING.

Such parts of the sidewalks as may fall within the line of the roadway, by an enactment of the preceding law, are to be paved in like manner to the pavement of the roadway adjoining it. All inequalities in the pavement of these streets, now existing, consequent upon wear, the laying of sewers, &c., are to be removed, and a fair surface to be made.

Whenever new pavement is to be set at the side of the Russ pavement, a foundation of a concrete of rubble and cement is to be laid beneath the blocks.

The pavement, in all cases, is to be continued even to the curbs; no gutter stones, other than those of the blocks of the pavement, to be laid. All old materials, other than the flagging, belonging to individuals, to be removed and returned by the party executing the contract for the paving.

Resolved, That the Croton Aqueduct Department be, and it is hereby directed to have all hydrants and their hoses removed from off the sidewalks of Broadway, below Fourteenth-street, and replaced in contiguous streets, as near to Broadway as may be practicable.

Resolved, That the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps be and he is hereby directed to submit to the Board drawings or models of a design for a gas-post suitable to be located in Broadway, the light of which is to be set within a blown glass shade, suspended within a bracket, extending at least six feet from the post, the bottom of the glass shade being ten feet from the level of the upper surface of the curb stone.

The drawings and models to be drawn or constructed to an uniform scale of four inches to the foot.

Resolved, That the counsel to the Corporation be, and is hereby directed to report to this Board, the cause of the delay in the opening of Whitehall-street.

Resolved, That the width of Bowling Green be reduced fifteen feet upon each side, and that the Street Commissioner be and he is hereby directed to advertise for proposals to effect the same, and report them to the Common Council for confirmation.

Resolved, That State-street be widened, upon the west side, to an uniform width of sixty feet, and that the Street Commissioner be and he is hereby directed to advertise for proposals to effect the same, and that the report then to the Common Council for confirmation.

Resolved, That the gates leading into the Battery, at the corners of Whitehall-street and Battery-place, when removed to the line of the streets as directed to be widened, be set upon a line of an arc of circle, having a radius of one hundred and twenty-five feet.

DIVERSION OF TRAVEL FROM BROADWAY.—As it is impracticable for your Committee to conclude its consideration upon this subject as an early day, it has decided to present the above report, being in part the result of their labors, and ask permission to set again, in order to conclude their further investigation of the subjects confided to them. Respectfully submitted.

SHIVERING.

We know that if the perspiration be suddenly checked, our sensations soon sound the alarm. Why is this? It is because the perspiration is thrown back into the blood, and retards its healthful circulation, occasioning in persons already predisposed to disease that feeling of

SHIVERING
"CATCHING COLD."

Sudden changes of weather, from warm to cold, or from cold to warm, are always apt to be productive of sickness, unless people are careful to use BRANDRETH'S Pills when the first symptoms of "catching cold," or other feeling contrary to health, manifests itself.

"All ye who languor, droop and fade,
Or ye whom fiercer illness thrills,
Call the blest compound to your aid,
Trust to BRANDRETH'S precious Pills."

BRANDRETH'S Pills, the prolongers and sweeteners of life, are sold at 25 cents a box, with full directions, at No. 43 Brandreth Building, Nos. 415 and 417 Broadway; Mrs. HAYES', No. 175 Fulton street, Brooklyn; No. 52 Division street; and A. CUSHMAN, Broadway, corner of Twenty-second-street.

MONDAY, April 6—P. M.

The Official Averages of the Banks in the City of New-York, for the week ending Saturday last, April 4, the particulars of which are advertised separately by each Bank, in another part of this paper, exhibit, in the aggregate, the following changes from the previous statement of Saturday, March 28:

Increase in Loans and Discounts	$1,959,122
Increase in Specie	212,999
Increase in Circulation	338 499
Increase in Undrawn Deposits	653,772

COMPARATIVE RECAPITULATION.

	April 4, 1856.	April 4, 1857.	March 28, 1857.
Capital	$49,462,000	$59,263,000	$59,263,000
Loans	106,962,018	114,833,902	112,874,024
Specie	13,381,354	11,538,782	11,325,733
Circulation	8,347,498	8,812,328	8,473,829
Gold Deposits	91,008,498	97,340,918	92,616,560
Exchanged	23,022,780	30,456,825	26,386,144
Undrawn	67,985,679	65,884,093	66,250,416
Sub-Treasury	15,646,359	15,289,586	15,481,074

The heavy payments into Bank on 4th April, (the last day of the above average,) induced the greater part of the increase in the new Loans and Discounts. The same cause led to an increase of $4,070,681 in the average daily exchanges through the Clearing-House. The movement in Specie, Circulation, and Undrawn Deposits, is a satisfactory one. The Money Market to-day worked comfortably. There was, as usual before steamer day, a little more activity in demand loans. The Exchange sold to-day, and to be sold to-morrow, is not paid for until Wednesday. The rates on London are firm. Sales at 108¾@108¾, and a further advance of ⅛@¼ talked of by some of the leading Bankers at the close. The Sub-Treasury disbursed $305,809, against $190,589 received, reducing the balance at the close to $15,175,086.

The downward course of prices at the Stock Exchange, noticed in our weekly review this morning, continued to-day. Heavy contracts were pressed in New-York Central, Illinois Central, Reading and Erie, and each declined from the sales of Saturday; Illinois Central from 131¾, the opening sale, to 129¾ at the close. New-York Central, 87¾; Reading, 78½, and Erie, 52¾ ₰ cent. The sales of Southern Michigan closed at 69½, against 70¾ on Saturday afternoon. Chicago and Galena left off 101, and Cleveland and Toledo 71¾ cash. The business of the day amounted to about 20,000 shares different Road and other shares, a large portion on contract or on borrowed stock. The outside support to the market in the way of orders is wholly unequal to the determined spirit manifested by two-thirds, not to say three-fourths of the jobbers, inside the Board and on the Street, to have the general range of the prices lower, and to this end such stocks as New-York Central, Illinois Central and Reading, were specially singled out for an attack to-day. The general list left off dull.

The managers of the New-York and Erie Company are advertised from Albany to-day that the bill to authorize the distribution of stock equal to the amount of the Bonds of 1875, converted through the Sinking Fund, has passed the House of Assembly without amendment; and as it had previously passed the Senate, the signature of the Governor is now only wanting to make it the law.

The Continental Bank has resolved on an increase of Capital to $2,000,000. The present Capital is $1,500,000. The new stock is to be awarded to the old stockholders on 15th June, in the proportion of one share to three.

Mr. JOHN CATLIN, formerly of Milwaukee, where he directed the building of the Milwaukee and Mississippi Road, as President of the Company, has gone into the Banking and Exchange House of Messrs. W. J. BELL & Co., corner Exchange-place and William-street.

In regard to the Cotton crop the circular of Messrs. NEILL BROTHERS, (for the Boston steamer,) of this date, remarks:

"The rapidity of the decline in receipts is calculated to remove any doubt that may have existed with regard to the shortness of the crops, and we think there remain very few persons of intelligence who advocate views much over 3,000,000 bales. For the past week, indeed, the falling off is so great (39,000 bales against 83,000 last year) as to confirm very strongly all that has been said about the crop being hurried down to the ports before its usual time, owing to extended facilities and high prices. The figures by telegraph, however, are not quite so small as those in the table, though still falling greatly short of last year. It will be noticed that the aggregate deliveries to date, amount to 2,618,000 bales, against 2,909,000 bales last year, and against 2,821,000 in 1852-3. There is thus, as compared with 1852-3, a falling off of 203,000 bales. Should this falling off be only maintained to the end of the season, it would (as the total crop of that year was 3,262,000 bales) indicate the final result of this year to be 3,059,000 bales. As the figures now stand they are therefore fully confirmatory of estimates of about 3,000,000 bales."

Money Circular for Europe.

Per Europa.] NEW-YORK, Monday, April 6, 1857.

In the face of an increasing ease in the money market, since our last advices of the 21st ultimo, the tendency of prices in the stock market has been downward. The movement in shares, which has been tolerably large, has run chiefly upon the speculative stocks, and has been mostly confined to a few large operators. But few stocks for permanent investment have been bought during the week. The payments into the banks of an unusually large amount of notes, falling due the 4th instant, were made with unexpected ease. There was no unusual demand for money on that day, as had been anticipated by many. State Stocks—Large sales have been made in Missouri 6 ₰ cents and Virginia 6 ₰ cents, at a fraction decline in rates. Some Ohio 6 ₰ cents

Her advices are four days later than those received by the Asia at New-York.

The City of Washington arrived out at 6 o'clock on the morning of the 23d ult., and would sail again for New-York an hour after the Canadian.

Great Britain.

Previous to the dissolution of Parliament, Lord PALMERSTON, in reply to questions, stated that no direct overtures for the return of the Embassies had been made from Naples, but indirectly it was asked whether sending the political prisoners to La Pleta would be considered sufficient. The British Government, however, would not be satisfied with Naples merely emptying it prisons to fill them again.

The Commercial Treaty with Morocco was laid before the House. The House then dispersed.

The writs for the new Parliament are returnable on the 30th of April.

The Queen's speech was telegraphed by the Asia.

The English Press generally speak favorably of the moderation of the Inaugural of the President.

Birmingham reports improved orders for iron from the United States, and also a full export and demand for other goods.

At Nottingham business, both in Hosiery and Lace, was well sustained.

In the Woolen districts there had been dullness.

FRANCE.

Letters from Marseilles of the 18th say that the American ship Adriatic being arrested in consequence of the collision with the steamer Lyonnais, the Captain demurred to the jurisdiction of the French Courts, and appealed to an American tribunal. The objection was overruled, and the cause will be heard before the Tribunal of Commerce. The survivors of the Lyonnais are waiting to give their evidence.

There was not much business transacted last week by the Paris manufacturers. From some of the manufacturing towns the accounts are rather favorable. Woolen stuffs are in demand and some large orders have been received from Paris. Calicoes are not so easily disposed of. There has been a small rise in the price of Cotton Thread. Complaints are made of the non-arrival of orders for silk from the United States. New York merchants decline to purchase silk goods at the present high price which is 30 to 40 per cent. higher than that of last year.

News has been recived from Algiers announcing that one-fifth more of land has been sown with wheat this year than last, and the growing crops promise an abundant harvest.

There is a progressive rise in the prices of Colonial Produce. The Corn, and particularly the Flour markets, are excessively dull. A speedy fall in the price of Wheat is inevitable. Flour of the best quality was offered at the last market at 75f. 50c., the sack of 157 kilogrammes. The Bakers have supplied themselves with Flour worth 74f. the sack. The reserve of Flour in the market stores of France is large.

Spain.

The following is an extract from the London Times: "Cadiz letters state that the forts of Vera Cruz had fired on the boats of the Spanish war steamer Ferrolana, whose commander has demanded an explanation. The two British steamers forced the port of Nangasaki, in Japan, because they were refused admission contrary to the Treaty. THE POISONING AT HONG KONG.

The Paris Moniteur Flotte gives the details of the arrest and interrogatories of the Chinese baker, who was executed for poisoning bread at Hong Kong. He stated that he acted agreeably to the orders of the Viceroy, brought him by a satellite of the Mandarin. The orders informed ALLUM, the baker, that the English having declared war, it was his duty to assist in their destruction; that the soldiers used fire and sword to fight them, and he was to use poison. If he disobeyed these orders, his family at Canton would be thrown into prison, and his property confiscated. He made two kinds of bread—one poisoned for the English, which was involuntarily given to the other foreigners, and another kind only for the Chinese.

A Note from Father Tracy in Relation to His Late Lecture on Irish Immigration Westward.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: As the New-York Journal, which gave most attention to the lecture I delivered at the Tabernacle, on the 26th ultimo, (and the one whose account has been generally copied by the weekly papers circulating among the class to whom I addressed myself,) I beg to trespass on your space a little more. It is only to-day I returned to town from Connecticut, en route to my home in the west, or you should have had a few words from me earlier.

In the first place, let me say that, however unworthy, I have always had the happiness to enjoy the confidence of my ecclesiastical superiors, and that although my present journey more immediately concerns my own district, it was not undertaken irregularly, or without the permission of my Bishop. With this, however, the general public has nothing to do, nor would I allude to it at all, were there not some danger of the contrary erroneous impression being left on the minds of many.

I visited Washington City before coming here, and, in company with Hon. B. B. CHAPMAN, our Territorial delegate, and other gentlemen from the Territory, we succeeded in keeping the land of Nebraska open for preemption. I confess I am anxious to see actual settlers come into the Territory, and for precisely the same reasons I am, of course, anxious to keep land speculators out. Settlers and speculators will not thrive together; as I desire to befriend one, I am bound to oppose the other.

As I said at the Tabernacle, I am not concerned either personally or otherwise in the sale of land. I have no selfish interests to advance. My sole object was to give some exact information to a class for whom I am naturally interested, who know very little of the west, and who never can know (until too late) what opportunities of social independence they are losing, unless some person or persons, whom they believe to be better informed, plainly and publicly tell them the truth.

I feel almost ashamed, Sir, that it should be necessary to trouble you or any portion of the public with this vindication of motives, which I must say, in all humility, ought never have been impeached.

As to the canonical questions raised by your correspondent "M. J." those who ought to be fully informed, believe that in giving my last lecture, I violated no law or rule of the church, but as a newspaper seems to be no fit tribunal for the discussion of points of discipline, I reserve my own opinion, strengthened as it is by that of others of higher authority.

Respectfully yours, J. F. TRACEY.

P. S.—Least the imputation as to motives gathered from what has been said, may be supposed to refer to others who were present at my lecture, I feel bound to say that no one there present, neither the editor of the American Celt, nor any one else who attended the Buffalo Convention, is directly or indirectly interested in the lands of St. Patrick's Colony. Whatever aid Mr. THOMAS DARCY MCGEE, or any one else in New-York has given me, has been entirely voluntary, for which they deserve, as I am sure they shall have, the gratitude of the settlers and their children's children.

D'ARREST'S COMET.—The small telescopic comet, discovered at Leipsic, Feb. 23, and in this country a month later, can now be seen with a telescope of moderate power, "although it will require a clear sky to be able to see it to advantage." It was nearest the sun on March 21. It is now in the constellation Perseus, and on Thursday next (April 9 it will be near the star Iota Persei, 14th magnitude. It presents the usual cometary appearance. The nebulous head is about a minute in diameter, and the nucleus is as bright as a star of the seventh magnitude.—Boston Traveller.

REMAINS OF A MASTADON.—The Williamsburg (Va.) Gazette says that, last week, two sailors discovered, about a mile west of that place, the tusks of some huge animal, which was five feet eight inches in length. Three joints of the back bone were also found, each measuring two feet seven inches in diameter. These specimens are to be removed to this city.

A letter of the 18th ult. from Big Cypress, Fla., states that a few days previous the troops made an attempt to surround the Indians by entering the Cypress in three columns. The columns fell in with the Indians, and, if one of them had been two minutes sooner, some of the Indians would have been intercepted. Two men were shot, each with three balls, but not killed. They did not see the Indians. Only three guns were fired by the troops. Gen. HARNEY went out to the Cypress, with forty men, and returned on the 30th. His intention is to capture the women and children, if possible. If the Indians are not brought to terms before the middle of May, it never can be done. Gen. HARNEY has tried every means that experience and ingenuity can suggest, and we await the results.

NICARAGUA AFFAIRS.

Reply to Gen. Cazneau on Nicaraguan Affairs and the Transit Route.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: You have published a note from General CAZNEAU, on the affairs of Nicaragua. I will thank you to publish this, in reply to that gentleman's communication.

1. General CAZNEAU says, in his sixth proposition, "There are strong grounds for believing that some British capitalists have views of their own in relation to the Nicaraguan Transit, and are making efforts to monopolize and control for their private interest this peculiarly favorable route to the Pacific."

General CAZNEAU is not, perhaps, aware that Costa Rica, in conjunction with Nicaragua, is now offering the Transit line for sale in this City, and offers every inducement to the capitalists and practical business men of the United States to take possession of the line. In confirmation of which, I have now before me a copy of a contract, in Spanish and English, for the sale and delivery of the Transit line. Costa Rica considers it an imperious necessity for her that this line shall be sold to Americans, under a public guarantee.

"The partition of Nicaragua," says Gen. CAZNEAU, "was to enure to the special benefits of the allies of England, and was planned under British direction, in the same spirit that the British officials at Greytown abetted the suppression of the Nicaragua Transit."

The object of Costa Rica in demanding ths province Guanacasta, and that portion of the Isthmus which includes the River San Juan and the Transit Road, (her demands extend no farther,) is to enable her to give effectual guarantee for the fulfillment of her own contract with the American purchasers of the Transit in New-York, whoever they may be. While the line is in possession of irresponsible adventurers who pay only with hullets and the stocks, it is effectnally closed for all commercial purposes.

3. "The Panama route," says Gen. CAZNEAU, is "under the irresponsible control of the negro subjects and allies of England." Now, as Messrs. ROBERTS, ASPINWALL, VANDERBILT and others, are neither negroes nor subjects of Great Britain, I presume the General allndes to the gangs of Jamaica negroes employed by Col. TOTTEN in the construction accounts of the P. R. R. General CAZNEAU, although an amiable and accomplished gentleman, is certainly enthusiastic in regard to British instigation of Jamaica negro riots at Panama. The riots arose from natural causes, which operate among a laboring population as well in New-York and Philadelphia as in Panama. The Panama riot was similar in principle to the violences of the Chagres boatmen, the destruction of power works in England by the handloom weavers, &c.

4. "The British officials at Greytown abetted the suppression of the Nicaraguan Transit," says General CAZNEAU. I have carefully read the reports of British proceedings at Greytown for the last few months, and can discover no action of Great Britain, except that she has given British subjects the opportunity of leaving the service of LOCKRIDGE and his friends, without the danger of being shot afterward as deserters. It appears to me very proper for Great Britain to protect her citizens in this manner, after having had one of her ministers (Mr. CRAMPTON) ignominiously sent home from Washington for the offence of enlisting men for the Crimea. I can now inform Gen. CAZNEAU that certain German agents of CRAMPTON, finding their occupation stopped by the United States Marshal, offered their services to the agents of General WALKER in this City more than a year ago; and those services for enlisting German and British mercenaries, (for the war in Nicaragua,) were probably accepted. General HENNINGSEN will give some information on that point. While I was in Nicaragua I saw Hessian mercenaries, similar in all respects to those who fought against us in the Revolution, employed to overthrow and destroy the Republics of Central America, and to establish there what General WALKER calls a strong Republic "on a military basis"—i. e. a despotism in no way different from that of SANTA ANA in Mexico, or BOMBA in Naples. Vide the Goicouria correspondence and conversation of General WALKER passim.

5. Gen. CAZNEAU is at a loss to know what has become of his Rivas letters. The explanation is very simple. They were either taken by the Costa Ricans, or the courier decamped with them into Costa Rica—an every-day occurrence at Rivas for the last three months.

6. It appears by Gen. CAZNEAU's note that no satisfactory accounts have been received of the condition of affairs at Rivas since the 4th of March. On the strength of this want of information—on the principle that "no news is good news"—Gen. CAZNEAU very simply concludes that Gen. WALKER, with a force of some 300 men, has beaten and utterly overthrown and destroyed the allies, with a force of not less than 3,000 men—some say 5,000, but that is nonsense. If so, it will be the first time since the battle of Virgin Bey, that Gen. WALKER has overthrown and driven away a greatly superior force of native troops. Gen. WALKER's military movements in Nicaragua appear to have been, in general, either retreats or defeats.

General CAZNEAU says that friends of Gen. WALKER in this city have come to the following conclusion, to wit: "That having used PATRICIO RIVAS as an implement for the ruin of his country, the invaders (which invaders?) are prepared to set aside the feeble show of a Government they set up in his name." Is this intended to apply to Gen. WALKER and his friends? If so, it is the exact truth. But no; Gen. CAZNEAU applies it to the Allies. A word then about the Allies. The Nicaraguans were fighting desperately against their American and Hessian invaders, for their homes and firesides, their laws, religion and property,—against a system of confiscation and violence unheard of since the days of the Buccaneers. The old buccaneer MORGAN, (no offence is intended to the respectable gentleman of that name in New-York) did no more, in fact, than WALKER is doing. The entire native population of Nicaragua are against him. He has seized all they possess—land, cattle, plantations, estates and vessels; he has abolished their laws and institutions; he has deposed and driven away their civil functionaries; he has made war for the avowed and open purpose of converting an imperfect republican system, capable like our own of reform, into a perfect military despotism; he has issued decrees enslaving the natives of the country, by the restoration of the old laws of peonage, or enslavement for debt. The brilliant and enlightened "CORA MONTGOMERY," the lady of General CAZNEAU, understood the meaning of the word "peonage."

Is it surprising, then, that the States of Central America (the Allies) should "pledge their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor," never to rest until they have driven "the invader" from their soil? Let my countrymen pause and consider which is the right in this contest.

7. The desertion of CHILLON (if it be true) from the Allies to the cause of the invader has its parallel in the history of the American Revolution.

8. Gen. CAZNEAU appeals to the Government of the United States, to recognize the effective validity of the odious Clayton-and-Bulwer Treaty, and, under that treaty, to "reestablish the Transit line;" in other words, to join with WILLIAM WALKER, Gen. CAZNEAU, and two or three others, in overturning the entire political system of the Central American Republics, and "occupying and fortifying" their territory, as though they were the open and declared enemies of a Government whose friendly protection they have been seeking for the past twenty-five years.

I would here suggest to General CAZNEAU and his friends in this City, and in New-Orleans, that as the Territory of Nicaragua, and the property and resources of the old Accessory and new Walker Transit Line are completely exhausted, they will find it more profitable to turn their attention now to the Isthmus of Panama. The murder of some sixty California passengers upon the Isthmus, not many months ago, is a grievance still unavenged. Let the forces of Gen WALKER move suddenly from Rivas, pass through Costa Rica by forced marches to the province of Chiriqui, a district surrounded by mountains, where there are plenty of cattle and plantations for the support of an army. There let them be joined by a force of five hundred men from New-Orleans. After refreshing themselves for a month, let General WALKER make a pronunciamento against Panama—taking care to enlist enough of the natives to make active war of the affair—and move suddenly down upon the Panama Railroad. To occupy both ends of the road, engage the services of the Jamaica negroes who swarm along the Line, and pay his soldiers from the transit revenues; to quarrel with the steamship owners, because they will refuse to import fillibusters; to seize and confiscate their property under a revolutionary decree of the newly established Government of Panama—all this can be done.

To continue fighting in Nicaragua is to expend blood and treasure for a region now not worth the possession, and that will require millions of capital, and years of labor, to restore its dilapidated cities and overgrown and ruined estates. Not so with Panama. It would be the affair of an hour to create a fillibuster revolution against the Railroad Company and the native Governments, with the certainty of an immense booty.

After the Panama railroad had been used up and exhausted, and the second and only remaining channel of our California specie commerce shut up and destroyed—(we could still send specie by clipper round the Horn)—would then not be Honduras? A Company of English merchants and bankers are about opening a line of Transit for the benefit of American commerce across the Isthmus of Honduras. After exhausting Panama, WALKER and his men could move up into some quiet interior district of Honduras, and await the opening of the transit from Puerto Cabello to the Gulf of Fonseca. The Panama road would have been sold to another set of speculators, who have already exhausted themselves. Could a third set be found to purchase the confiscated Honduras railroad, and all the confiscated and ruined haciendas of Comayagua and Taquizalpa? No, this could not be done. The Honduras railroad is under British protection. England would not allow her citizens to levy private war against Honduras, nor would she allow the seizure of their property on the line of inter-oceanic communication. Bad as she is she is not bad enough for that. But would the career of WILLIAM WALKER and his friends be then terminated? Not necessarily. There would be yet the high seas open to the brave adventurer and the specie ships around Cape Horn. Gen. CAZNEAU would have "deserted," however, long before that. I have confidence in the honor and integrity of Gen. CAZNEAU. He is one of many who have been grossly misled and deceived. A word more and I have done. The defeat of the Allies does not constitute WILLIAM WALKER the President of Nicaragua de facto. He must reconquer the entire country before he can govern it. HAND GRENADE.

Governor Walker still in Washington—Foreign Appointments—Caleb Cushing—Senator Slidell—Pacification of Tammany Hall—Hard and Soft-Shell Divisions Obsolete—The Southern Press.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday Evening, April 6, 1857.

Governor WALKER, of Kansas, is still in this City. He has repeatedly notified his friends, in the Capital and elsewhere, that he was on the eve of departure, but has as often been compelled to postpone leaving. Senator GWIN, whose companion he was to have been to New-York, must have already reached your City, while Mr. WALKER can scarcely get away, now, before the close of the week. Meanwhile he devotes his exclusive attention to the affairs of his future field of action, and declares that, if it is in human power, the principles of the Kansas-Nebraska law shall be rigidly and impartially applied in the agitated territory, at whatever sacrifice.

The correspondence which has just appeared between General PERSIFER SMITH and the late Secretary of War, is far from bearing out Governor GRAHY in the impression he has desired to leave upon the public mind, since his departure—or rather flight from Kansas. The general belief in Washington is beginning to be, that Governor GRAHY was only the great Governor GRAHY of the newspapers, while the real Governor GRAHY was General SMITH. It is to be hoped that Governor WALKER may have an equally efficient military right hand in the Territory. Superadded to his own ability and energy, it would be an incalculable aid in carrying out the measures of pacification he may think it expedient to adopt.

Foreign appointments, and foreign affairs generally, occupy the attention of the Cabinet this week, as far as is practicable, to the exclusion of all other matters. Mr. CALEB CUSHING covets the China mission; but it is a matter of donbt whether he obtains it. If the Administration simply want an able man to supply the place of Dr. PARKER, they could not do better; but rashness is the last characteristic with which the Plenipotentiary to China, at the present critical moment, ought to be infected, and it cannot be denied that this dangerous quality abounds in Mr. CUSHING's composition.

If Louisiana politics permit the absence of Mr. SLIDELL from the country, he will go to France. His acceptation of the post of Minister to Paris would be equally acceptable to the country and to Mr. BUCHANAN, who wishes to bestow a signal mark of appreciation upon his old personal and political friend.

The Munchausenisms of the article, entitled, "The Democratic Feud," in your this morning's issue, are not considered here to have been intended for public credence. If so, your reporter must have dreamt most of his imagined facts. I am prepared, at this distance, to assert that there is no misunderstanding whatsoever between the late appointees of the Administration in New-York; that there is no truth in the assertion that Messrs. HART, SAUNDERS and FOWLER, are engaged in any anti-Schell movement whatsoever; and that so far from new splits being in prospect, every effort is being made to secure unity in the Democratic ranks in your State. The jumbling up of names by your reporter is simply absurd. The old Hard and Soft-Shell factions have also become completely obsolete, excepting in the minds of a few fanatics, who live upon the memory of the past rather than upon hopes for the future. Even Wood and Anti-Wood are believed to have been nearly swallowed up by the late Executive decisions, and, if prognostications are allowable, the proposition of the Hon. JOHN KELLY for a general burial of the hatchet at Tammany Hall, will be hailed with joy by all concerned in past quarrels. I speak confidently and with knowledge of the intentions entertained at the time of Messrs. SCHELL, HART & Co.'s appointment. Each of these gentlemen has given repeated and unsolicited assurances of a desire to strive solely, in using the influence and patronage of their offices, to build up and not to tear down the party of which they are leaders. Past differences will be wholly ignored—excepting in so far as they may be kept alive with a purpose injurious to the Administration and the Democracy. A great deal of enthusiastic hope prevails that the newly-inaugurated Chief Magistrate will deserve, by the course he has entered on, the approbation of good men throughout the country, and the officials of the Government in your State will therefore recognize and support every one whose actions prove him to be, in the highest sense of the word, a Buchanan man.

PRYOR's new paper, The South, has begun its career with harmlessly brilliant ferocity, and its tirads are a matter of equal wonder and amusement. The Union, under new auspices, promises to do well and to be, strictly, a Union paper. P. H.

NAVAL COURT OF INQUIRY.—We learn that Commodore S. H. STRINGHAM has been detatched from the Court of Inquiry which has been in session in this city for some weeks past, under the act of January 16, 1857, and that Capt. H. A. ADAMS has been ordered in his place.

We also learn that it has been decided to order two more courts, one of which has already been selected, consisting of Captains WM. W. MCKEAN, JOHN POPE, and G. J. VAN BRUNT, and CHARLES ALBERT, Esq., of this city, as Judge Advocate. This Court meets in this city on Monday next. The third Court will be decided upon, as we are given to understand, in a day or so.—Wash. Union, Tuesday.

It is estimated there are 25,000 secret or open Spiritualists in Boston alone. Not more than 8,000 or 10,000 are avowed believers. They have three places of teaching, open every Sunday. THE AMERICAN OPERATIONS IN CHINA.

Detailed Account of the Capture of the Barrier Forts.

The following letter from our Special Correspondent at Canton failed to reach us in the course of mail, and is consequently considerably behind time in its report of events in China. But the account which it gives of the American attack upon the Barrier Forts is so much more full and spirited than any that has hitherto been published, that we are satisfied it will be read with general interest:

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

U. S. SHIP PORTSMOUTH,
Off the Barrier Forts, Canton River,
Friday, Nov. 28, 1856.

I avail myself of the dispatch of a special steamer with a mail to England, to send you a hurried account of the bombardment of, and assault upon, the Barrier Forts, by the U. S. sloops-of-war Portsmouth and Levant. I cannot give, so fully as I would, the incidents and details of the action.

The Barrier Forts are four in number. They are very strong in their position and construction, and very perfectly command the passage to Canton. When the English commenced hostilities upon that city, one of their first acts was to capture these forts; but they only spiked a part of the gune and did not occupy or destroy them. At that time, however, they were not manned or almost so, and the soldiers ran away almost at the first gun. When evacuated by the English they were left for a while unoccupied.

On Saturday, the 15th inst., however, just after the last mail steamer left, Capt. FOOTE, of the Portsmouth, with his first lieutenant, Mr. MADDOX, and Mr. STURGIS, of the house of RUSSELL & Co., of Canton, were returning from Whampoa, in one of the man-of-war's boats, to Canton, with provisions and men for our force, which was stationed there to protect American residents and maintain an armed neutrality. On approaching the forts they found them strongly manned, and with plenty of guns mounted. When within range of the first fort it opened fire upon them, although the boat bore the American ensign displayed in full. Capt. FOOTE, thinking the fire might have been by mistake, held up the flag and waved it, so as to call attention to its nationality. Another well directed shot from the fort was the only reply. The Captain still pushed on and succeeded in passing by the first, but got within range of the second fort. Here the shot began to rattle so thick and heavy that further progress became impossible, and he unwillingly retreated. It is wonderful that the boat was not sunk and all on board lost, for the grape struck all about it.

Of course this outrage called for immediate action, or, as Captain FOOTE expressed it, "no correspondence except the correspondence of guns!" Accordingly, early the next morning, the Commodore dispatched one of the San Jacinto's boats, under command of Lieutenant WILLIAMSON, up the river towards the forts, to take soundings preparatory to sending the ships up the channel. When within range of the lowest fort, a shot was fired which struck the man who was throwing the lead, and carried off his head and all the upper part of his chest, leaving the body frightfully mangled. This second outrage only served to hasten the punishment which the first injury had provoked; and at a quarter before three, the same afternoon, the Portsmouth, in tow of the steamer Willamette, and the Levant in tow of the Coss Fa, both of which boats had been chartered by the Commodore, left their anchorage for the bombardment of the "barrier forts." Commodore ARMSTRONG and his Staff were on board the Portsmouth, and a large body of seamen and marines from the San Jacinto were distributed between the Portsmouth and Levant.

The flag-ship had too great a draft of water to allow of her accompanying the others.

It must be remembered that the channel by which the ships had to approach the forts is very narrow and the water very shallow; that the two ships could not lie together broadside across the town, on that account; and that they were every moment in danger of getting aground and being disabled, exposed to the fire of the enemy. Besidee this, there was no pilot, and no one who understood the channel, except very imperfectly. I will try to give you an idea of the situation of the forts. The first one was built on a slightly projecting point on the left bank of the river—the right bank as you ascend towards Canton. This was one of the strongest, and the one which did the most damage. The second was on the opposite bank, a little higher up the river, and was larger, containing more guns—one very heavy brass gun, twenty-four feet long, which will probably be sent to the United States. The third was still higher up the river, which just above the second fort divides, passing on each side of a long, narrow fortunately for us, the Chinese [illegible] the main. They could [illegible] very badly, for we were aground and could not get our [illegible] to bear until nearly night. The Commodore, who was so sick when he left Whampoa that he was really unfit to leave his ship, was, by this time, so much more ill that he was compelled to return to that place. He left orders with Capt. [illegible] not to fire unless fired upon, as he was about to write to Governor YEH at Canton, giving him 24 hours to apologize for the outrages of his [illegible] before proceeding to demolish them. As he left the ship, his broad pennant was hauled down, and the jack hoisted at the main, in its stead.

The command of the forces at the forts now devolved upon Captain FOOTE. At evening, of Monday, the whole of our force at Canton, which had received orders to abandon their positions there, arrived under command of Captain SMITH. I should have mentioned that immediately after Capt. FOOTE's boat was fired into, on the preceding Saturday, the Commodore sent to Canton for the howitzers and their crews, and the larger part of the marine guard. Forty-five minutes after the order reached the city, this force was embarked by Capt. SMITH and on its way to Whampoa. After the action of Sunday afternoon the order was sent for the rest of the forces, which arrived, as I have previously stated, on Monday evening. The posts previously occupied by us at Canton were immediately reoccupied by the English, so that the factories are still effectually protected, notwithstanding our withdrawal. The American residents, however, have many of them left the city, with their effects, and probably all who are left will soon follow. I ought to mention that, prior to the return of Captain SMITH from Canton, his ship was in command of Captain BELL, of the San Jacinto.

Tuesday and Wednesday were passed by our ships in trying to obtain and to keep a good position for playing upon the forts; no firing took place, as the enemy had not yet opened upon us, and the letter to the Governor at Canton could not have reached him before Wednesday afternoon. The enemy, however, was busy, day and night, strengthening his fortifications, mounting new guns, digging ditches, erecting breastworks, and planting batteries outside the forts, and evidently preparing to give us as stout a resistance as they were capable of. Commodore ARMSTRONG finding that the San Jacinto, at Whampoa, was at any moment liable to be attacked by the Chinese, and was most inadequately manned to resist such an attack, sent up to the ships here, and withdrew forty of the men who had been sent aboard of us from his ship. On Wednesday morning he sent for another detachment of twenty men; but, when Captain FOOTE represented to him that the enemy were so busily at work at their fortifications, and that the storming of the fort, would be exceedingly more difficult and dangerous than if a storming party had landed on Monday morning, immediately after the bombarding the Commodore revoked his order; and even went so far as to authorize the Captain to prevent any further operations of the enemy, even by the capture, if necessary, and destruction of the forts. Of course no reply had yet been received from Governor YEH, for the Commodore's letter had not yet reached him. But the authority given was so, simple, and the circumstances so compulsory, that Captain FOOTE would have commenced the assault the same day, had not night come on before the ships could be brought into proper position. As it was, he decided to begin with daylight the next morning. I may as well mention that Governor YEH's reply, when it did arrive, was exceedingly insolent and unsatisfactory, and certainly would not have prevented the destruction of his forts. His remarks to the Commodore, without a word of regret, or apology, that, when the soldiers of the forts are so constantly on the alert for the English, it is a most difficult thing to distinguish between different flags; that therefore it was the most natural thing in the world that they should have fired on one of the American men-of-war boats; and he advises the Commodore, if he doesn't want his boats fired on, not to let them come in range of the forts. The spirit of the reply was—"I am not sorry for what has been done, and if similar circumstances again occur, your boats will be treated in the same manner."

Such, then, was the state of affairs on Wednesday night. Captain FOOTE, in consultation with Captains BELL and SMITH, had carefully and judiciously arranged the plan of assault, and everything was ready for the morning.

Captain FOOTE had been advised to fire one or two guns, at the commencement of the cannonade, more slowly and deliberately, in order to get the range of the forts, before both ships opened with a broadside. But he determined, and as the result proved correctly, to surprise the enemy by as sudden and heavy a bombardment as possible.

I ought to mention that the steamer Cum Fa, or Golden Flower, was lying near the ships, out of range of the forts, ready to render any necessary assistance during the action.

The position of the Levant was a very little nearer the forts than that of the Portsmouth; but the battery of the latter, being much heavier and more effective, was able to bear on the enemy with quite as much success as that of the former ship.

The officers and men, though tired out by the labors of the past few days, were ready for the action, and every one showed a disposition to do his duty fully on the succeeding day.

On Thursday morning, as soon after daylight as the ships could be brought into position, there being a rapid tide running, the guns were cast loose and trained on the forts. After the men were at their quarters and everything was ready for action, Capt. FOOTE, on board the Portsmouth, having made a most excellent and encouraging speech to his men, made signal to the Levant, and at the same instant both ships roared out a tremendous broadside, and followed it up by a rapid and most destructive cannonade for about an hour and a half. So sudden and overwhelming was the fire, that it was full five minutes before the forts could begin to return it. The surprise was perfect. The panic which was produced in the enemy's forces was wonderful. After they once rallied from it, however, they opened upon us with much rapidity, and no little accuracy, and were not wholly silenced when the assaulting party left the ships. No one was seriously wounded, on our part, except one man on board the Levant, whose leg has since been amputated. Quite a number of shot, however, struck the ships; one of which came through the Levant's side, on the berth-deck, passed through a provision locker and destroyed the prison cell; another struck the muzzle of one of her guns and split it four or five inches; another smashed one of the gun-carriages of the Portsmouth, and itself burst into small fragments, many of which remained buried in the deck. The loss on the part of the Chinese, from our shot and shell, was doubtless very great.

After this heavy cannonade had been continued for an hour and a half, the marines and seamen embarked, and the boats formed for landing,—their passage to the fort being covered by the heavy batteries of the ships. The landing party consisted of 260 men from the San Jacinto, Portsmouth and Levant. The boats were eleven in number, and formed in three lines, Capt. FOOTE, Commanding-in-Chief, leading the centre, Capt. BELL the right, and Capt. SMITH the left. The ships' launches, with four boat howitzers, were the foremost boats.

The party landed at the joss-house, about 800 yards from the fort, and marched, through deep mud and rice fields, dragging their heavy howitzers, to a village, some distance from the shore, through which it was necessary to pass in order to attack the fort in the rear. The landing was effected in good order, and would have been attended with no loss, had it not been for the careless or accidental discharge of a musket belonging to one of our own party,—the Minié bullet of which passed through the body of one of the Portsmouth's men and lodged in the body of another—killing both. This was the only loss sustained by the party during the day, besides that previously mentioned.

The little force marched on to the village of which I have spoken, Lieut. WATMOUGH leading an advance sconting party. The houses, like those of most small Chinese villages, are crowded together on a few narrow, crooked streets. Through such a street,—narrow, intricate, the houses on each side filled with the enemy,—one party had to pass. A few rounds from the howitzers sent down some of the streets, and a prompt fire of musketry soon silenced the gingals, or long, heavy matchlocke which were fired from the houses and other available places of ambush. A joss-house, from which a somewhat heavy firing proceeded, was broken open by a few well-directed shot from our howitzer and was found to be used as an arsenal—a large number of gingals, quite new, being found in it. The party, (all this time, it must be remembered, without a guide,) after passing through the village, had one more obstacle to encounter before they reached the fort itself,—every man having to wade waist-deep in the water of a ditch, through which also the four howitzers had to be dragged. This passed, the fort was gained; for the Chinese, unwilling to try a close engagement with the "fan-guis," who had peppered them so well from a distance, evacuated it with great haste and in great numbers, many of them taking to the water. Among those who tried to escape by swimming was a mandarin, of what order I cannot ascertain, who was shot in the water.

Lieut. WATMOUGH, of the Portsmouth, whose good service through all the action was distinguished, was the first man within the fort and planted our flag upon its walls. The sight of it was greeted with hearty cheers both by the party on shore and those on board the ships. Once well inside, our men began the work of demolition; the guns were spiked; every thing combustible was burned; every thing destructible, by the means in our power, was destroyed.

Meanwhile the guns in the fort opposite had been trained upon the one which our men were occupying, and also upon our boats and the company of men under Mr. SHEPPARD, who had been left to guard them, with such effect as to pierce and sink the Portsmouth's launch. Accordingly, such guns as were found available within our fort were turned upon the enemy with good success—so that the opposite fort was for a while silenced. Soon after our forces took possession, a large body of mandarin troops were seen advancing upon them; accordingly, the marines and two or three of the howitzers were sent to meet them; after some skirmishing and a tolerably energetic use of those terrible howitzers, the enemy, at least two or three thousand strong, was successfully repulsed. Later in the day they attempted another advance, but the howitzers were found equally efficacious as in the first instance.

Captain FOOTE and a part of the forces withdrew at dusk and returned on board the ships, but Captain BELL with the remaining men occupied it till daybreak, when they also withdrew, in order to join in the attack upon the second fort. Loud and long was the cheering which greeted the Captains and their officers as they returned aboard.

During the night it was necessary to show a light for a moment on our deck, when it was visible by the enemy, and the next moment a heavy twenty-four pound shot which buried itself in our side, reminded us that the enemy had seen and taken advantage of it, and that they were prepared to see us when we should call on the morrow.

The next morning (Friday) the ships reopened fire upon the fort on the opposite bank of the river, and, after bombarding it an hour, silenced it. The boats then started in tow of the steamer Cum Fa, with an assaulting party, nearly the same with that of the day previous, commanded, as before, by Captain FOOTE. The landing was, in some respects, more difficult and dangerous than that of the day previous, for although the fort to be assaulted had been silenced by the ships, the two other forts in the rear, which had hitherto done little execution, in consequence of their distance, now had the steamer and boats in full range, and sent a terrific shower of shot about them. One shot struck the San Jacinto's launch, instantly killing three men and badly wounding four or five others. Still the steamer persevered, and brought the boats to their landing-place. I ought to mention, in this connection, that much credit is due to Mr. ROBINET, an American merchant in Canton, who volunteered to pilot the steamer in this perilous enterprise, and whose advice and personal bravery have contributed very essentially to the success of the expedition.

When the boats landed, the Chinese, to the number of about 1,500, retreated from the fort, but as they went, threw into our ranks a kind of spear or rocket, loaded with shot, and barbed also with an arrow. By one of these singular weapons a marine was struck and very badly wounded. The fort was taken and, so far as possible, destroyed—the Chinese, who remained at a respectful distance in the rear, harassing our force as far as lay in their power.

The guns in this fort were then turned on the fort next to it, which I have described as being a little higher up the river; the howitzers also were planted and directed against it with excellent success.

The enemy, finding the fort too hot for them, and too near the position of the "foreign devils," evacuated it, after standing to their guns for an hour or two. Before leaving it, however, they lighted a slow match, which, it was intended, should explode the magazine just about the time when our troops entered the fort. Providentially, however, it exploded prematurely without doing any damage. Our little party, leaving the second fort, rowed up along the bank of the river, and discovered a breastwork of some six or seven guns, supported by an immense force of soldiers in the rear. Captain SIMMS, with his detachment of marines, was sent to take the battery: the howitzers poured a few shot and shell into it, and it was captured without much difficulty. The large army in the rear did not approach very near, but contented themselves with throwing the rockets before described, with other missiles, at the marines, and receiving a fire of musketry and howitzer shot and shell in return. The boats then crossed the river, and the forces entered the round fort on the island, which, as I have before stated, had been evacuated by the enemy, and occupied it during the night. They were unmolested while here, and busied themselves in burning, pulling down and destroying. The enemy, as it appeared, were strengthening the remaining fort, and concentrating their forces in it—determined to make there the last and most desperate resistance.

The fort our forces were now occupying I have already described as situated on the extreme point of the island, between the two channels; beyond the point there is a shoal extending out into the river,—a prolongation of the point under water. In order for our boats to get at the fourth fort, it was necessary to pull the whole distance to the end of the point, round it, and back again on the other side,—all the while entirely exposed to the fire of the enemy. The captains, in planning the attack, planted three of the howitzers so as to bear upon the fort, and trained those of the guns which the enemy had left, and which were available, upon it also. Only one howitzer, therefore, was taken in the boats. At dusk in the morning the boats started; the guns of our fort opened upon the enemy, the howitzer shrapnel whistled into their fort. Capt. FOOTE, feeling that this was by far the most critical and perilous adventure of the whole action, encouraged the men in a short speech, telling them that "BY GOD'S HELP WE WILL CONQUER." The enemy's fort, as soon as the boats started, opened upon them from every gun which could be brought to bear. But the boats kept on. It was, I think, not far from half a mile that they had to pull, exposed all the way to this most murderous fire. The shot splashed in the water all about them,—most of them passing a little too high above their heads; two of the oars of one of the boats were shattered to pieces by a ball; but, by what seems little short of a miracle, not a man was killed or seriously wounded. The boats kept steadily on, pulling right under the very embrasures of the fort, and just before landing the men gave three harty Anglo-Saxon cheers. This was enough; the Chinamen would fight well at a distance, but would not stand a close engagement. They stood for a long time, but just as our men rushed in, the last of the Chinamen were rushing out. They were fired upon, however, from the howitzers, and with musketry, because they are still lingering in the neighborhood, and disposed to do all they could to annoy us. While our party was in the fort engaged in its demolition, an immense force of Mandarin troops which were in the rear came down within two hundred yards; there must have been three or four thousand of them, but the howitzers and musketry soon repulsed them.

Of course the utter demolition of the forts must be a work of time, but we are determined to effect it, and shall begin to-morrow.

I have no time to give you the details and incidents as I could wish to. Our total loss, including the San Jacinto's man, shot while throwing the lead before the bombardment began, is SIX KILLED AND fifteen or twenty wounded, some of them very badly so. The loss of the Chinese must have been very great, the least estimate of it, which I can make, is three hundred.

We hear to-day, on Chinese authority, that the mandarin in charge of the forts has lost his head for suffering them to be captured. This is in accordance with Chinese law, and shows that they confess themselves badly punished.

During all the progress of the operations which the English have been carrying on in Canton and its vicinity, they have had, as they themselves will confess, no work like that which has occupied our forces during the past week. The loss of six killed and twenty wounded (according to the surgeon's report just communicated) is trifling compared with what was to be expected, considering the great strength of the forts; the fact that the Chinese had been driven from all the other forts from Canton to the mouth of the river, and that in this last stronghold they were making their most desperate resistance; that they had all the advantage of, the experience of engagements with the English; and that they stood to their guns with an obstinacy which surprised every body acquainted with Chinese character.

The number of guns taken cannot be much less than two hundred. These have all been or will be destroyed. The forts themselves will be leveled with the ground.

The conduct of officers and men during the action was most admirable.

It was found difficult, not to obtain volunteers for the storming party, but to satisfy those who were willing and urgent to go. Among those who volunteered from the officers of the Portsmouth was Purser JOHN V. DOBBIN, who rendered efficient service as aid to Captain FOOTE, and was among the first who entered the first fort.

Of course I shall not attempt any expression of opinion upon the events which I have narrated. I think that any one can see that the various assaults, and more especially that upon the last forts, were conducted in a manner that throws no discredit upon the country or its navy. I certainly cannot remember any mere naval action during the Mexican war which surpassed this in importance, and in the successful coolness and bravery with which it was won, or equalled it in the peril of the enterprise. It was the opinion on board the ships, as the boats were pulling to the assault of the fourth fort, under the murderous fire which it was pouring upon them, that they would be compelled to return. How they kept on, without losing a man, is, as I said before, most marvelous. And as to its importance it surely cannot be a matter uninteresting or insignificant to the civilized world, that the strongest fortifications which command the Canton River and the approach to that great city of this great Empire are to be utterly removed.

Our Commissioner, Dr. PARKER, is at Whampoa, on board the San Jacinto. Reports have been circulated that he advised inaction, and wished the matter to be left in diplomacy. Some of these reports have found their way into one or two Hong Kong papers, which are always ready to publish anything to his discredit, or to sneer at his official conduct. These reports and sneers may find their way to the United States. I know them to be utterly unfounded. The very large and influential number of persons in our country, who have so long known and respected Dr. PARKER, have very full confidence in his judgment and ability: and I pay only a just tribute to his worth when I say that there are very few men living so well qualified to superintend the relations between the two countries, and to whose care our interests in China may be so safely confided.

The interest of the exciting events in which our own nation is directly involved, will, of course, leave little appetite for any other Chinese news: and, indeed, there is little to send. Not much has been done by the English since I last wrote; what has happened and shall happen between this time and the departure of the next mail I will duly record.

Before Judge Nelson.

The Jury Calendar was called in this Court this morning, and no case was found ready for trial, although some cases were set down to be tried on certain days.

Judge NELSON then took up the Calendar of Appeals in Admiralty, but the running through the Jury Calendar had taken the bar by surprise, and no one was ready on this Calendar either. Judge NELSON finally laid the Appeal Calendar over until Monday next, when it will be called peremptorily.

Before Hon. Justice Roosevelt.

In re application of the Presbyterian Society for leave to mortgage real estate.—Order granting leave as prayed for in petition.

Before Judge Hoffman.

IS THE CORPORATION COUNSELOR, BUSTEED, AN ALIEN?—HE IS DECIDED TO BE A CITIZEN.

Hebaer vs. Townsend.—This case was again brought up yesterday, by Mr. SANXAY, who moved to dismiss the complaint, on the ground that Richard Busteed, the attorney for the plaintiff, was not a citizen of the United States at the time of commencing the action. On the first hearing of the case, in March, His Honor suggested that it be adjourned, in order that evidence might be introduced. Yesterday Mr. SANXAY renewed the motion, Mr. Jas. T. BRADY appeared for Mr. Busteed, and stated that his client possessed the license of the Supreme Court, authorizing him to practice in this State. He claimed that, so long as this stood upon the Record, Mr. Busteed was an officer of the Court de facto, at least, and has a right, as such, to practice in the Court, even though not an officer de jure. Mr. SANXAY, in his endeavors to invalidate the actions of his client, had made a mistake, and confounded a Richard Busteed, who was not his client, with the gentleman who now holds the office of Corporation Counsel.

Mr. SANXAY considered that the license from the Supreme Court was only prima facie evidence of a right to practice, and may be controverted by means of its having been illegally granted. He also denied that he was, from that fact, an attorney of the Supreme Court.

He offered to place Judge BOSWORTH on the stand to prove that Mr. Busteed was naturalized on the 2d of October, 1827.

Mr. BRADY then read the following affidavit which had been served upon him:

Charles Hebaer vs. Samuel Townsend.—City and County of New-York, ss.—Samuel P. Townsend, the above defendant, being sworn, saith that he is informed and believes that Richard Busteed, acting or assuming to act as attorney for the plaintiff in this action, is not a native citizen of the United States, nor the child of a native citizen, but the son of an alien, who arrived in this country in or about the year 1836, and that his father's name was at the time George Busteed, but it afterwards became George W. Busteed, (the W. standing for the patriotic name of Washington); that the said father of Richard became afterwards a naturalized citizen, but not while said Richard was a minor, and that said Richard became, as appears by the records of the Court, admitted as a citizen on the 2d day of October, 1856, and not before, and only subsequently to the bringing of this action. Deponent further saith on information and belief, that said admission of said Richard to the right of naturalization was irregular and imperfect; and deponent further saith upon information and belief, that said Richard Busteed was never admitted or licensed as an attorney of the Superior Court. S. P. TOWNSEND.

Sworn before me this 2d of April, 1857.

R. REED, Commissioner of Deeds.

Mr. BRADY remarked that he was ready to controvert all these allegations if necessary.

His Honor remarked that the case appeared to concern merely the rights of the defendant, Mr. SANXAY thought it was more than that,—that it was of the greatest interest to every citizen who cares for the welfare, interest, and judicial character of the City, to know whether a person can appear in our Courts, representing the City, who is an alien. We propose, said he, to take the point that no persons have been properly naturalized in this State for the last thirty years. This question will probably be carried ultimately to the highest federal Court.

His Honor said that as the case was to go to the General Term, he should not further occupy his mind about it. He considered that a license to practice in the Supreme Court, authorized a party to practice in the Superior Court, and a motion to vacate such license could only be made to the court which granted it. He therefore decided that an order be drawn up setting the facts and denying the motion.

SURROGATE'S COURT—APRIL 7.

Before Hon. A. W. Bradford.

LEGACIES—WHEN CONDITIONAL AND WHEN VESTED IN A NEW QUESTION.

In the matter of the Estate of William Terrill, deceased.—The testator, by his will, devised and bequeathed all his estate, real and personal, to his executors in trust, to pay to his daughter Elizebeth the income thereof during her life, and after her death to divide the principal among his grandchildren, on attaining majority, subject, however, to the following provision, to take effect on the decease of the daughter Elizabeth, viz.: "And, after her death, if there shall be any deficiency or failure in a legacy of $10,000, bequeathed by my said daughter Elizabeth unto my adopted daughter Catharine Jane Alver, in and by a will heretofore executed by my said daughter Elizabeth, then (in trust) to pay out of my said estate, to my adopted daughter Catharine Jane, her executors, administrators and assigns, &c., and for her and their own use, so much money as shall be requisite to make up such deficiency or failure in the said legacy, be such deficiency or failure, the whole or any part of the said sum of $10,000, it being my will and intention, that in any event, my said adopted daughter, Catharine Jane, shall receive the net sum of $10,000 out of the property of my said daughter Elizabeth and myself." The legatee named in this clause survived the testator, but died before Elizabeth, the life tenant. After her decease, Elizabeth Terrill revoked the legacy of $10,000 recited in the will of her father, William, and made bequests in favor of the issue of Catharine, exceeding the amount of the original legacy. I am now asked to decide whether the provision in the will of William Terrill, on behalf of Catharine, became a vested interest on his decease, transmissible to the legal representatives of Catharine on her decease.

After this statement of the case the Surrogate proceeded, at considerable length, to give his reasons for holding that the legacy of the testator William Terrill, was rested absolutely in his adopted daughter at the time of her death, and became transmissable to her legal representatives. He therefore decreed its payment to her administrator with interest.

WILL BE PUBLISHED APRIL 15TH, SCANDAL!
BY MRS. J. T. RICKFORD.
WITHOUT EXCEPTION
THE MOST INTENSELY INTERESTING BOOK OF THE SEASON.
1 vol. 12mo., pp. 394. Price $1 25.

This work is not a mere repetition under a new form of old plots, characters and incidents—but one that possesses the distinguishing characteristic of originality in all these particulars. Its subject is as universal as the air we breathe, and the evils it vividly portrays will serve as guiding lights for tens of thousands who might otherwise be led into sorrowful relations with those about them. It exhibits in the broad, noonday light of God's truth the Rights of Humanity—the innate sentiment of virtue of every Soul—proves conclusively that trials, however severe, refine the spirit, and that

"Ever the Right comes uppermost,
And ever is justice done."

THE INDEPENDENT, NOBLE TONE

that pervades every chapter,

THE FREE, UNTRAMMELED EXPRESSION of Thought that will distinguish it from the libraries of books now emanating from the American Press;

THE ENTRANCING PICTURES OF THE BEAUTIFUL,

and the

VIVID CONTRAST OF RIGHT AND WRONG,

will at once commend the book to the

HEARTS AND HOMES OF THE PEOPLE.

It needs but to be read to be admired, and whenever one reads it, a score will be sure to follow.

It is presented to the public resting solely on its own intrinsic merits, INDEPENDENT OF THE PRAISE OR CENSURE OF CRITICS—in full confidence that all who admire the spiritually true, and an effort to raise the fallen, will give to it a soul-welcome into the great field of Humanity.

Copies of the above sent by mail, (postage paid,) on receipt of the retail price.

LEGEND.—The mountain forests of Pastoria are inhabited, it is said, by Pixies, Sprites and Elves, who, like the Phantom Dancers of Germany, delight to entrap travelers into their realms and torment them with their mischievous antics. Having the power of transferring the spirit, they often, in their malicious gambols, give life to the newly dead. Statues, rocks and trees are seen fantastically moving in the forest, but it is only during the DAY they retain their fictitious existence; at the approach of NIGHT they resume their immobility.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The steamship Canadian, from Liverpool on the 28th ult., and bringing four days' later news from Europe, arrived at Portland about 10½ o'clock last night. A telegraphic summary of the news reached us at too late an hour to admit of comment.

The Trinity Church bill occupied the attention of the Senate on Monday night, until a very late hour, and, finally, Mr. BROOKS' substitute was passed, by 19 against 12. This bill is one which provides that half the Wardens and Vestrymen shall be chosen by Trinity Church, and half by delegates elected by the Vestries of the several Protestant Episcopal Churches other than those belonging to Trinity, &c. The New-York Charter bill was yesterday reported complete. The joint resolutions respecting the removal of obstructions to the navigation of the Harlem River, was passed. The resolutions originated in the Assembly, and have already passed that body. The special order in both Houses was the election of a Regent of the University, and a Superintendent of Public Instruction. ISAAC PARKS, of Oneida, was selected for the former, and HENRY H. VAN DYCK, of Montgomery, for the latter. A statement of the votes cast will be found elsewhere.

We are glad to see that the Legislature has taken one step towards restoring navigation through the Harlem River, and thus enabling vessels to pass from the Hudson to the East River and the Sound, without making the extensive detour of the Island and incurring the expense of pilotage through Hell Gate. A joint resolution has passed both branches of the Legislature, calling upon Congress to make an appropriation for a work of so much importance to the interests of commerce, and instructing our Representatives to do whatever may lie in their power towards securing it. The Harbor Commissioners, in a portion of their report, to which the TIMES has once or twice already drawn attention, has discussed this matter at length and shown its importance and feasibility. We understand that the expense will not exceed $100,000, and it would certainly be worth far more than that sum every year to the commerce of the river and the Eastern States.

The surveying corps selected by the Hondnras Railroad Company, for the location of their proposed line, leaves this port on Saturday. A steamer has been chartered for their accommodation, and for the transportation of instruments, apparatus and supplies. At the head is Mr. JOHN C. FRAUTWINE, of Philadelphia. Mr. FRAUTWINE has very thorough experience of the Isthmus, having been associated with Col. TOTTEN in the location of the Panama Railroad; and, besides superintending the construction of the Canal between Carthagena and the Magdalena River, in New-Granada, having surveyed a portion of the proposed Atrato Canal. He will be aided by three assistants, supervising the labor on as many divisions, into which the work has been divided. There has been a decided preference, we understand, for service in the middle or highland division, as less liable to tropical fevers. The amount appropriated for the enrvey and at the disposal of the Surveyor-in-Chief, is $600,000. The route, it will be remembered, is that examined by Mr. E. G. SQUIER, in 1853. The entire length is 160 miles, over elevations which many regard as impracticable. Perhaps that was the main reason why Mr. SQUIER found no encouragement for his project in this country. In England, however, he has been more successful. A powerful Company, of which Mr. WILLIAM J. BROWN, of Liverpool, is the President, and the Governor of the Bank of England among the Directors, has undertaken the enterprise, and will, no doubt, push it to completion. Thirteen hundred miles of the distance between New-York and San Francisco by the Panama ronte, will thus be saved. The employment of American engineers to locate the road is an indication that, notwithstanding the enterprise is to be effected by British capital, and controlled by British merchants, it will be conducted upon no narrow or exclusive principles. It nevertheless adds another argument for nearer routes to the Pacific under American auspices.

Our Southern friends have a hard time of it in their attempts to keep all the objectionable works in their index expurgatorius out of their territory. Do what they will, now and then an abolition missile will find its way among them. A great excitement was recently caused in Pedee, S. C., by a bookseller, who sold a volume entitled Lives of Eminent Methodist Ministers, but which proved on examination, to contain the biographies of HENRY WARD BEECHER, FRED. DOUGLASS, and WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON. The consternation and indignation which the discovery created may very easily be imagined.

The publishers of the deceitful book were a firm in Auburn, in this State, who have sent a letter to the South Carolina Times, explaining the cause of the strange discrepancy between the title and the contents of the book. It seems that the covers were put upon the wrong books, and thus those fearful Abolition agitators—BEECHER, DOUGLAS and GARRISON—were smuggled into the very heart of South Carolina as eminent Methodist Ministers. We do not wonder that the people of Peedee thought that this was adding injury to insult. The only safety for the South is to exclude all printed matter that comes to them from anywhere north of the Potomac.

The Legislature of Massachusetts have passed a law making the testimony of an atheist a legal tender in the courts of that State, and the congregation of Rev. THEODORE PARKER have increased his salary from $1,600 to $2,500, giving him at the same time a six months' leave of absence to travel for his health.

The Charter Election of St. Louis took place yesterday, and incomplete returns indicate the success of the entire Emancipation ticket. Mr. WINSER, for Mayor, has probably about 1,500 majority, many of the Americans having voted for him.

To-day being the 9th day of the month Nison, according to the Hebrew calendar, the celebration of the Jewish feast of Passover commences to-night. The observance continues through seven days. On the first and last days secular business is entirely suspended. Every night services are held in the different synagogues. The next Jewish fast is that of Pentecost, which comes in June next.

The telegraph brings us a confirmation of the story of Indian murders in Iowa, and also intelligence of still further outrages of the same nature. It is now reported that fifteen white settlers are missing from Sperit Lake, near the Minnesota boundary, having been murdered or carried into captivity by the SIOUX.

Conversation at the St. Charles saloon, last evening, turned on the rumor that the Cabinet is deliberating about the appointment of a Minister to Nicaragua. Col. WHEELER, the late Minister there, Major MCMICKEN, and one or two others, are applicants for the place. The only perplexity of the Government, they say, is whether a Minister shall be accredited to WALKER, RIVAS, or who? Apropos of this news, a telegraphic dispatch, sent by General CASS to the leading fillibusters in this City, on the occasion of a large meeting held at National Hall, in Canal-street on the evening of May 10, 1856, to express sympathy for WALKER, was posted yesterday on the St. Charles bulletin; by virtue of this it is claimed that Secretary CASS is committed to the fillibuster movement, and that he will have a controlling voice in the Cabinet in the appointment of a Minister to Nicaragua. The dispatch alluded to reads as follows:

Special telegraphic dispatch to Messrs. Rynders, Dean, Oakesmith, Clancy and Phillips:

WASHINGTON, May 7, 1856.

It is not possible for me to attend your meeting, though I sincerely hope that the movement of General WALKER will be successful.

I think the best interests of this country, of that country and of the world require it. It has all of my best wishes. LEWIS CASS.

The Captain (DUNN) and first mate (WILLIAM DAVIS) of the Liverpool packet-ship De Witt Clinton, were arrested yesterday, charged with such cruel treatment to a young lad, (GEORGE KEITH,) who was found secreted on board, as to cripple him for life. The examination of the accused parties is set down for to-day, before U. S. Commissioner MORTON. Cruelty on shipboard is coming to be an exceedingly common charge. Officers complain that trivial punishment and necessary severity is constantly exaggerated by sailors and passengers, to their great annoyance. But the far greater risk is that unfriended sailors and moneyless emigrants will suffer at the hands of men in authority and who have wealth and influence to shield them from just punishment.

Capt. BALLSTINE, of the brig Amelia Protolongo, has been arrested, charged with having smuggled a large quantity of miscellaneous merchandise on board his vessel in his recent voyage to this port. The first mate of the vessel, GIACOMO BRIGALONO, charged with being implicated with the captain, has made his escape. The captain was held to bail in the sum of $3,000 to answer the charge.

SAMUEL SHEPHARD, third mate of the Samuel Russell, has instituted legal proceedings to recover salvage upon the schooner Eclipse. The Eclipse was abandoned by her crew last winter off the coast of Virginia. To the Captain and first and second mates of the Samuel Russell a large amount of salvage has been paid. The third mate contests the payment of the salvage on the ground that he brought the vessel to port. The Eclipse and her cargo are estimated at $86,000.

Is Corporation Councilor BUSTEED a citizen, or not? When, in the Superior Court, yesterday, the case of HEBARD vs. DOCTOR TOWNSEND was brought up, it was urged by the defendant that Mr. BUSTEED, the attorney of the plaintiff, was not, at the time of commencing the suit, a citizen of the United States, and therefore that the complaint should be dismissed. His Honor decided that as Mr. BUSTEED had a license from the Supreme Court to practice, he was at least an officer de facto, and any motion to invalidate that license must be made to the Court granting it. He therefore denied the motion.

The Ten Governors became quite indignant, yesterday, as they thought over the late report of the Commissioners of Emigration to the Legislature, in which the Commissioners' indebtedness to the Ten Governors is not treated like a bona fide debt at all. The Governors unanimously resolved to pray the Legislature to choke off the Commissioners' supply that the new Quarantine act furnishes, unless they confess their debt, and promise fairly.

The Historical Society held a regular meeting last night, at which, after the transaction of the ordinary preliminary business, papers were read by Dr. HORACE GREEN on the Battle of Bunker's Hill, and by Dr. BACON on the nomenclature of the counties of the State of New-York.

At the Farmers' Club on Monday, Mr. WRAY, who seems to have had experience in the cultivation of the Sorghum, made some interesting observations, to the effect that the plant might easily be made to grow in this country, and even in Canada, so as to supplant the sugar-cane.

It is understood that it was not Hon. WILLIAM WRIGHT, of Newark, who gave the commission to our artists for the four great pictures, as we announced, but WILLIAM P. WRIGHT, a New-York merchant residing in Hoboken.

The Surrogate gave an important decision yesterday, in the matter of the estate of the late WILLIAM TERRILL. The question involved is one upon which no decision has heretofore been given.

A Mrs. ALLEN, from Oswego, had her pocket picked of $325 yesterday afternoon by a Bowery thief, at the corner of Fulton-street and Broadway.

The Jersey City Democratic Convention last evening nominated for Mayor—SAMUEL WESCOTT; for Water Commissioners—WM. PEARSALL, CHAS. FINK; and for School Superintendent—A. S. JEWELL.

The Chinese Question.

The most recent and trustworthy accounts which we have received from Washington seem to justify a hope that the Administration may, after all, be disposed to deal with the Chinese question as its importance deserves. The traditional bugbear of an "entangling alliance" was at first evoked to deter Mr. BUCHANAN from meeting the advances of Lord NAPIER and Count SARTIGES in the spirit in which we have no reason to doubt that they were made; and an impression became very prevalent in the community that our commercial interests in China were to be sacrificed to the Fetichism of party.

We are glad to be allowed to anticipate a speedy dissipation of this impression by such action on the part of our Government as shall meet the exigency of the occasion without compromising the public peace, and even without disturbing the ghost of one antiquated prejudice. For the present condition of the China question must speedily resolve itself into issues of vital importance to the trade of the United States with the Celestial Empire.

It is stated, and with truth, that the actual relations of the Chinese authorities with the American Commissioner and the commander of our naval forces are perfectly amicable; and it is also alleged, but with less reason, that the illustrious YEH has manifested such sincere regret for the "little accident" which provoked the destruction of the Barrier Forts as should amply satisfy even an exacting amour propre, and profoundly convince us of the good-will with which we are regarded by the cosmopolitan and agreeable populations of the Central Flowery Land.

And it is accordingly assumed that, whatever may be the upshot of the existing differences between the Anglo-French Allies and the Chinese, we at least cannot fail to preserve our present relations, and to extend our actual intercourse with the latter people, if not at the expense of the European powers, yet at least pari passu with them, in all time to come. This assumption is not, however, well founded. For, in the first place, it must be remembered that the Chinese Government has never shown the least disposition to relax the severity of its system in its dealings with foreigners. It was not the Chinese but the English Government which secured to America and to the other commercial nations of Christendom, the concessions which have contributed so materially to the recent expansion of the trade between China and the "outer barbarians." These concessions were wrung from the Imperial Government by the arms of England, and it is to the good sense and magnanimity of England, and not at all to the liberality or good will of China, that we ourselves are indebted for the most important privileges which we at present enjoy in that part of the world. It is a fact notorious to all persons who have been connected with the Chinese trade that the treaty stipulations on which these privileges rest, have been continually and insolently violated by the Chinese authorities; and that not English vessels and English subjects alone, but our own ships and our own citizens have been repeatedly subjected, by the functionaries who represent the brother of the Sun and Moon, to treatment which indicates that the imperial kinsman of those luminaries has not yet learned to recognize the inherence of anything so respectable as a "right" in the quality of beings so degraded as to have been condemned to draw the breath of life in regions unblest by his beneficent sway. Here is the true gist of the actual difficulty between England and China; and whatever may have been the merits of that particular quarrel about the lorcha Arrow, which led to the breaking out of hostilities in Canton River, the question to be finally decided by the sword or by the pen is simply this: whether the Chinese Government is or is not prepared to carry out the provisions of the Treaty with England, in a spirit of common fairness and justice, and to treat foreign nations admitted to intercourse with her subjects in a manner suitable to their character and their rank. The delicate distinctions which it may suit the purpose of YEH just at this moment to draw between the English and the American variety of the "foreign devil," do not exist either in the imperial or in the popular Chinese mind; and a large and statesmanlike policy on our part will take cognizance of this truth, and be governed by it in approaching the scene of conflict.

Nor, in the second place, should it be forgotten that, if England and France shall succeed, (as we cannot doubt they will,) in bringing the Chinese Government to reason and respect, it may possibly occur to the representatives of these Powers that the Americans, who refused to cooperate in any way with them in bringing about so desirable a result, can advance no good claim to a participation in its profitable fruits. This consideration embodies itself naturally in a familiar proverb, which our readers will readily call to mind, and it certainly should not be lost sight of by our Government. Even if England and France should eventually play the magnanimous on this point, a nice sense of national honor would, of course, prevent us from accepting any boon at their hands! We are not called upon to combine our naval forces with those of the Allied Powers in a positively hostile demonstration against the Chinese, but simply to lend the influence of our flag to such an array as shall convince the most obstinately incredulous and conceited Mandarin of all his most incredulous and conceited class, that the foreign nations are one, at least in the sentiment of self-respect—and that the time has come when they must be treated with decency and with equity, if not with good sense and generosity.

When the Czars of Muscovy first entered the "family of nations," they conceived themselves entitled to treat the envoys of foreign powers as immeasurably inferior to themselves in dignity; and it is recorded that upon one occasion, IVAN the Terrible, or DEMETRIUS the Indomitable, or some other bearded predecessor of the house of Romanoff, ordered the hat of the Venetian Ambassador to be nailed into his brain, because he had omitted to remove it in the august presence. Thereupon the Envoy of England instantly clapped his own beaver upon his own head, and defied a repetition of the outrage.

The act hides a moral for present use, and we trust that it may not be thrown away upon our patriotic Foreign Secretary. Let him send to China a Minister who will appreciate the gravity of the interests at issue, and invest him with discretionary power to maintain American honor and American rights, in the most peaceable but also in the most positive way possible. And if our naval force in the Chinese waters is to be increased, let it be increased by vessels which shall be of sufficiently light draught to appear within range of the banks of the rivers up which they are to parade—and to follow the pirates, whom they will have abundant occasion to visit, into the creeks and inlets of their refuge.

If we are to watch the Chinese quarrel, and to wait for events, and to guard our own interests, let it be understood that the best guarantees we can have against an unnecessary war, and the surest preservatives of a profitable peace with the Celestial Empire, are a competent and far-sighted Minister, and a thoroughly efficient squadron of swift, shallow-draught steamers.

THE CENTRAL PARK.—A bill for the improvement of the Central Park was passed by the State Assembly last week, and is now in the hands of the Senate Committee on Cities and Villages, waiting to be reported, when, we can hardly doubt, it will pass that body and become a law. The question of the Park is no longer an open one; the people of this Metropolis, after many years' discussion of the matter, have decided that it was necessary for the public health and the future prosperity of the City. A very large sum of money has already been expended for the Park, property in its neighborhood has been assessed heavily for the cost of it, but the City is deprived of all the advantages that might result from it, for the lack of the appropriation required to carry on the necessary improvements. A whole year has already been lost, and, unless the bill before the Senate should become a law, another year will be wasted, the holders of property in the neighborhood of the Park will be prevented from building and reaping the advantages which it promises, and the grounds appropriated for the Park will become a nuisance and a resort of vagabonds, instead of an ornament and a blessing to the City. As it is now the time of year when trees must be planted and shrubbery attended to, it is of great importance that the work of improvement should be commenced at once, and our representatives in the Senate should see that the bill is passed before the session closes.

Kansas Prospects.

We perceive that Gen. J. H. LANE has again made his appearance in Kansas, and delivered a public speech at Lawrence. What is the particular purpose of his reappearance just at this time, we are not aware. It has never been understood that he had any permanent interests in the Territory, or any other professional pursuits there, except, possibly, the pursuit of office and the profession of a reckless agitator. His services were considered somewhat valuable by the Free-State men, just at the moment when they were compelled to take up arms in self-defence against the marauders from Missouri,—but he has never enjoyed the confidence of any considerable portion of the inhabitants, and has never commanded their respect by his personal character or practical wisdom. He is universally regarded as a rash, reckless, unprincipled adventurer, useful in a physical contest from his courage and military experience, but in times of peace much more formidable to the friends than to the foes of order and the general good. At the very onset of the Free-State movement in Kansas, our correspondent reported the distrust that was felt of his motives and his aims, and he has never, from that day to this, enjoyed the confidence of the people of the Territory.

His appearance on the scene of action just at the present moment, and under the circumstances which attended his advent, bode no good. It cannot fail to prove injurious and unwelcome to all but the zealots of faction, and the kindred spirits whose element is agitation, and whose only chances of personal promotion lie in the direction of disorder and strife. Taken in connection with the attitude of renewed resistance to the authorities which the Free State men are assuming—the counsels from ardent political leaders and Presses in the Northern and Eastern States, exhorting them to decline all participation in the election, and to set at defiance the Territorial authorities, and the indication, on the other side, of the purpose of the Pro-Slavery faction to take advantage of these circumstances, and push their own projects to speedy consummation—it cannot fail to have a disastrous effect upon the condition and prospects of Kansas. One of the worst results that is likely to flow from the position affairs are assuming, is that the stream of emigration will be checked and the real Free-State strength of the Territory correspondingly weakened. This emigration is now described as very heavy. A Kansas correspondent of the Chicago Democratic Press says that "the emigration to California did not exceed it." Nothing can be more certain than the effect of this influx upon the political character and institutions of the Territory. It is natural enough that the ultra Pro-Slavery faction should be anxious to revive old contests and create new alarms, in order to turn back a tide of population which, if suffered to go on, must inevitably sweep them before it. But nothing but the most extreme selfish personal ambition,—acting in flagrant disregard of the public good, can explain the willingness of any portion of the Free-State population to second these endeavors and give them a prospect of success.

The Recorder's Charge.

Recorder SMITH'S charge to the Grand Jury, delivered yesterday, is a somewhat remarkable document. Its most prominent feature is a vehement assault upon the character and efficiency of the City Police. It charges to its mismanagement, the alleged increase of crime in this City, and the impunity which attends it. The Recorder asserts that he has been repeatedly unable to procure the service of warrants which he has himself issued against offenders and sent to the Police Stations of the City. Such a statement from such a source demands attention. If it be true, the parties guilty of the neglect charged, should be punished. The Recorder is a member of the Police Commission, which has entire jurisdiction over the Police Department:—and if such flagrant violations of duty on the part of Police officers have occurred, he should have lost no time in bringing them before that Board for inquiry and punishment. Whether he has done so in any case, or not, we are not aware. If he has not, we cannot consider him as having done his whole duty in the premises. If he has, he should inform the public by what agencies and influences the perpetrators of these offences have escaped punishment, at the hands of the only body which can administer it.

The Recorder throws out the broadest and most unmistakable intimations that parties in high authority have repeatedly been guilty of tampering with the administration of justice—that actors in recent bloody election riots have been screened from punishment—and that the Grand Jury is likely to be "tampered with," if it attempts to investigate complaints made against the ticket-swindlers, whose nefarious operations have become so regular, systematic and extensive. The Recorder adds that he "has strong reasons for making this latter suggestion;"—but what those reasons are he does not state. We are very glad that he has drawn the attention of the Grand Jury to this subject,—though, unless they act upon a different view of the existing laws from that which he himself is understood to hold, we do not see how any practical results can be expected from it. In the TIMES of the 16th of March we had occasion to report a complaint made under oath before the Recorder, by a person who had been defrauded out of several hundred dollars in the most barefaced manner by one of these ticket-swindlers:—but the Recorder, instead of entertaining the complaint, expressed the opinion that these villainies could only be suppressed by a new act of the Legislature. We hope that the Grand Jury, under his instructions, will find some mode of taking more speedy and effective action.

Zeal on behalf of good order, and against crime, is so laudable and so useful—as well as so rare—a public virtue, that we are always reluctant to cast suspicion upon any exhibition of it. Recorder SMITH is a man of ability, and of such lofty devotion to the public good, that he would undoubtedly do his whole duty under any circumstances. But it is notorious in political circles that ever since the last election, his dominant passion has been hatred of Mayor WOOD:—and it is by no means impossible that to this sentiment the public may owe something of his present lively and laudable interest in the conduct of the Police Department. It will not do, however, to look a gift-horse too closely in the mouth:—and we presume the public at large will be too glad to welcome any reform in any department of our radically vicious and imbecile City Government, to scrutinize very minutely the motives of those by whom it may be brought about.

Our Relations with New-Granada.

Mr. MORSE having failed in his New-Granadian mission, what shall be done? The Government of Bogota will not cut its territory in two to oblige the Panama Railroad Company. Our invitation couched in the old formula, divide et impera, doesn't suit. There will be no tract twenty-four miles wide governed by American pro-consuls, under martial law; there will be no miniature edition of the East India Company, a mercantile association endowed with the power of misgoverning two or three races, from a counting-house thousands of miles away. We shall have simply a commercial corporation, chartered by New-Granada with the largest liberties ever conceded in like circumstances to a foreign company. The license to construct the road was given them; they were given 262,000 acres of land, in addition to the Island of Manzanilla, now occupied by the city of Aspinwall. The right of way through the private property of the Isthmus was acquired at a price merely nominal. The cost of a good dinner secured the Islands in the Bay of Panama. Altogether the bargain abounded with advantages, palpable and measureless; while the drawbacks were equally obvious. The character of the population upon the Isthmus was well known. Their predatory habits had been exemplified upon half the luggage carried from steamer to steamer on the backs of mules. Their disposition to quarrel and fight riotously and desperately had ample development before a rail of the road was laid; for in 1851 one of the most serious conflicts remembered on the Isthmus took place among the boatmen on the Atlantic side, in which several steamship passengers lost their lives. It was generally believed at the time that the émeute was the first act of an intended onslaught upon the treasure; and yet neither the Steamship Company nor this Government addressed themselves to the Government of New-Granada on the subject. To this vicious population the Company has added largely by its importations of laborers, who upon discharge were left in idleness and poverty. There is no feature in the recent business that they ought not to have been fully prepared for; that did not constitute one of original risks of the enterprise. The interference of this Government specifically in their favor, rather than on behalf of individuals or their survivors injured in the riot, was improper and injudicious. That it has not prospered is a matter of no regret. But what shall be done next?

Send out a new envoy with new instructions. Let him admit that, as an adopted and perhaps spoiled child of that republic, the Panama Company must be left to abide such treatment as its position subjects it to. But American citizens passing through the State must be protected against wanton outrage, violence, and plunder; and such as have suffered must be indemnified by the Government of New-Granada against its criminal inefficiency. This ground of application, unmistakably just as it certainly is, should be pressed firmly and persistently until perfect satisfaction and security are conceded. Less will be derogatory to our Government. More will be an unwarrantable interference with domestic concerns of theirs.

An Election Contrast.

The student of English politics might gain greater profit from reading a file of late English papers than could be derived from a half dozen volumes of historical narrative. He might find in one number, even, of the leading London journal sufficient matter to give him a pretty clear insight into the British representative system. Parliament has been dissolved before its legal term of existence had expired, and the whole country is alive with preparations for a general election, preparatory to the creation of a new House of Commons. The excitement is similar to what takes place here on the occasion of a Presidential election, and the object aimed at is very nearly the same: to take the political sense of the people. But there could not be a stronger contrast than is offered by the different methods pursued in the two countries. As soon as the Prime Minister had signified his intention to dissolve Parliament and appeal to the country, a general scattering took place, and the papers were filled with addresses from the old members to their constituents, explaining their past votes, and giving promises of what they intended to do if again elected. Men left their places and hurried to the boroughs, towns and counties they represented, to meet their constituents face to face, to talk to them of the state of the country, to defend themselves, or arraign the ministers, as the circumstances required. It is a bold, open, and actual representative system, and as unlike our cancus system as possible. The candidate offers himself to the people, or is invited openly by them to be a candidate, avows his principles, tells what he means to do in the event of his election, and asks for their support. The meeting is held in the open air in a public place, and if they approve of him they agree to give him their votes; a rival candidate appears, there is a show of hands in his favor, and a poll is demanded to decide which candidate has the largest number of supporters. The voting takes place in the open air, and each voter calls out the name of the candidate whom he desires should be his representative. Fraudulent voting, therefore, is impossible, and ballot-stuffing an unmeaning phrase. Wire-pulling and caucusing are equally out of the question, and the voters have the satisfaction of seeing, and knowing personally, the man to whom they give their suffrages. All is fair, open, and above-board, in appearance, at least, at an English election; but, in reality, excepting in the large towns, there is very little, if any, more purity at the polls than at our own Congressional elections. The people vote openly, but they are [illegible] paid secretly; the great [illegible] give their orders to their tenants, [illegible] buy up whole constituencies, and the owners of pocket-boroughs nominate whom they please for representatives.

But, with all the inequalities, the corruptions, and the family influences of the English system, we cannot deny that the method of choosing their representatives is infinitely preferable to our own manner of doing the same thing by secret and irresponsible managers. The people here are informed by an advertisement in the papers that a man has been nominated to represent them in Congress whose name even they never before heard, and of whose character and principles they are equally ignorant. They know nothing, even of the men who nominated him; their wishes were never consulted, and they vote for him by secret ballot, blindly. The whole process is conducted in the dark, and at last, when the result is announced, there are whispers, and even open charges, and more than suspicions, that the election was carried by some unscrupulous rascal depositing a handful of ballots in one of the boxes; and it is not known but that hundreds of men have put in votes who had no legal right to exercise the privilege.

The hustings and open voting would do much towards elevating the character of Congress; but nothing would be more instrumental towards insuring greater ability in our representatives than the adoption of the English method of the candidate offering himself to the people, instead of leaving his selection to a self-appointed and irresponsible caucus, as is now generally done.

NOT TOO OLD TO LEARN—HOPES OF THE FANCY STOCK-JOBBER'S ORGAN.—We are delighted to perceive symptoms that the attention we have recently bestowed upon the "historian of Parker Vein" has not been wasted. Old, ricketty and dilapidated as it is, the Herald seems still susceptible of repentance. Our moral instructions, with the experiments and illustrations which accompanied them, have created something like a "soul under the ribs of death,"—or at all events led to spasmodic and galvanic motions like those which Bishop HUGHES succeeded in producing by his celebrated philosophical experiments in 1844, and which look for the moment very much like life.

It seems that somebody in Auburn has been getting up a joint-stock Emigration scheme for Kansas, and issued scrip representing shares in it. Being desirous of securing the services of the Herald as "historian" of the concern, and apparently understanding perfectly how they were to be obtained, they forwarded to "JAMES GORDON BENNETT, Editor and Proprietor," a bundle of the scrip: but he has learned a lesson from the developments of the TIMES in regard to fancy-stock speculations, and is now too old a bird to be caught by such chaff. Disgusted apparently by the recollections of his own experience as the "historian" of Parker Vein, Potosi Lead, and kindred schemes, he thus approaches the confessional:—hums him:

"From the past experience of the country in Lake Superior copper-mining companies, California gold-mining companies, Parker Vein coal-mining companies, Potosi Lead-mining companies, and various land speculating companies, the chances are that in the end it will prove to be a swindle, a humbug, a bubble, or a failure."

This looks promising. We are encouraged in our missionary efforts, and are stimulated to renewed diligence in their prosecution. Nothing affords a greater stimulus to the discharge of duty than such evidences of success. In this instance we confess they surpass our most sanguine expectations. The Herald seemed at the outset as hopeless a case as a Potter's field of dead men's bones,—but the result proves the truth of the remark of Dr. WATTS, that "While the lamp holds out to burn,

The vilest sinner may return."

We shall continue our labors with the "historian" of fancy stock swindling,—and when we have reason to think that his reform is complete, we shall turn our attention to the cannibals of the Marquesas Islands.

CITY RAILROADS—NECESSITY FOR MORE COMPETITION.—We observe that a bill is pending in the Legislature to authorize the construction of a railroad through University-place, Greene-street and West Broadway, so as to afford a new avenue of travel and relieve Broadway. The plan commends itself to favor,—but its execution should be postponed until these streets have been widened, for they are now too narrow to accommodate the railroad and the carriages that must pass through them at the same time. That the true way of relieving Broadway from the excessive traffic which it is now made to sustain, is to open parallel streets and provide them with the means of doing part of it, we have never had any doubt.

Another cogent reason for constructing this new railroad may be found in the obstinate refusal of the roads already built to furnish proper accommodations for the public which is dependent upon them. In open defiance of the obligations which their enjoyment of such a monopoly should impose upon them, they persist in subjecting those who must ride with them or not at all, to the most serious and intolerable inconvenience. It is their duty to furnish seats for all who ride, and cars enough to accommodate all who wish to ride:—yet there is a very considerable part of every day when no one can ride in any of the City cars without the utmost discomfort.
